TWO DROWNED AT WARE.

Boy and Girl Go Through Thin Ice While Skating.

HEROIC ATTEMPT AT RESCUE FAILS.

And Man Nearly Loses Life in the Effort. Bodies Recovered, But Too Late.

There was a sad drowning accident in Ware Monday afternoon, the victims being Alfred Legault, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Legault of Pleasant street, and Gladys Bouchard, 14, daughter of Mrs. Nellie Vegeau, at present in Canada.

The boy and girl were skating on the brook near the Ware pumping station and when about half way across they were seen to break through the ice by some boys, who were playing in a yard nearby. They ran for help and Cornelius Fitzgerald, the engineer of the water department, ran from the pumping station to the scene, taking a piece of rope with him. He threw this to the two children, who were struggling in the water, but they were unable to grasp it. Mr. Fitzgerald went on to the ice in order to bring the rope nearer to the children, but the ice was not strong enough to hold him and he was thrown into the water with the children, whom he attempted to throw on to the ice, but it was impossible as the ice kept breaking. His cries were heard by others and Chief of Police Buckley and P. O. L'Heureux soon reached the scene and with the aid of a long ladder succeeded in pulling Fitzgerald out. He was in a serious condition and was taken to Mr. Buckley's house and attended by Dr. D. M. Ryan.

Chief Buckley sent to the town hall for the grappling irons and started to drag for the bodies of the unfortunate children. After about 15 minutes' work he succeeded in bringing to the surface the body of Gladys Bouchard. After some little time the body of the boy was brought up and the two bodies were brought to the home of George H. Stone, where Dr. Pearson worked hard over them to rouse a spark of life, but without success.

The funerals were held Wednesday. That of Gladys Bouchard was held from Mt. Carmel church at 8 o'clock and that of Alfred Legault at 9.30 in the same church.

Missing Samples Recovered.

Had Been Appropriated by Bystander While Owner Took Drink.

Joseph Petravicz, who conducts a tailor shop in Thorndike, dropped into a saloon to take a drink late Saturday and set his case of samples down while making the call. When he started to go the samples were missing. A little sleuthing made it apparent that John Guski of Bondsville had them in his possession, and a warrant was issued. Guski was in the district court Monday morning charged with larceny. He at first denied that he had the case of samples, but when it was found at his house claimed that they were taken away by another man, for whom he was keeping them. The story did not satisfy Judge Kenefick, and Guski was fined $20, which he paid.

Gas Stove Explosion.

Windows Broken in House on Pine Street Monday Afternoon.

There was a gas stove explosion in the home of John Smith on Pine street Monday afternoon, but fortunately no one was hurt. The cause was an accumulation of gas in the oven of the stove unknown to Mrs. Smith. When she attempted to light the stove in the afternoon there was a forceful explosion and the door of the stove was blown completely off. It struck Mrs. Smith on the legs as she stood squarely in front of the stove; but she miraculously escaped any injury whatever. Several panes of glass in the room were broken by the shock.

Fixing For a Grand Spill.

Three Rivers Man Removes Nut From Axle of Heavy Wagon.

Associate Justice David F. Dillon presided in the district court Tuesday and considered the case of Joseph Falt of Three Rivers, who had removed and thrown away the nut from an axle of a heavy team wagon belonging to Charles P. Haynes. Falt was first charged with larceny, but it did not appear that he hoped to profit by the removal, but rather to cause a grand spill when the wagon was put in use. The larceny charge was dismissed and one of malicious mischief made, on which he was found guilty and fined $5.

Church Organ Free of Debt.

Ladies of Congregational Society Make Last Payment Yesterday.

The members of the Ladies' Society of the Congregational church are congratulating themselves on making yesterday the payment which freed the organ from the debt, which the ladies some time ago assumed.

The annual meeting of the society was held Wednesday, and the treasurer's report was extremely gratifying, showing the total receipts of the year to have been $1110; of this $381.40 was raised by the "Church Calendar" method, the balance coming from gifts, receipts from socials, suppers, lunch counter at the Palmer Fair, etc. The total expenditures were $726.47, leaving a balance of $383.53, and the ladies voted to use $350 of this in making the final payment on the church organ. When the new church was built the Ladies' Society assumed the task of providing an organ. A contract was made with Hall & Co. of New Haven, Ct., for an instrument to cost $2400. The piping for water connection for the motor and interest on borrowed money brought the total expenditure for the organ up to $2456. There was $750 insurance on the old, and this was given to the ladies toward the new one. A fund previously started for the purchase of a new instrument had accumulated $615, and the remainder has been raised by the Ladies' Society in various ways during the last two and a half years.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Abbie M. Wing; social vice presidents, Mrs. F. H. Hart and Mrs. W. H. Laird; foreign missionary vice president, Mrs. F. S. Brewer; home missionary vice president, Mrs. D. L. Bodfish; secretary, Mrs. Theodore Norman; treasurer, Miss Alice Gager.

New Principal For Wilbraham Academy.

At a meeting of the trustees of Wesleyan Academy at Wilbraham held Saturday in Springfield, Gaylord W. Douglass of Winchendon was elected principal to succeed Charles E. Davis. Committees were appointed to revise the curriculum and remodel the buildings of the school plant. This was the first formal action that has been taken toward the reorganization of the school since March, at which time it was announced by the trustees that they intended to change the character of the school from a co-educational institution, such as it had been since its founding, to a high grade school for boys. The school has been closed during the present school year. Another meeting of the trustees will be held in about two months to pass upon the reports of the committees which have in charge the remodeling of buildings and the new curriculum and also to pass upon the budget for the faculty and equipment.

She claims that the cow was lawfully on the Warren road in Palmer on May 21, 1911, when a motorcycle ridden by a servant of Mr. Hathaway came along at a great speed and ran into the cow, causing the broken leg among other serious injuries. Thomas W. Kenefick is for the plaintiff.

Baptist Church Officers.

Annual Meeting, Social and Supper. Financial Condition Good.

The annual meeting of the Second Baptist church was held Tuesday evening. Preceding the meeting there was a social hour from 4 to 6 in the church parlors, followed at 6 by a supper to which about 75 sat down.

The report of the treasurer showed the society to be in good financial condition. All bills are paid and there is $190 in the treasury. It was announced that the mortgage on the church property had been reduced to $4991, and that the church had in stocks, bonds and trust funds $4500, the income from which will very nearly pay the interest on the debt. It was voted to increase the salary of the pastor from $900 to $1000.

Loses Slaughtering License.

Wilbraham Man Convicted of Several Violations of the Law.

Max Elpert of Wilbraham was in the district court yesterday morning charged with violations of the slaughtering laws. It was charged that he had slaughtered three calves without the inspector's presence, as required by law. The statutes require an inspector to be present at the killing in order to make sure that the animal is not diseased; otherwise parts of a well animal might be substituted for those of one diseased and the inspector deceived if he did not see the animal killed, resulting in the sale of diseased meat. He was found guilty and fined $50, which he paid. In addition he loses his license to slaughter. On a charge of having unsupervised meat in his possession, the case was continued

A Blundering Matchmaker

By Louise J. Strong

Erma peeped through the curtain and watched the automobile out of sight; then she began to pack in a fever of haste. Her eyes gleamed with repressed tears and her cheeks burned. A short time ago Mr. Edwin Morrill had been so devoted to her that it had taken all her skill to prevent a declaration from him. She had not been quite sure of herself, and wanted a little more time; but his intentions and desires had been plain. She had believed him sincere, yet with the advent of pretty, piquant Cousin Bessie, he had transferred his attentions to her. And now Erma had suddenly discovered that the handsome trifter was more to her than she had dreamed any man could be.

"But, thank heaven, he doesn't know that!" she breathed with hot face. "He shall never suspect it. I will go home at once—but first, I'll write to Billy as I promised I would if I ever changed my mind. I can't say that I care for him, but he knows all about that, and we'll be married as soon as we can arrange it—I'm determined to be married before Ed—they are."

She wrote her letter, telling herself that she was an engaged girl the moment it was finished, for Billy could be depended upon to jump at the chance; then, in traveling attire she descended and asked to be sent to the station.

"Why, you're to stay another month!" Grandpa Morrill cried in astonishment.

"Oh, I really must go, Grandpa," she declared, adding coyly, "I will not have any too much time to get ready for my marriage in September."

"Your marriage!" Grandpa shouted. "You engaged all this time and never hint it. I consider that you have treated us very badly, Miss!"

"I beg your pardon, Grandpa," Erma apologized, "but as you are not acquainted with Billy there seemed no necessity for me to mention it."

Grandpa would be sure to repeat the conversation, and that would show Mr. Edwin that she had been merely tion you must hear—so much is my due."

"Nothing is your due from me!" "I hope you will think differently," he replied gently. "Come, be good enough to go back with me."

People were listening with broad smiles. "You are making me ridiculous," she snapped.

"Come, then, else I shall stay until you are willing to go with me." He dropped into the chair beside her.

There was a quiver of the train and Erma bounced up and dashed out, conscious that the spectators were grinning and chuckling over her defeat. Blazing with indignation, she sat bolt upright, with averted face.

He had, virtually, kidnapped her, compelled her to accompany him, but he could not compel her to accept his explanation, or excuse. She braced herself to meet it with mocking indifference, and the gay announcement of her coming marriage with Billy.

But, instead of plea, or explanation, Edwin maintained an utter silence, giving his undivided attention to getting over the ground as swiftly as the law allowed; and Erma was in a very bewildered state of mind when they finally entered the hall.

Grandpa met her with such evident embarrassment that she instantly assumed that it was his scheme as a sort of punishment to her; while Bessie regarded her with an amusement that, under the circumstances, was perfectly insulting. She bristled, meditating resistance, but Edwin hurried her to the old gentleman, saying sternly:

"Now then, grandpa, I have brought her back, and you must make plain to her the game you put upon me. It is your business entirely, and I have held my tongue, though I had to bite it to do so. Tell her everything! I must be fully vindicated, though there is no chance for me, for I did and do love her, and I had hoped to persuade her to marry me, not knowing of her engagement to another!"

Erma whirled around to him, but Grandpa interposed, taking her hand, looking very downcast and ashamed. "You see, little girl, I've always wanted to leave the old Morrill place to you and Edwin, and I've blundered along trying to make a match between you. I expected this summer here would settle it all right, but you seemed contrary and wouldn't give Edwin a fair show, and I thought if you saw that some one else was likely to—land him you would appreciate him more yourself. It was my scheme, Edwin didn't even imagine it. I got Bessie—she's to marry Harvey, which you didn't know—and together we've managed to make it seem as if Edwin was—"

"Was a contemptible saphead who deserved a good cow-hiding!" Edwin interjected wrathfully.

"And O, Erma, you should have seen what a bear he was when I so coolly appropriated him as if I had the right to, and he just couldn't shake me. He tried it enough, but I was as dense, and sweet and sticky as molasses taffy," Bessie gurgled at the memory.

"But I didn't know you were going to marry some one else, or I never would have undertaken it, of course," grandpa sighed.

"But I—I wasn't engaged till I wrote to Billy, and I—I didn't send the letter, Grandpa, I—I couldn't bear to," Erma stammered, glancing shyly at Edwin.

"Erma!" he shouted, and grinning broadly, Grandpa drew Bessie away.

Not open Saturday afternoon.

Their Reasons. It was the dinner hour, and the prison inspectors were hurrying over their official round. They asked several questions, quickly.

"I am here, gentlemen," explained the pickpocket, when the warden turned his back, "as the result of a moment of abstraction."

"And I," observed the incendiary, "because of an unfortunate habit of making light of things."

"The reason I am here," chimed in the forger, "is simply on account of a natural desire to make a name for myself."

"And I," added the burglar, "through nothing but taking advantage of an opening which was offered in a large mercantile establishment."

Getting All the Speed Possible.

playing, too. Grandpa was much chagrined, even a little angry, and contrary to his genial custom, sent her to the station alone, vowing that she had deeply disappointed him.

"He ought to understand why I must go," Erma thought impatiently, wondering at his blindness. But then, Edwin was his favorite, privileged it seemed, to any conduct.

She did not mail her letter at the station after all, she found that she shrank from irrevocably committing herself, though she fully intended that her marriage with Billy should be announced before that of Edwin and Bessie.

At one of the way-stations a rural bridal party waited, and Erma noticed with a thrill of sympathy the adoring pride with which the bridegroom looked down into the happy eyes of the little bride. This was marriage as it should be, loving and beloved, and in a sudden repulsion of the loveless union she had contemplated she tore up the letter and scattered the fragments to the winds.

Leaning from the window to clear her eyes, she observed an automobile tearing down the highway which at this point ran nearly parallel with the railroad. The lone driver seemed to be getting all the speed possible out of it, and it soon became plain that he was trying to reach the station before the train. People noticed the race and leaned out, shouting and waving encouragement.

The train halted at the platform, the automobile shot forward and Erma smothered a shriek, for it was Edwin's and the reckless driver Edwin himself. He glanced up at her as the train stopped, bumped across in front of it, threw on the brake and leaping out dashed into her car.

"You might have been killed!" she shuddered. "What in the world does it mean?"

"It means that you must not go away in this manner," he began, gathering up her belongings.

"My movements do not concern you at all, sir," she asserted, too much offended at his apparent arrogance to wonder at his motive.

"They concern me so much that I have driven like mad across the loop to intercept the train and ask you to return with me. There is an explanation you must hear—so much is my due."

ODD GEOGRAPHICAL FACTS

That Are Not Generally Known and at First Strike the Reader as Remarkable.

The following list of odd things about the earth that the average person does not know has been compiled by Prof. R. H. Whitlock of the University of Wisconsin geology department:

Did you know— That the Pacific end of the Panama canal is farther east than the Atlantic end?

That if an express train had started out from the earth for the planet Neptune at the birth of Christ, and had traveled 60 miles an hour day and night ever since, it would not yet be half way there?

That Cuba would reach from New York to Chicago?

That the mouth of the Amazon river is as near to Europe as it is to New York?

That Texas is larger than Germany and as large as 212 Rhode Islands?

That, when measured in degrees of longitude, San Francisco is about in the middle of the United States, including Alaska?

That the entire continent of South America lies further east than Florida?

That Glasgow, Scotland, is in the same latitude as Alaska.

That, if the southern end of Chile, South America, were placed at Florida that single country would extend northward entirely across the United States and Canada and half way across Hudson Bay?

Life on the Farm. "These summer boarders are hard to please."

"What's the matter now?" "They're kicking because I ain't got no field of shredded wheat to show 'em."

Accounted For. Wife (to returning hubby)—I see you have an extra trunk. Did you buy a lot more clothes?

Hub—Not an article; but, you see, you weren't there to pack my clothes coming back.

RHEUMATISM

This nerve-racking disease is caused from impure blood and uric acid poison. External applications sometimes give temporary relief but won't cure; the sure way to secure permanent results is to thoroughly eradicate from the blood all the impurities. Nothing on earth will drive out the poisons from your system, keep the bowels, kidneys and liver in good condition as SEVEN BARKS, the wonderful remedy that has proved its great merits the past 42 years.

SEVEN BARKS can be had of all druggists, at 50 cents per bottle. Give it a good trial and watch your rheumatism disappear.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Accidentally Shot in the Toe.

While at play one day recently Leonard Marshall accidentally shot himself in the toe with a 22-calibre rifle. He and his brother had been playing with an empty gun. His brother inserted a cartridge and forgot to tell Leonard about it. Soon after Leonard was balancing the gun, barrel down, on his foot. He turned to look at something and caught his coat in the trigger, discharging the rifle. The bullet pierced the second toe of his left foot, but did not hit the bone.

The Springfield Canoe Club held its second banquet of the year at Auto Inn Sunday evening. Besides members of the club, 12 guests were present. A course dinner was served and the party watched the old year out and the New Year in. The 1.56 a. m. express for Springfield made a special stop to accommodate the party.

His horse became frightened by a piece of paper blowing in the road and when he started to run the seat on the wagon slipped from its place and Mr. Daley and Rollo Brosseau, who was riding with him, were thrown to the ground. The former hung to the reins and was dragged along the frozen ground. He went to the office of Dr. John E. Dalton, who found that he had very badly lacerated his left ear, and it took 12 stitches to bring the edges together. Brosseau escaped with a few bruises.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Francis X. Dolan in St. John's church. After a short trip to New York and Washington, Dr. and Mrs. Dalton will reside in Warren.

That the town will have in its coming years two public buildings is now an assured fact. The Lawrence memorial building is provided for, and in the passing of Mrs. Estes Sanford, under the terms of the will of her niece, Mrs. Harriette Dwight Longley, the possibility of a building for housing the property of the Historical Association becomes a certainty. SAW ONLY SIGNS OF BADNESS

Character-Reading Professor Discovers the Criminal Type but Overlooked the White Flower.

The professor who reads character from physiognomy pointed to the boy opposite. He belonged to the criminal type, said the professor. Look at his eyes, his ears, his cheek bones, his mouth—criminal, every one of them.

The boy sat very still. All about him were other boys swinging ball bats, and cuffed each other's ears, but that, the professor said, was only the natural overflow of animal spirits; the quiet boy was too thoroughly steeped in criminality to have any animal spirits. Just as the professor's companion was beginning to wonder if it was safe to ride in the same car with the youthful degenerate the boy reached down into his pocket and brought forth a white flower. It was a common field flower, a cluster of tiny white blossoms topping a slender stalk. The boy seemed very fond of it. He twirled the stalk, he stroked the leaves and petals, and every touch was soft and tender. But the professor had no eyes for those gentle fingers, he was intent on the unmistakable signs of inherited depravity.

"A bad one, he is, all right," said the professor with a solemn shake of the head.

But the other person looked at the flower again. A bad one, was he? Maybe; but the other person had doubts.

Judicial Advice.

"I hope you won't be hard on me, judge," he said. "You see, I was under the influence of liquor when I done it."

"You seem to have been under the influence of something equally bad when you studied grammar. During the spare moments that you are going to have, permit yourself to indulge in judicious study of the construction of simple sentences. Here is one to be gin with—sixty days."

Fire Scare Last Evening.

Blaze From Gas Burner Discovered Just in the Nick of Time.

Just as the clerks in Whitcomb & Faulkner's hardware store on Main street were getting ready to close up about 6.20 last evening, it was discovered that the gas jet in one of the show windows had ignited the wood-work overhead. It was supposed at first that the wood was only charred, but the fire had eaten through and was beginning to "get busy" between the ceiling and the floor above. Prompt use of a hand chemical nipped the blaze and the danger was over almost as soon as discovered. The only material damage was to goods in the window from the contents of the extinguisher. Just as the fire was put out the tenant up stairs came rushing down to say that smoke was coming through into his apartments, and was much relieved to learn that all danger was over.

Obliging One's Friends

"No," said the little stenographer, thoughtfully, as she carefully placed the stamp in the corner of the last envelope and then stacked the day's mail. "It isn't that I'm unwilling or anything like that. I like to do things for people occasionally as well as the next one. But if I do it for one I do it for a dozen, for I can't be partial. I hate to, but I'll have to put my foot down and decline to do favors."

The bookkeeper looked up in surprise. "Why—what's—" he began, wondering.

"Well," explained the little stenographer, "last Sunday I took dinner with a friend of mine and during the afternoon she asked if I'd do just a tiny favor for her. She had some programs for her club that she was to write them by hand. Besides, her handwriting was dreadful, so would I just as soon run them off on my typewriter? What could I say after eating her dinner? So I've been devoting my noon hours, besides getting down early mornings this whole week, to 'running off' these simple little programs."

"Then, when I could breathe freely, as I saw the end of the programs coming into view, my friend called me up and asked me if I'd look to see that Mrs. Breuscott's name was spelled right. She was almost sure she had written it 'w' instead of 'u.' And she had—so I rewrote that page of every one of the programs."

"When I finally delivered them she was delighted. She said they were so lovely that she knew the club would always want her to get them up every year, and wasn't it nice that she had a friend who was willing to do a little favor for her once in a while?"

"Then, while I was still cramped with the extra work of the programs, another friend called me up. She said she wanted a copy of a certain song, containing about 40 verses, and she couldn't get it except in book form, and she didn't want to go to that expense, so would I just as soon run over some noon and copy it off in short hand? It would take her so long to write it in regular longhand and it wouldn't take me a minute, she was sure."

"Of course, I did as she requested. I waited around the store half an hour, looking for some one who would be willing to let me copy the song. Then all the time I was copying it the manager stood in front of me and glared at me, for fear I'd run away with the book, I suppose. It was such a pleasant experience!"

"Then that friend of mine called me up late in the afternoon, just as I was getting ready to leave the office, to ask me if I'd just as soon make her three copies of the song—I'd already made one copy with a carbon—for she wanted to send away two copies. So I sat down and wrote them off and mailed them."

"Oh, yes, she appreciated it very much. Any time I want to go anywhere, she says—plying, for my lack of a regular man escort—she'll be glad to go with me if her husband is out of town, so she can leave home!"

"This morning, while the manager was dictating a very important letter, the phone rang. He looked so exasperated, while I took down from the phone, at the request of this same friend, details of just how many yards of lace and just what pattern to get and what price she wanted to pay and which store to visit to look at the white sweaters that were selling at $5 and to see if they were really a bargain, and if they were, to have one sent out and pay for it and she'd repay me. Since then I have been trembling every time my buzzer rings for fear the manager is calling me to tell me that my services aren't needed any longer."

"By the time I finished her little errands my whole noon hour was gone and I'm as hungry as a bear now, for I haven't had a bite since breakfast."

"I don't blame you a little bit," said the bookkeeper, sympathetically. "It's a shame the way people impose on others, never dreaming that they're asking anything out of the ordinary. Why don't you tell them that you're too busy? I'd never stand for such impositions."

The little stenographer beamed at him—it was good to have some one understand!

"Oh, by the way," he interrupted her as she said good night. "Would you just as soon stop in on your way to the station and send some cut flowers—pick out anything you think would go well with a pink outfit? My sister asked me to do it and I didn't have time this noon. I'll pay you tomorrow, when you know what the price is."

"Oh, of course," replied the little stenographer, weakly, "I'll be glad to."

Probably.

"Does your new assistant do things with spirit?"

"I must say, he does not seem to do anything without it."

A Clinch.

"How did he manage to get elected by such a large majority?"

"He told the voters he was a pious statesman."

Not Satisfactory.

THE BEST PROOF.

Palmer Citizens Cannot Doubt It: Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they cured. The story was told to Palmer residents. Time has strengthened the evidence. Has proven the cure permanent. The testimony is from this locality. The proof convincing.

M. C. Sheldon of 84 W. Main St., Ware, Mass., says: "Weak and disordered kidneys caused me misery for years. I tried remedy after remedy, but relief did not follow. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage and always attended with a burning sensation. My back ached constantly and was weak. On a friend's advice, I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills and began their use. The first few doses relieved the pain and before long my kidneys were restored to a normal condition." (Statement given August 15, 1908.)

A LATER ENDORSEMENT.

On June 15, 1911, Mr. Sheldon was interviewed and he added to the above: "All I have previously said regarding Doan's Kidney Pills was correct and I am glad to confirm my former statement. This remedy is certainly an effective one."

January Undermuslin Sale

An Event Unequalled for the Richness of Its Offerings Even by Our Own Great Sales of Former Years Opened Tuesday Morning at 8.30 o'clock

Once again we eclipse even our own past record despite the sensational character of offerings in former sales. This is due to the fact that conservatism has ruled in buying during the past few months and manufacturers have competed sharply with one another to secure our orders for this great event. It was more important to them to keep their machines going than to secure a profit.

Wonderful==Rarely Wonderful Values Are the Result

But that's not all. We not only secured our stock at prices far below usual, but we impressed upon manufacturers our own ideas. So you'll find offerings here not the riff raff of the manufacturers, but garments specially designed and made for us—cut on generous lines—made from fine sheer muslins and trimmed with laces and embroideries of the exclusive design. Many are copies of the finest French lingerie in practical, serviceable adaptations, but offered at a price far less than the imported model. Others lay no claim to foreign parentage, but are distinctly American in design and workmanship. But why try to describe what your eyes can see—if we've excited your curiosity that's enough. Let the goods speak for themselves. If they had tongues they'd say

The animal had not fallen or slipped in any manner, and the cause of the break is a mystery.

The Monson basketball team lost another game last night in Memorial hall to the Springfield High school alumni Independents by the score of 22 to 10. The game was somewhat rough. There were 20 fouls called on the home team with 14 on the visitors.

For the first 13 minutes neither team scored a basket from the floor, but Springfield soon obtained the lead and kept it throughout the game. Griffin and Rourke played well for Monson while Baseol excelled for the visitors.

Uncle Simon's Manager

By Lawrence Alfred Clay

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

They called him the new manager, because there had been three in the place before him. It was the building of a big embankment to create a lake for a water supply for a town. Men who work with pick and spade and shovel on such tasks are of the rough and ready class and seek to make their own discipline.

When the third manager was literally thrown out of camp by crop and heels the position was offered to Bob Kingsford, who had just graduated as a civil engineer and was looking around for a job. The man who told him of the place, and who had the influence to put him there, was a Quaker and an old friend of the family. He came down to the city and looked Bob over and asked:

"Robert, hast thou ever handled men?"

"I was captain of a football team for two seasons," was the reply.

"And the members were high-spirited?"

"I had to scrap with one or two a day."

"And when thee played other teams did thee play them gently?"

"Not by a jug-full, Uncle Simon! We just went in to leave them human wrecks!"

"And in colleges, so I have heard, they teach students what is known as the manly art."

"Oh, the boys catch on to all those things."

"Robert," continued the Quaker with a shade of anxiety in his tones, "a man may learn the manly art, and yet if he is not possessed of what the worldly call 'sand' he is a failure."

"You mean if he can't stand up and give and take and do his best to lick the other fellow?"

"Something like that is my meaning, Robert. Let me ask thee if thou

"And was thee always successful?"

"I think my record is clear in that respect."

"Then I think I have a place to offer thee. It pays a fair salary and will give thee a start in the world."

Uncle Simon stated the nature of the job and the amount of salary attached, and after Bob Kingsford had accepted, he said:

"That thee may not puzzle over my queries about the manly art I will say, and say it with sorrow, that there is fighting as well as managing to be done. The gang have no godliness in their hearts. They have no fear of a man who cannot thump them. I believe the word is thump."

"Yes, thump is right," replied Bob with a laugh. "Then I'm expected to lick the crowd and hustle the dirt along as well? Well, I don't mind, if they don't come more than two at a time."

"Robert, thee must not conclude that I have forsaken the faith of my father and mother before me. I am still a humble and contrite man of peace, but that reservoir must be pushed along with proper energy, and if an obstinate and perverse man stands in the way he must—must—"

"I understand. The perverseness must be knocked out of him. I'll pack my trunk and go up with you."

The crowd at the reservoir was ready for the new manager, but opinions differed. Some said he would be a bad man to fool with, and others declared him a bluffer. He started off rather easy, but at the same time he got more work out of the men than his predecessors had, although they didn't mean to give it. The idea was to make a loafing job of it. Previous managers had boarded at a hotel in the town. Bob Kingsford had taken up his home in the house of Uncle Simon. Until he had done so he was not aware, or had entirely forgotten, that there was a daughter Prudence in the case.

"Thee may call her Prue, the same as we do," said the father after the introduction. "It is better that she becomes not too worldly, but thee may tell her of the streets and great buildings in thy city, and thee may even touch lightly on fashions and the theaters. Prue, Robert Kingsford will never be of our faith, but he is a good young man."

Whether it took Bob six days or six weeks to fall in love with Prue, and whether it was six days or six weeks before a climax came with the men, has nothing to do with the main questions. Bob had his eyes and ears open and realized that a row was coming. The men were growling over hours and wages. They were loafing and defiant. No man wanted to lose his job, but every man thought it was time to change managers again. Uncle Simon, loafing about the works, saw enough and heard enough to make him say to Bob:

"Robert, there is an ungodly man on this job who is stirring up disloyalty and sedition."

"I know him, uncle. It's Jim Shea."

"Verily, it is. He aches and longs."

"And he's going to get what he aches and longs for. I could discharge him, of course, but he'd keep on stirring up trouble. What will settle his hash is a good licking in a fair stand-up fight. Jim is a bully and wants to be a leader. After I've trounced him the men will be all right."

"Robert, hast thou looked James Shea over?"

"Oh, I've glanced his way a few times."

"He is tall and long-armed, and he hath what the world calls a fighting jaw. If he is from a college where the manly art was taught he may best thee."

"I've got to take my chances on that. I know you are with me, but how about Prue? She will certainly be shocked if she hears of a fight."

"Not being worldly, she probably will," replied Uncle Simon after thinking it over, "but we may count that the said shock will not be fatal. It is the fate of her sex to be shocked and to recover. Shouldst a conflict take place, and shouldst thee come out of it with a black eye, but triumphant, it may be that Prue's hands would even make the poultice. I am a man of peace, but—"

And that evening as Bob Kingsford was smoking his pipe and inspecting the works, he was approached by Jim Shea's daughter, a girl of twelve who brought the father's dinner pail, and after a furtive look around she said:

"Look out for pop tomorrow noon."

"Why, what's he going to do?"

"Going to beat you up before the men."

"And why do you come to warn me?"

"Because pop won't let me go to the moving picture shows. He's a fighter, pop is, but you knock him out and I'll send you a bouquet."

Next morning there was something in the air that told Bob what to look for. He said nothing to Uncle Simon, but half an hour before the noon whistle blew the Quaker came around to ask:

"Robert, art thou feeling in fine fettle, as the world calls it?"

"Fine as silk."

"And thy muscle and the knowledge of the manly art?"

"Got 'em both with me."

Two minutes before the whistle blew Bob walked out on the embankment and straight up to Shea and told him to get ready, and then removed his own surplus clothing. He wasn't waiting to be challenged. Two hundred people saw that fight. The Quaker meant to turn his back on it, but forgot. It was a fair-square fight. It lasted twenty minutes, and then Shea got up from his fourth knockdown and extended his hand and said the new manager was all right, all right.

Yes, Bob Kingsford had a black eye, and Uncle Simon conducted him home and turned him over to Ruth with the remark:

"Daughter, do not be shocked when I tell thee that Robert has been in—"

"Oh, I was down by the wild plum tree and saw it all, father, and now under thy directions I will make a poultice—for Bob."

Great Plots and Great Novels.

The instinct for plot is an unappeasable one, and children keep us constantly aware of the depth and the fundamental nature of the demand that a story shall be a story. This, by the way, is the hardest thing to make it, and the student of fiction is constantly surprised to find how few are the great plots as compared with the number of the really great novels, so often does the casual chain of inevitable consequence break and fall in the dramatic type; so often does some favorite personage, growing almost too much alive, run away with the plot. Fiction, especially English fiction, is, as we all know, far more distinguished by the creation of great characters than by the working out of great plots; and Thackeray's confession that the trend of his story often depended on the mood of the morning, he, in good humor, being inclined to make his characters do admirable deeds, in a bad humor being tempted to thrust them into villainy, may well be considered the unspoken confession of many another great novelist.—From the Atlantic.

Way for the Business Love Letter.

A love letter ought to proceed on business lines. The fondest lover in the world cannot tell a woman more about her eyes and hair and teeth than she knows herself. Writing to his wife he may commence his letter, "My precious darling," and end it, "Your own forever," and be perfectly safe even if she has her doubts about him; but this sort of thing to a girl he, perhaps, dreams of making his wife in a world where there is many a slip 'twixt the cup and lip is not a wise insurance against accidents, to say the least. Oh, for the business love letters—if any!—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

ARE MICROBES IN YOUR SCALP?

It Has Been Proved That Microbes Cause Baldness.

Professor Unna of Hamburg, Germany, and Dr. Sabourand, the leading French dermatologist, discovered that a microbe causes baldness. Their theory has time and again been amply verified through research experiments carried on under the observation of eminent scientists. This microbe lodges in the Sebum, which is the natural hair oil, and when permitted to flourish it destroys the hair follicles and in time the pores entirely close, and the scalp gradually takes on a shiny appearance. When this happens there is no hope of the growth of hair being revived.

We have a remedy which will, we honestly believe, remove dandruff, exterminate the microbe, promote good circulation in the scalp and around the hair roots, tighten and revitalize the hair roots, and overcome baldness, so long as there is any life left in the hair roots.

We back up this statement with our own personal guarantee that this remedy called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will be supplied free of all cost to the user if it fails to do as we state.

It will frequently help to restore gray and faded hair to its original color, providing loss of color has been caused by disease; yet it is in no sense a dye. Rexall "93" Hair Tonic accomplishes these results by aiding in making every hair root, follicle, and pigment gland strong and active, and by stimulating a natural flow of coloring pigment throughout the hair cells.

We exact no obligations or promises—we simply ask you to give Rexall "93" Hair Tonic a thorough trial and if not satisfied tell us and we will refund the money you paid us for it. Two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain it only at our store—The Rexall Store.

$75,000 Conflagration Sunday in Three Rivers.

Two Large 'Business Blocks, Store and Several Dwellings. Zero Weather and High Wind Hamper Work of Firemen.

A fire which broke out in Three Rivers about 3 o'clock Sunday morning caused a loss of about $75,000 and wiped out a generous portion of the business section of the village. The buildings burned were the new block finished only a few months ago—of the Cerele Canadian, the Quaboag Hotel block, dwelling owned by D. J. Hartnett & Co., dwelling and store owned by Mrs. Honora Dunn, two-tenement house owned by Mrs. Dunn, barn owned by Mrs. Dunn and D. J. Hartnett & Co.

The ground floor of the Cerele Canadian building was occupied by L. L.

So swiftly did the flames do their work that little could be saved from the doomed structures. The Cerele Canadian lost a full set of regalia valued at over $700, and the Red Men and United Workmen were also similar losers. From the Quaboag Hotel a piano was removed, but that was all.

That the buildings on the opposite side of the street only narrowly escaped is evidenced by their appearance. The Rivers block was occupied on the ground floor by Prendergast & Herbert, wholesale liquor dealers, and the upper part by five families. All the front windows were broken by the

Some Problems of the School Committee.

A large number gathered in the reference room of the public library Tuesday evening to hear the views of John C. Sullivan, chairman of the Palmer school committee, on various phases of school matters. His subject was "The other side," or "Some problems of the school committee." Mr. Sullivan spoke as follows:

While thinking over some ideas under this heading my mind went back to the meeting of the Committee of Fifteen last March when it became my duty to present to that committee a requisition for the funds necessary to carry on the educational department of the town school, plan and supervise its work; plan and supervise the work in eight grammar school buildings with 1300 to 1400 pupils now in all these schools. In addition to this work he had to make out schedules of material needed and obtain prices for thousands of dollars worth of supplies, including books, coal, transportation, repairs to school buildings and various incidentals necessary to carry on school work, and report to the committee who approve placing orders. Still further additional duties were to employ 45 teachers and see that their work was conducted along lines calculated to secure good

VIEW OF BUILDINGS BEFORE THE FIRE.

AFTER THE FIRE---SHOWING RUINS.

Dupuis & Co. as a general store; the Bijou moving picture show, owned by Indian Orchard people, was also quartered there, and on the upper floor was the Cerele Canadian hall. The Quaboag hotel was occupied by D. J. Hartnett & Co., and the house owned by them was occupied by E. Boissy; Mr. Boissy was sick in bed at the time of the fire and had to be carried out. In the Quaboag Hotel building was a barber shop and a hall used by the United Workmen and the Red Men. Mrs. Dunn's dwelling was occupied by herself and M. J. Sullivan, and the tenement house owned by her was occupied by two Polish families. William Potvin occupied the store with a stock of furniture.

The various losses are estimated as follows: Cerele Canadian $15,000; Dupuis' store, $17,000; Furkey & Co., picture show, $700; Mrs. Dunn's dwelling, $3000; store occupied by William Potvin, $2000; Potvin's stock, $5000; two-tenement house of Mrs. Dunn, $2500; furniture, $1000; Mrs. Dunn's barn, $500; Quaboag Hotel, $10,000; contents, $5000; barn, $750; house occupied by E. Boissy, $1000; loss on buildings and stocks on the opposite side of the street, $5000.

The fire had gained good headway when discovered and proved a hard one to fight, the cold being intense and the wind high. A boarder in the Riverside hotel, across the street from the Cerele Canadian block, gave the alarm. She had risen to close a window and saw the fire in the Dupuis store. Officer Michael Sullivan, who lived in one of the burned houses, was one of the first to reach the scene, and at that time the interior of the Dupuis store was a mass of flames. Others who arrived about the same time found the same conditions. An alarm was given and the fire department of the Palmer Mill quickly responded. There was little that could be done however except protect the property on the opposite side of the street. There was ample need of this, and the men did their work well. The Palmer fire department was summoned and the auto truck arrived in a short time. It did good work in protecting property in the vicinity of the blaze, but could of course do nothing toward checking the flames, which by that time had made rapid progress in both directions from the original starting point. The steamer arrived a little later, and was set to draw water from the bridge over the river, but the distance was too great and it had to be relocated, after which it did good work in protecting surrounding property. There was little that the firemen could do at any time after the fire was discovered but to attempt to save the buildings across the street and those east of the two-tenement house of Mrs. Dunn, where the fire stopped in that direction; to the west it burned to the river.

heat and the front was burned through in several places; there was also much damage from the water thrown on it to protect it. The Johnson block was similarly damaged. It was occupied by S. Cohan with general merchandise and as a tenement. The lunch room of E. Boissy, fruit store of D. Accorsi, the general store of N. Senton and the furniture store of H. A. Shaw were also scorched by the flames and soaked by water.

The workers at the fire were served with hot coffee by Mrs. C. S. Ruggles at her home not far away.

The cause of the fire is a mystery. The earliest arrivals agree that when they reached the spot the flames were thickest in a part of the Dupuis store given up the storage of crockery and glassware. There were no electric wires near that spot, and an investigation of the boiler room of the block by early comers showed no fire in the room. It is suggested that the blaze may have been started by burglars. It is not many weeks since the store of S. Weiner was entered and searched by the aid of matches lighted all about the premises, and the possibility of fire starting in this manner is not improbable.

The firemen were called to the scene again about 10 o'clock Sunday evening. Sparks had begun blowing from the ruins and property owners were fearful for their buildings. Chief Summers decided, after consultation with Superintendent Newell of the Palmer Mill, not to put on a stream on account of the liability of the hydrants freezing, and a watchman was left to stay on guard all night. The safe of the Quaboag Hotel was opened Monday morning and the contents found to be all right. But as soon as the air struck the papers they caught fire and were burned.

The amount of insurance will in no way cover the loss, and there is a good deal of uncertainty regarding rebuilding.

imagined. We may obtain them if we are willing to do his will, as he makes it known to us. Having been led to believe that it is his will, and, therefore, the best for us all, and after careful consideration and earnest prayer, I have decided to accept a call from the Central Baptist church of Riverton and Palmyra, N. J., and therefore, resign the pastorate of this church to take effect February 15, 1912. Thanking you for your constant kindness to me personally and the large measure of co-operation in the work of the kingdom during the eight years and four months of service together, I pray for our Father's continued blessing upon you and that he will very quickly bring you an undershepherd who shall be able, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit to lead you into his richest pastures. Very sincerely, your pastor and friend.

Mr. Williams came to Palmer eight years ago, and in that time there has been only the utmost harmony between pastor and people. Mr. Williams has been an indefatigable worker and under his leadership the church has prospered spiritually and financially. The original church building was destroyed by fire Aug. 13, 1908, and a new church was dedicated in November of the following year.

At the annual meeting of the society last week it was announced that the property held by the church and in trust for it was nearly if not quite equal to the society's indebtedness. As a citizen Mr. Williams is also highly regarded and his departure from town will be genuinely mourned. The resignation is to take effect Feb. 15.

Historical Society Meeting.

The society held its regular meeting Tuesday evening with a good attendance. The curator reported the gift from the state of a copy of the memorial history of the 17th regiment of Massachusetts Vols., by Thomas Kerwin and Col. Henry Spaine. The address of the evening was by John C. Sullivan, chairman of the school committee. He gave in vigorous terms his views on the past and present conditions in our schools, including some of the defects and the remedies for them. His subject was presented in such a clear and conclusive manner that all present were impressed with its logical deductions. The address will be found in full on the first page.

tion. He appealed but was unable to furnish bonds, and yesterday withdrew his appeal and is now serving sentence.

The cases were brought by Dr. E. W. Babson of Gloucester, secretary of the state board of examiners. McDonald claimed that in treating animals and furnishing remedies which he prepared himself he was acting within his rights as a citizen. For the prosecution however numerous witnesses testified to their employment of McDonald in various veterinary capacities, and there were shown numerous bills for services rendered by him, to "Dr. J. H. McDonald, Dr.," and receipted by "Dr. J. H. McDonald, V. S." The court records showed previous convictions in three similar cases, and under the circumstances Justice Dillon, who was on the bench, imposed the penalties above named. Dr. Babson stated that McDonald had previously agreed to stop practicing, and he would like a penalty severe enough to deter him in the future.

for the ensuing year. At that time it was thought wise by the Committee to ask the citizens to appropriate an additional sum of $1000 for the purpose of doing away forever, if possible, with the idea of conducting the educational department under the system known as the dual position of principal of high school and superintendent of schools.

When placing before the Committee of Fifteen the advantages that would accrue to our schools by the adoption of the idea that a superintendent should be employed who would devote his entire time to the supervision of the schools, as contrasted with the disadvantages which resulted from the dual position idea, one of the committee asked, "Why did you ever let the superintendent go?" As I was about to reply, my eyes recognized the ex-chairman of the school committee and he was requested to answer the question. He stated that this was not a measure adopted by the committee, but was forced upon them against their best judgment by the general public criticism that the office was a sinecure; that $1000 could be saved by adopting the dual position idea, and it was therefore tried with poor results.

The fact that one of the Committee of Fifteen did not know why we adopted the dual position idea of conducting our schools has led me to wonder how many of our citizens really know what has been the result upon our schools of conducting them under the supervision of one man holding the office of principal of the high school and superintendent of schools. With charity towards all and malice towards none and in the interest of the children of the town of Palmer, I wish to tell you of some local history of a more recent date than that to which you have been accustomed to listen.

The duties of the dual position were to teach two hours a day in the high results; make out labor and illiterate certificates for those about to enter the employ of local factories; make out state and town reports; act as book-keeper, typewriter, receiving clerk, distributing clerk, secretary and executive officer to a committee conducting the business of the educational department of the town at an annual expense of about $36,000. These were certainly tasks well calculated to employ to advantage all the energy and enthusiasm of any man who attempted to perform the duties of the position.

After studying for nearly two years the method of conducting our schools under the dual position plan and the results obtained, it seems only fair to say that while the results secured are exceedingly poor, it is the fault entirely of the plan which imposes more work on one man than it is possible to do, and is not the fault of the individual who tried to operate it. It is believed that any man trying to conduct a school department of the size of ours on this basis will be less efficient both as a teacher and a superintendent because his efforts in any one direction become so attenuated that they are practically valueless so far as good results are concerned, and the strong mental effort required is so exhausting and severe a drain upon the system of any man that he finally becomes unconsciously neglectful of the ordinary duties of his position.

The present committee, with three new members, began its work in March of 1910, and the first occurrence to stir the smooth stream of its existence was the report of the superintendent that 25 per cent of the senior class in the high school were unable to graduate because of their low standing. This report, with one that came in from a parent stating that he did not know until a few weeks before the close of the high school that his child was not to graduate led the chairman to say at a meeting of the committee that in his opinion this condition of affairs was a severe indictment against the high school management and indicated a spirit of indifference on the part of the superintendent and teachers that amounted to a gross neglect of a plain duty. It could not be shown from the records of the superintendent's office that a call had ever been made or that a letter had ever been written to the parents in regard to this deplorable condition.

Manual Training Incident.

The next occurrence that brought out one of the hidden beauties of the dual position was late in October, 1910, when the committee learned from the superintendent that both he and the manual training teacher had been trying to operate a plan which called for the sewing work in the eighth and ninth grades to be performed by the teachers in those grades, although the manual training teacher had been employed and was paid for doing it. As the committee were unable at that meeting to devise a plan to meet the situation it was decided as a tentative measure to continue on the plan of the manual training teacher. In two days' time a member of the committee had devised a plan on which the committee agreed and which the superintendent pronounced workable. Its presentation to the manual training teacher resulted in a refusal on her part to accept it and her resignation followed. Information coming to the committee from the superintendent regarding a lack of method in conducting the drawing work led to a special meeting of the committee, which resulted in laying down as a condition precedent to the employment of any teacher for the drawing and manual training that she must have a clear and definite conception of the object of these studies and possess sufficient intelligence to detail the various steps by which she hoped to accomplish it. It was insisted that a plan of her work should be submitted to the committee, not with the view of determining its fitness, but that the committee might know that the work was being conducted on some clearly thought-out plan.

Penmanship

The committee next took up the condition of the quality of the penmanship, and as the school organization did not seem able to develop any means to overcome the difficulty it was arranged to employ Prof. Houston of New Haven to assist our teachers in this work. The chairman of the committee attended three of these meetings and the salient point to him was the spirit of willingness shown by the teachers, their ability to comprehend the instructions given, and their capacity for growth and development along the lines of instruction, as evidenced by the improved quality of their work. Another point that impressed him was that the change had been brought about by the application of trained intelligence and close supervision for a short time to the solution of the problem that had harassed our educational department for years.

A study of the situation developed the conclusion on the part of the chairman that the quality of the work in each study in our schools was as poor as the work in penmanship, if we could only produce tangible evidence of it, and he so reported to the superintendent.

With the view of ascertaining, if possible, why the work in arithmetic in the upper grammar grades was what it appeared to be, it was arranged with the superintendent that the chairman should visit the four main grammar school buildings and see what the children in the second, third and fourth grades could do in oral work in arithmetic. The principal of the building was told what was required, and the teacher of each grade was left free to show how much her class knew and what they could do in oral work. As a result of this investigation the chairman stated to the superintendent his belief that while none of the work was what it ought to have been, one of the classes in a certain grade had not covered one-half the ground that the other classes had and that the work covered had not been done half as well. As the superintendent doubted the existence of any such condition the chairman asked that he make an investigation for himself, and if he still held to his view then the chairman would insist upon bringing the matter before the committee with the view of having two classes in this grade—the best and the poorest—brought to the high school, where each teacher would be given an opportunity to show what her class could do in oral work and the committee have an opportunity to see the contrast. The superintendent made an investigation and had the teacher show what her class could do in oral work, and thinking that the teacher had not developed the knowledge the class really possessed he took charge of the class with the view of getting better results. His report to the chairman was that he was surprised to learn how little the class knew of what it ought to have known. Here is an especially illuminating example of the results obtained when operating our schools under the method of the dual position. In the year when this happened the superintendent had in his office a clerk who had been employed on the definitely stated basis that the time saved by the superintendent from clerical work should be devoted to an inspection of the grammar schools, and yet he had little knowledge of the real condition in these schools. What knowledge did the superintendent possess of the condition of school work the year before, when he had no clerk and was required to perform all the clerical duties himself? What facilities and opportunities did he have for learning the actual condition of school work the year when he had no clerk that were denied to him during the year when he had a clerk?

A visit to the schools of Chicopee when there on some regular business showed that the work in arithmetic, in the opinion of the chairman, was very much better than this work in our schools in the corresponding grades.

With the view of testing this opinion and learning the ability of our pupils to apply the knowledge they were supposed to have acquired, he brought several papers with him, showing the work of a ten-year-old boy in the fourth Chicopee grade. He was anxious to have these problems tried out in our fourth grades, but as the superintendent was reluctant to make the test, stating that it would not do any good, it was allowed to remain without any action until about a month later. At this time a member of the committee took the papers and gave them to a fourth, fifth and sixth grade in our schools. In the fourth and fifth grades the result was a failure, while the sixth grade solved the problems. It is only fair to say that the problems were given to the fifth and sixth grades in the afternoon. If any reliable conclusion can be drawn from a test so irregularly conducted it indicates that our work in arithmetic is two years behind Chicopee in thoroughness and in the ability to apply the principles of arithmetic to the solution of the simplest little problems of every-day life.

Reading.

The results obtained in our reading are even worse than those existing in our arithmetic and penmanship for years, when compared with those obtained in other schools where the same method of reading is taught. For lack of supervision the children of the town have been acquiring habits of guessing, establishing habits of physical and intellectual laziness, and are actually prevented from using past experience to aid them in present difficulties. If the object is to suppress, stifle and strangle expression on the part of the pupil, some of the methods practiced are well calculated to achieve that end.

How could anyone reasonably expect a more thorough knowledge of school work on the part of the superintendent or any better quality of work when one considers the multitudinous duties he was called upon to perform, with an inquisitive committee not knowing anything about the work but persistently and determinedly calling for information regarding it and insisting on calling a spade a spade rather than an oblong handled instrument of manual labor? To expect satisfactory results in our school work under the dual position method is as reasonable as would be the action of a farmer who placed a hen in a ten-acre lot and called her scratching around a little here and a little there preparing the soil, sowing the seed, cultivating the crop and reaping the harvest. He would reap what he had sown.

When committees appointed to carry on town work have not the necessary time, even if they possess the technical knowledge necessary to do the work, is it not the reasonable and business-like proceeding to employ someone to do this work who does know how, pay him the market rate of compensation for his services and hold him responsible for results?

The citizens of the town decided at the last annual town meeting to adopt this plan and the schools are now being conducted under it. When the new superintendent was asked why so much attention was given to the study of arithmetic in the upper grades as indicated by a course of study which he had gotten out for those grades, his reply was that the head of the commercial department had reported that he had been obliged to take up the study of fractions with the freshman class in order to have them understand percentage and interest. He was simply swinging the efforts of the grammar school work in line to remedy the defects discovered in the high school.

The chairman of the committee told the teacher of English in the high school, at the Lincoln Day exercises last winter, that the committee had been trying during the past year to have the superintendent and teachers in the high school take the initiative and introduce something in the line of debating, and in the discussion of current events with the view of developing self-expression on the part of the pupils. As they had not succeeded in doing this the committee were about convinced that the quality of work produced in the high school was so poor that the teachers did not wish it known. The teacher replied that if the committee knew how the teachers had to ask, entreat, implore, beg, insist, and almost get down on their knees to the pupils in order to have them get on their feet to say anything, the committee would not entertain the opinion they did. This condition will be remedied by paying more attention to reading and self-expression on the part of the pupils in the grammar grades, and obedience will be taught and required in all things reasonable.

The amount of clerical work necessary in the office of the superintendent to prepare courses of study, record and tabulate the work of the children in the grammar schools in the same manner in which it is done in the high school, prepare outlines of study to remedy defects as they occur or are discovered, prepare schedules of supplies in advance of actual need so that intelligent purchase may be made, inventory supplies on hand, including buildings and their contents with the amount of insurance carried, and give the superintendent the necessary time to keep in touch with the actual work in the classroom and see that it is being conducted as it ought to be, has led the committee to employ a clerk to do this class of work.

Since the employment of the clerk we find that we have not only been educating pupils for surrounding towns for $10 per year less than it costs us without having made any effort to obtain a better price, but we have also furnished some of these children transportation tickets on the street railway during the past year without having sent a bill for this service. In the method of buying insurance we learn that while the prevailing rate is one and one-half per cent on the face of the policy for a five year period, in some cases the rate is as high as three per cent on the same building for the same period. In one case we are paying $75 for a $5000 policy for five years, and on the same building we are also paying $75 for a five year policy for $2500.

The State law requires that all doors in school buildings shall swing out, but is apparently modified by another requirement in the same statute that these doors shall swing as directed in writing by the state inspector. Our town counsel says that in order to relieve the committee and town from responsibility in case of an accident we ought either to have all doors swing out in accordance with the law or have written directions from the state inspector regarding them.

Who is to blame for this condition? In the opinion of the chairman, the answer is that the school committee are more to blame in this respect than anyone else can possibly be, for each trusts the other to do necessary work and nobody does it. Are they more neglectful of their duties than other committees? It is believed they are not, but on the contrary their work will compare favorably with those that are supposed to be managed with great care and ability. The chairman of the school committee recently learned that he was a member of the Library Association, and an attendance at one of their meetings convinced him that the directors of the association paid little attention to their by-laws; their treasurer failed to draw from the town treasury the money due them, although they had bills to pay and needed the money badly; the reading public demanded about 80 per cent of fiction and the books bought were on the basis of about 20 per cent of fiction, although the public paid the bills; and the only man connected with the Library Association who appeared to have done anything at all was the superintendent of schools, who had been trusted to do everything for them and was blamed for everything he did do and did not do.

Take the case of the recent addition to the high school, which was placed in charge of a committee consisting of men possessing a standard of intelligence and good judgment not equalled by any men in town. They had their private business to manage and what success attended their efforts in conducting a $17,000 enterprise for the public? Let the architect whose creation the building was speak on this subject. He was present at its inception, stood sponsor at its birth and superintended and had an assistant to watch it grow and develop into the full completion of the ideal structure he had conceived. The result plainly indicates an unwise adaptation of means to obtain the end in view.

Was the failure in these cases any greater than that achieved by the school committee in managing the educational department under the dual position method? Not at all. The quality of the work in penmanship was as sagged and as bent and as deformed and as much out of alignment as were the ceiling joists in the high school. The quality of the oral work in the schools in all studies was as bent and as twisted and as warped and as deformed and as much out of alignment as were the trusses in the roof of the high school addition, because the means adopted under the dual position were not adequate to secure the end in view.

If the boys and girls of our town could formulate a bill of grievances against those who are responsible for this condition of affairs it would be as strong and as pregnant with truth as was the bill of rights presented by the barons of old to King John at Runnymede. Edmund Burke said, in one of his immortal orations that will live and be read with pleasure and admiration while the English language endures, that when the laws of Great Britain were unable to protect in his rights the humblest Hindoo on the banks of the Ganges, then the English nobleman in his castle was not safe on the banks of the Thames. May we not paraphrase this statement with the idea of bringing out the principle underlying it and say, that when the school work of the children of the humblest citizen in the town is not systematically planned, efficiently supervised, recorded and tabulated as it ought to be in the grammar schools, then the continued planning, supervising, recording and tabulating the work of the children in the high school is no longer safe.

Joke on Composer.

Signor Leoncavallo once had a rather amusing experience. Being in a strange town where "I Pagliacci" was being given, he attended the performance to see how it was rendered, and falling into conversation with his neighbor, proceeded, by way of a joke, to criticize the work unmercifully. Next morning he found in the local newspaper a long article reproducing all his statements and headed, "Leoncavallo's opinion of 'Pagliacci!'"

In the Garden Below

By Molly MacMaster

Delicia slipped joyously into the soft pink silks of her costume. The young woman possessed a temperament and could write in nothing save pink—pink from her slippers, to the large bow that confined a mass of copper ringlets at the nape of her neck. Her cheeks rivalled the pink of the frock for inspiration had come suddenly and she could scarcely contain herself until she reached her den. She glanced out at the rambling old house in the next garden; it had been vacant so long that the windows were almost hidden behind the unkept vines. A desultory litigation had hung over its stately premises so long that Delicia had decided to make use of the privacy it afforded.

Consequently, Delicia carried her writing paraphernalia to a small den—room on the third floor. Fortunately for the girl's temperament, the walls bore traces of pink flowers and with the touches which artistic hands can give, Delicia soon had an attractive workshop.

Arrived in her bower, the girl peeped out through the port hole of her window—she had sacrificed the vines to that extent—and sighed as she gazed wistfully at the old garden so rich in possibilities but so much in need of loving hands to guide its straying vines and tangles of old-world flowers.

Delicia had no time herself. Her stories demanded every moment.

"Besides," she murmured to the garden, "someone might see me and then—I might be put out of my lovely room." She grew frowsy at the very thought and went desperately to work on the story in her mind.

For an hour or more her typewriter clicked. When the best of her thoughts were safely down she became more conscious of outward sounds.

Gradually it came to her senses that a peculiar grating noise had been going on for some time. At the same moment a voice was humming "My Love Is Like a Red, Red Rose."

Delicia jumped up cautiously and peered through the opening in the vines. She started back, then quickly resumed her position as she realized her safety.

A man was digging in the garden below.

Surprise, indignation, joy were mingled in the expression of Delicia's eyes—indignation that anyone dared to enter what she had grown to consider her own, and joy that the old garden was at last coming into its own, for the man below was working like a happy slave over paths and vines and rose trees.

Delicia made her cup of tea slowly and thoughtfully while she cast occasional glances into the garden or rather at the man in the garden. That he was big and well knit was easily seen and that his head was crowned with gold was equally apparent but his features were not discernible.

She gave up the attempt and sat down to her tea. Gloom brooded in her eyes.

"Has some horrible person bought the place?" was the question uppermost in Delicia's mind. She cast another glance through the vines. "He isn't so horrible, at that," she confided to herself with a sparkle in her eyes. "Anyway, I shall just wait and see. He can't any more than put me out."

But Martin Duane did not dispose of Delicia. And as the weeks wore on he apparently did not once become conscious of the pair of gray eyes that followed him in his work about the garden.

The magazines suffered the loss of Delicia's work. Up in the pink den Delicia grew peevish because her well trained brain refused to compose beautiful stories; it preferred to take vivid interest in every movement of the man in the garden.

The garden thrived and blossomed into a veritable fairyland of color. The man seemed to take particular care of the roses; to Delicia's longing eyes it looked as if the pink ones grew defiantly larger and more desirable than the others.

As June wore toward its close the girl found herself consciously jealous of the pink roses; especially was she jealous of the tender care which was given to one bush. The man spent hours tending the glorious bud that was slowly opening its heart to the garden. He pruned and petted and watched it with the eyes of a lover.

Delicia's desire for a cluster of those roses became a passion. When the man in the garden buried his head in their pink depths to inhale their sweetness she felt that she must rush down and clutch some of them to her own heart.

Upon the night of the big dance in the town hall Delicia stood before her mirror and gazed at the pink cloud reflected there.

"I need that one rose," she said to herself. "My costume is incomplete without it. I simply must have it for my hair."

She slipped quietly out and glided through the moonlight into the garden next door. Once in the garden, Delicia forgot everything save the glorious moment. She wandered about the rose paths inhaling draught after draught of their sweetness and looking always for the one pink beauty. The moonlight turned them all about until they looked like little pale souls playing about in the garden.

"You beauty!" she cried aloud when her fingers found the one they sought. "Oh—h, but you have thorns!" she murmured as she tried to break the stem.

"Perhaps I can cut it for you," a voice, musical and rich, came out from the moonlight.

"Oh—h!" Delicia slipped quietly down among the roses.

The man hastily threw away his cigar and stooped over the girl.

"Great Scott! I didn't mean to startle you, child!" He picked the pink cloud up in his arms and gazed down at her face. "You beauty," he muttered under his breath.

Martin Duane picked a great rose bud hastily and drew it gently across the girl's brow. It was cool and Delicia's eyes opened slowly.

"Thank goodness," cried the man as his eyes looked deep into the great gray ones. So fascinated was he that he forgot for the moment that he was holding her close in his arms.

"I am better now," she said.

He released her and said quickly "I am a brute to have startled you, so especially when I have waited so long for you to come down from your sky."

Delicia cast a startled glance at him. "You have known?"

"I saw you slip through your gate and into this house almost the first day," Martin Duane spoke with a wonderful tenderness. "You had on something pink—like this." He touched the scarf that hung from her shoulder. "That is why I put in so many pink flowers," he said simply.

Delicia looked up at the man and her breath came quickly.

"And I would have taken your very finest rose," he corrected her. "I had made up my mind that if I hadn't managed to meet you before that rose came into full bloom that I would send it up to you with a plea for you."

"It is in full bloom," said Delicia softly.

The man stooped over the bush and cut the rose. He very carefully removed all the thorns and put it into her hand.

A moment later he said: "I have bought this place."

Delicia was silent for a moment, but in that moment something, subtle and intangible though it was, told her that she need never give up the pink den.

NEW YORK HARD ON TROUSERS

Western Visitor Wears Out His Pocket Edges Digging Down After the Money.

The man from the west was in a clothing emporium in Broadway selecting a pair of trousers.

"By heck," he said as he pawed over the pile before him, "this here town of New York is the beatin'est place on pants I ever got up against."

Out in my town any hand-me-down pants will buy me good for a year, starting in with Sundays for the first three months and week days for the rest of the time. These I've got on were my best and not quite three months old. Now look at 'em," and he showed the clerk the left hand pockets, hip and side. The cloth was entirely worn off the edges and the white showed like a line of surf.

"How did that happen?" inquired the clerk, surprised, but sympathetic.

"This town did it, that's what. I carry my change and all my bills in the left side pocket and my bank roll in a book in the hip, and by heck, I've been going down into them pockets so often for money since I've been in New York that I've worn the edges off till they don't look as if I had a cent to my name. Everywhere I go, everything I do, everywhere I meet calls for the stuff, and I've got to answer. I've got it all right, but it's mighty hard on pants. And the wear and tear is just the same whether I go after a dime or a dollar. I've been wearing pants for 40 years and this is the first time anything like that ever happened to 'em."

"Have you ever been in New York before?" inquired the clerk kindly.

"Never till two weeks ago, and I'm getting out of it day after tomorrow."

"I'm sorry," said the clerk. "I'd like to sell you another pair of trousers, soon."

Cattle in the Low Countries.

The raising of cattle forms one of the most important agricultural industries in the Netherlands, and the Holland herds, some of which can trace their pedigree back for centuries, are justly famous. The standard color is black and white in irregular blotches, but red and white and mouse-gray animals have also been raised.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

He leaves besides his parents, three brothers and three sisters. The funeral was held Tuesday morning in St. Cecilia's church with a mass of requiem, Rev. M. J. O'Connell of Palmer officiating. A special car conveyed the funeral party to St. Thomas' cemetery, Thorndike, where burial took place. There was a large number of floral tributes.

BRIMFIELD.

Rehearsals for the senior play of the Academy to be given at the close of the term began this week. The drama selected is Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," as adapted by William Warren.

The annual church meeting and roll call was held Monday evening, with a smaller attendance than usual on account of the severe weather. Letters were read from the following: Mrs. James T. Brown, Mrs. Emily Wilkinson, Miss Julia C. Brown and Mrs. Lathrop of Springfield, Mrs. Rose Robinson of South Hadley, Miss Addie Battersby of West Brookfield, Mrs. Levi Chase of Sturbridge, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Booth, who are spending the winter in Georgia, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Stowell and Mrs. Elder of Brimfield, who were unable to be present. At the business meeting, William Bissell was elected deacon for four years. The following church officers were re-elected: Clerk, Edward B. Brown; treasurer, Miner Corbin; auditor, Fred Bissell.

BELCHERTOWN.

The annual concert and ball of the Vernon lodge of Odd Fellows will be held in Park View hall on the evening of February 22d.

Information has recently been received from the trustees of the Lawrence Memorial fund created under the will of Mrs. Sara T. D. Robinson of Lawrence, Kan., that the amount of money that will be available for the memorial building given by Mrs. Robinson in her will to her native town of Belchertown, in memory of her father, the late Myron Lawrence, will be between $20,000 and $25,000. A short time after Mrs. Robinson's death a dispatch from Lawrence stated that the amount would be about $75,000, but the trustees state that Mrs. Robinson estimated that her residuary estate for the purpose of the memorial building would amount to from $20,000 to $25,000 and they now consider this amount a conservative estimate of what can be devoted to the purpose.

WARREN.

Lexall—McNamara.

The marriage of Mrs. Viola C. Lexall and George McNamara took place Monday afternoon at the parochial residence of St. Paul's church, Rev. J. P. McCaughan officiating. Mr. and Mrs. McNamara left in the afternoon for a short trip and on their return will live on Maple street.

At a meeting of Warren Grange last Friday evening, the officers for 1912 were installed by Deputy H. C. Stoddard of North Brookfield, assisted by Mrs. Stoddard as marshal. The officers are: Master, Charles E. Bliss; overseer, Archer N. Tuttle; lecturer, Charles E. Wilson; steward, Herbert Underwood; assistant steward, Elias Cutler; chaplain, William E. Savings Bank Annual.

Institution Shown to be in Fine Shape.
Officers Elected.

The incorporators of the Palmer Savings Bank held their annual meeting Tuesday afternoon and elected these officers: President, Henry G. Loomis; vice presidents, Roscius C. Newell, Walter E. Stone, Charles F. Smith; clerk, George A. Rice; trustees, George D. Moores, Lewis R. Holden, Charles E. Fuller, George S. Holden, John O. Hamilton, Michael J. Dillon, Lurin J. Potter, Edward B. Taylor, Hiram E. W. Clark, Charles A. LeGro, Charles L. Waid, Ernest E. Hobson, Henry G. Loomis, George A. Rice, Roscius C. Newell, Walter E. Stone, Charles F. Smith. The trustees elected the following officers: Board of investment, Henry G. Loomis, Charles F. Smith, Walter E. Stone, Hiram E. W. Clark, Ernest E. Hobson; auditors, W. E. Stone, E. B. Taylor, C. A. LeGro.

The report of the treasurer, Charles L. Waid, showed the institution to be in a most satisfactory condition. It was announced that the accounts have been twice audited by an expert during the year. Mention was made of the establishment by the bank of a school savings system during the year and the opening of 250 accounts by pupils of the town. The total assets and liabilities of the bank are $2,802,270, an increase of $105,402 during the year. The deposits increased $97,071 during the year, and $4900 was added to the guarantee fund; the undivided profits increased $2669. The number of depositors is 5973, and the total deposits $452,487. There were 4010 payments, amounting to $453,390; the earnings were $124,489 and the dividends $91,291. The number of new accounts was 1056 and 812 were closed. The surplus is actually larger by $6837 than the amount given, as the bonds which are charged at par are considerably above par in the present market.

Will Hold Benefit Whist.

District Nursing Association Will Entertain on the 23d.

The Palmer Society for District Nursing announces that it will hold a benefit whist party in Memorial Hall on the evening of Tuesday, the 23d. There will be whist from 8 to 10.30, with dancing from 10.30 until 12. Ice cream and cake and fruit punch will be for sale. The tickets will be offered for sale in a few days by members of the committee in charge; they will also be on sale in several public places. The nursing association finds itself very much in need of funds and takes this method of partially supplying the need. On this account it is hoped that there will be a liberal purchase of tickets. The committee in charge is Mrs. H. C. Cheney, Mrs. H. W. Holbrook, Mrs. F. N. Carpenter, Miss Emma Mulvihill, Miss Hazel Dillon, Mrs. M. Sullivan of Bondsville, Mrs. F. W. Harrison, Miss Alice Oakes, Mrs. G. S. Holden. The personnel of the committee is a guarantee that the evening will be an enjoyable one.

Scramble For Piano.

Several Societies and Persons Collecting For the Instrument.

The piano contest recently inaugurated by Lynde & Gould is likely to prove exciting before the end, which is not until next December. Several societies and individuals are of the opinion that the instrument would be a nice thing to have, and are already soliciting and collecting coupons from those who do not care to enter the contest themselves. At the meeting of Quabog council, Royal Arcanum, Tuesday evening it was decided to "get into the game" and see if the instrument cannot be secured for the use of the council. Another contestant is the Ladies' Society of the Baptist church, and an organization of young people with no particular name but banded together for a good time is making a round-up of coupons. Besides these there are several individuals who are in the race, which promises a sharp contest as time goes on.

Money Comes Easy.

Special Town Meeting Gives Boards Additional Funds Requested.

It is said that there were just seven voters—other than the janitor of the building—at the special town meeting called for last Saturday. David L. Bodfish was chosen moderator. Someone made a motion that $1000 be appropriated for the overseers of the poor; it was done. Another motion that $1000 be given the selectmen for contingencies was also unanimously carried. There was no statement by any town official that the money was needed, but that was taken for granted, as it had been so stated "around town" previously. The board of health decided that it did not need any more funds. The treasurer was authorized to borrow the money, giving the notes of the town therefor.

Clerk of Court's Report.

Clerk Arthur E. Fitch of the District Court of Eastern Hampden has made his annual report of the receipts and expenditures of the past year, as follows:

Receipts—Witness fees, $475; fines due county, $55; sale writs, $150; entries, $21; fines payable to towns, $1031.44; fines payable state, $40; bail, $1330; bail fees, $72; recognition fees, $30; total, $3175.94.
Disbursements—County treasurer, $151.24; complainants, $27.50; witnesses, $373.76; officers' fees, $102.10; town treasurers, $110.34; state, $40; bail returned, $1330; personal receipts, $72; cash on hand, recognition, $50; officers' fees certified to town treasurers, $307.14; total, $3175.94.

Steamer Goes to Three Rivers.

The auto truck and steamer were taken to Three Rivers yesterday afternoon to down out the last remnants of the Sunday morning fire. A pile of coal in one of the basements near another building had begun to blaze up briskly, and with a natural nervousness regarding fire those nearest wished to be on the safe side. A couple of hours' work put an effectual damper on the flames.

Palmer National Bank Officers.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Palmer National Bank Tuesday forenoon resulted in the election of these officers: Directors, Edward Fairbanks of Warren, E. G. Childs of Boston, H. W. Holbrook, J. F. Foley and C. A. LeGro of Palmer. These organized later with the choice of E. G. Childs as president, Charles A. LeGro as vice president, and Louis J. Brainerd as clerk.

H. H. Hall has purchased the Dimmock house on Park street.

Miss Sara Sherman of Oak street spent Sunday with friends in Wales.

John E. Duffy of Cambridge spent Sunday at his home on South Main street.

A sleighride party of West Warren school pupils visited Palmer yesterday afternoon.

The public school teachers of the village are planning for a sleighride to Brimfield to-morrow.

A food sale was held this afternoon in the old Journal office on Main street by the district nursing association.

Miss Madeline Fuller has returned to her home, after spending two weeks with Miss Bertha Hunnwell in Attleboro.

Frank Santucci has bought of Mrs. Katherine Mullany her house and lot on the corner of South Main and Fox streets.

In the district court Tuesday John Heywood of Monson was found guilty of drunkenness and given 30 days in the house of correction.

The body of Mrs. Fannie V. McElwain, a former resident of Palmer, who died in Boston Sunday, was brought to Palmer yesterday noon for interment in the Four Corners cemetery.

A few sleighs were taken out Monday, but the "slipping" was none too good. Tuesday brought out a considerable number of light ones however, the additional snow of the night before making good going for the runners.

While the snow of last week spoiled the skating, the youngsters have been having fine times sliding down hill this week, the slight snow and rain of Monday night, followed by freezing Tuesday, adding an additional surface to one already in pretty fair condition.

A "drunk" gathered in by Officer Crimmins Wednesday night had to be taken to the Monson lockup, as there was no heat in the Palmer quarters. New pipes are being installed in the building, and all the radiators were disconnected Wednesday and yesterday.

The work of rehearsal upon the senior class play is well under way. The play is an original and clever one with interest sustained to the very end. It is something entirely different from anything given before by the students of the Palmer high school. Don't forget the date, February 16th.

The Congregational Society held a social in the parsonage Wednesday evening, and a feature of the entertainment was a collection of pictures of the older church members, taken when in their teens. The pictures were placed about the rooms and those present were asked to guess the identity of the photos. Refreshments were served during the evening.

The Middle Mass. Chemical Company held its annual meeting Tuesday and elected these officers: Clerk, Dr. S. O. Miller; treasurer, E. W. Carpenter; directors, H. W. Holbrook, Dr. J. P. Schneider, Dr. M. B. Hodskins, Dr. G. A. Moore, E. W. Carpenter. At a meeting of the directors these officers were chosen; President, Dr. J. P. Schneider; vice president, H. W. From the Wigwam

By Belle Maniates

It was a small and not fashionable resort, such as spring up in mushroom multitude in the lake region of the north. Roger Sheldon had sought the obscurity ostensibly for a fortnight's fishing, but in reality to be alone with his thoughts and to seek solace in the pine forests for an unrequited love.

If he had been younger, or, perhaps, older, he would have turned to mundane material for alleviation, but he was a quiet, self-constrained man with a becoming suspicion of gray already at his temples. He was so entirely relegated to the "oldest set" that he had scarcely entered into the thoughts or life of young Judith Cary until he asked her to marry him.

She had said him nay, but she had been so startled by the look she had met in his eyes that the impression had served to keep him in her memory; but Roger, who had worshipped mostly from afar, quietly and man-fully accepted his rebuff and withdrew to this remote spot that he might not suffer the acute anguish of witnessing her acceptance of the devotion of another man.

By the irony of fate the names above his on the register were "Mrs.
Richard Cary, Miss Cary."

While deliberating whether to submit to Nemesis or to beat a retreat unseen, for his arrival was at a very early hour in the morning, Judith appeared before him on the dock, winsome and winning.

"Oh," she said, coloring with the consciousness of a young girl.

"I thought you always went to the seashore," he said, after they had formally shaken hands.

"Mother is not very well, and the doctor prescribed a quiet, secluded spot."

"Isn't this an early hour for you to be out?" he asked.

"I was going to row over to that stretch of woods across the bay to see some Indians who are camping there."

Standing Like a Sentinel Before One of Them.

They are civilized Indians, but mother would not approve, so I am running away."

"I was running away, too," he said smiling. "Suppose we run away or row away together."

"From whom are you running away?" she asked as she stepped into the boat.

"Myself."

"You can't do that, you know," she said sagely, and feeling that they were on dangerous ground, she deftly changed the subject.

When they were nearing the woods,
he looked up anxiously at a darkening sky.

"Storms come up quickly in these parts," he said, bending to the oars with renewed strength. Before they could land, the rain came down in torrents, the wind blew a gale, lashing the waves to a fury, and the sudden darkness was only relieved by lurid flashes of lightning. Sheldon glanced at his young companion keenly.

"Are you afraid?" he asked, curiously.

"No," she replied gravely, but the thought came to her that she was only unafraid because she felt such entire reliance upon his protection.

After a short tramp through the dense woods, they came upon a clearing where three tents were pitched.
Standing like a sentinel before one of them was an Indian. At the sound of their voices, a white woman, soft-eyed and mild-mannered came forth. She at once took Judith inside the tent and brought forth clean dry clothing.
While donning these garments, Judith chatted with the woman who told her that her husband had attended school at a mission for some time and that she had there met and married him, but that his wandering nature finally prevailed against new ways, and they camped and traveled during the summer.

"Doesn't it seem odd to be married to an Indian?" Judith couldn't resist asking.

"I never think of his being an Indian—and I love him," the woman replied gravely. "You will understand how that is some day. Maybe you do, now. Is the gentleman with you your sweetheart?"

"No—I don't know—maybe," she stammered, blushing.

"They came outside the tepee as she spoke, and she at once knew by an odd look in Roger's eyes that he had overheard their conversation.

"Mr. E-tar-we-geshig is preparing us a breakfast," he said, pointing to a kettle suspended from a slanting stick.

After a palatable breakfast they walked down to the bay. The storm was over, but its effects were still visible on the tumultuous body of water.

"Our host informs me that it is sometimes 24 hours before the bay is navigable after a storm."

"Oh! Mother will worry!"

"We will walk around to the light-house and telephone to the hotel. How would you like to be a prisoner in an Indian camp for 24 hours?"

"I think it would be novel and interesting," she declared. "Will—you like it?"

"His eyes glistened."

"It will be a day to remember."

"An Indian summer day," she suggested.

After telephoning they returned to the camp and inspected the Indian wares. Later in the afternoon a beautiful young Indian girl, the sister of E-tar-we-geshig, returned from a neighboring village.

"She can tell your fortune," suggested the white woman, knowing the weakness of her race.

"That will be lovely!" cried Judith enthusiastically. "Wouldn't you like to have yours told?" She appealed to Sheldon.

"My fortune has been told," he said significantly, with a shade of sadness in his voice.

She dropped her eyes and followed the Indian girl to the tepee. When she returned she was lighthearted.

"She foretold me a beautiful future," she informed Roger. "Won't you let her tell yours?"

He shook his head smiling.

"Please!" she urged, her eyes and voice pleading.

With a little laugh of compliance
he went into the tepee.

"Was it a good fortune?" asked Judith shyly when he came out.

"Very good; too good to be true,"
he said, looking at her intently.

At twilight the waters of the bay became suddenly tranquil. After a liberal purchase of baskets and Indian-ware, they bade the family adieu and went down to the landing place. The west wind of the evening sighed through the rustling branches, wafting the fragrant odor of balsam. The first glint of the stars came out and the shadows gathered closer.

Roger suddenly turned from the boat and led Judith a few feet distant to a pine tree that towered in solitary grandeur from its fellows.

"Judith, I am going to tell you again that I love you. Is there any hope that you can come to care for me?"

There was a second's tremulous st-lence.

"I love you now, Roger!"

"When did you come to love me?"
he asked, as they sped away across the water.

"I knew this morning—in the storm."

"If I hadn't consulted the young prophetess of the wigwam," he said musingly, "I never should have ventured to ask you a second time. She told me I loved a shy maiden who had refused me because she didn't know her heart at the time, and that if I would ask her again at twilight underneath a solitary pine, she would say yes. I owe my happiness to her."

"Roger!"

"Well?" he asked after a pause.

"You don't owe it to her! I told her what to say!"

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake If You Follow This Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are common symptoms of kidney trouble, and you should seek a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use.
It has cured many stubborn cases in this vicinity.

Can Palmer residents demand further proof than the following testimonial?

Mrs. G. H. Taylor, 23 Church St., Thorndike, Mass., says: "I willingly confirm all I said in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills when I publicly endorsed them some years ago. I was in misery from kidney complaint and I was unable to turn in bed without grasping something for support. I was rarely free from pain and I knew that something must be done.
Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills I obtained a box and the first few doses had a beneficial effect. I continued taking this remedy and before long I was free from pain and enjoying good health."

THORNDIKE.

SHOTS BARELY MISSED HIM.

Three Revolver Bullets Fired Through Barn Close to Man.

Some unknown person created no little excitement on Commercial street the past week by firing three shots into the barn used by Robert Ducey, of the firm Ducey & Keir, to keep their automobile. Mr. Ducey was in the barn at the time and the shots came so close to him that he made a hasty retreat from the building. An investigation of the surroundings was made, but no one was found.

Officers Installed.

The Ladies' Auxiliary, A. O. H., Div. No. 7, met in their hall in Exchange building Sunday afternoon to install the newly chosen officers of the division. Mrs. Katherine Howard Griffin of Holyoke, county president, was the installing officer; Mrs. Mary McCarthy of Westfield, state vice president, was also present. Following the installation exercises an entertainment was furnished by members of the local auxiliary after which a meeting of the county board was held, delegates being present from each society in the county as follows: Holyoke, Westfield, Chicopee, Chicopee Falls, Ludlow, Springfield and Thorndike. After the meeting of the county board the members went by special electric to the Burns Hotel, Palmer, where a banquet was held, covers being laid for 75 people. The newly installed officers were: President, Miss Marguerite Griffin; vice president, Miss Anna Fogarty; financial secretary, Miss Nellie L. Sullivan; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Loftus; recording secretary, Miss Katherine Sugrue; sergeant-at-arms, Mrs. Josephine Donohue; sentinel, Miss Katherine Donovan.

Fire Protection Wanted.

Many Thorndike people went to Three Rivers Sunday to view the ruins of the serious fire which took place there at an early hour Sunday morning. Many of the citizens feel that it would be perhaps wise as well as prudent for the villages outside Palmer to be provided with a small chemical engine with which fires could be extinguished or at least be kept under control until help could be summoned from Palmer. The situation in this village is identical with that of the villages of Bondsville and Three Rivers, where residents have to rely wholly upon the help rendered by the mill companies. The cost of small chemical hand engines would not be great when the amount of property which might be saved is taken into consideration.

Lamp Overturned, But Fire Prevented.

A perhaps serious fire was averted Saturday night in the home of Ernest Masse, who resides on Main street, by the prompt assistance rendered by neighbors. A lighted lamp was accidentally overturned. RULER MAKES THE SEASONS

When Emperor of China Declares It Is Summer People All Do White Clothing.

The emperor of China has some strange duties. One of these is the ordering of the seasons. It is summer in America when the sun warms the earth, and not until then, but in China, it is summer when the emperor (or, at the present time, the regent) says it is summer. As soon as the emperor declares that summer has come everybody in China puts off winter clothing, and arrays himself in summer garb, no matter what his feelings on the subject may be. All domestic arrangements are made to suit the season, and they may not suit the individual at all. The nearest approach to the Chinese system of ordering the seasons is the practice observed in France in all public buildings. There it is winter on and after October 1. Fires are the lighted in all government offices, and the employees exchange their white summer waistcoats for the thicker and darker ones of winter. At that date the public libraries are closed at four, and in the streets the sellers of toasted chestnuts make their appearance. In official France it is winter, no matter what the weather may say, and no matter what unofficial France may think.

The manager of a local department store took an efficacious method of ridding himself of a troublesome petty shoplifter recently. The woman has been coming into the store and picking up a small remnant, spool of thread, thimble or other article that happened to be lying about, having little intrinsic value, but being nevertheless a source of annoyance to both the clerk and the management. Because of the paition of the woman, it was undesirable to institute an action.

A few days ago the manager took a spool of silk from the case, fastened the loose end of the thread with a tack, and allowing a bit of slack, left it upon the counter. It was not long before his party arrived, and deftly dropping the spool into her shopping bag, started out. The manager detached the loose end and followed her up the street, a few yards in the rear. He trailed her into another downtown store, and, as she was standing beside a counter in the midst of a crowded array of bargain seekers, approached her, calmly winding his thread and politely said:

"Madame, I'll trouble you for that spool of thread."

What followed can be more easily imagined than described. He got the thread and has not been troubled with losses since, nor have the other stores, so far as may be learned.—Milwaukee Free Press

That by virtue of said consolidation your petitioner has a location and a right to operate and is operating its cars on its own track over a certain bridge in the town of Palmer, known as the Boston and Albany bridge No. 95, being a highway bridge over the location and tracks of the Boston and Albany railroad at Palmer center in said County.

Wherefore your petitioner prays that after notice to the Board and Albany Railroad Company and to all other parties interested, your Honorable Board will authorize and order such new bridge to be built in accordance with said plans or otherwise and determine and apportion the expense of building said bridge and improving said crossing and future maintenance of the bridge, between the parties as shall be deemed by the Board to be just, so far as any such apportionment is necessary and is within the jurisdiction of your Board. And for such other order and decrees in the premises as to law and justice may appear.

SPRINGFIELD STREET RAILWAY CO., By Ely & Ely, Its Attorneys.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

At a meeting of the County Commissioners held at Springfield, within and for said county, on the fourth day of January in the year of our Lord, 1912.

And now upon the petition aforesaid, the County Commissioners have considered the same and find that the same are true and correct, and that the same are in accordance with the laws of the Commonwealth.

And they do hereby order that the said new bridge be built in accordance with the plans filed herewith, and that the expense of building said bridge and improving said crossing and future maintenance of the bridge, between the parties as shall be deemed by the Board to be just, so far as any such apportionment is necessary and is within the jurisdiction of your Board. And for such other order and decrees in the premises as to law and justice may appear.

True copy of the petition and order of the County Commissioners thereon.

WHERE PLATINUM IS FOUND

Rare Metal in Small Quantities Usually Is Associated With Gold in Gravel Beds.

Platinum is found associated with gold, principally in gravel beds. The ordinary source is accumulations of gravel which have been eroded from extensive area and gradually concentrated in one locality by the continued action of water. It is a rare metal and the accumulation must be from a great extent of country if a paying deposit is to be developed.

Platinum is of a silver gray color which is rarely tarnished. Its development is similar to gold, except that where gold is usually associated with quartz and light colored rocks platinum will be found more commonly with dark colored rocks, and especially those of a greenish shading.

It is found only in small quantities, except at two or three localities. Western Colombia and eastern Russia have gravel beds which afford the principal supply of this metal. Elsewhere it is found over considerable areas, but not sufficiently concentrated to be of importance. It may be looked for among the formations adjacent to regions of old volcanic activity.

The distribution is principally in altered rocks, and segregation seems to have been the principal cause contributing to its collection in ore bodies. The deposits found up to the present time have been of irregular mineralization and not of great extent, consequently all platinum deposits must be considered with caution.

Of the rare metals associated with platinum, iridium, osmium, palladium and others, little need be said because of their rarity. If found they will be associated with platinum and will be known by the greater hardness, brighter surface and greater specific gravity.—Moody's Magazine.

Flavia's Lullaby

By Dorothy Douglas

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

"And what is Miss Ransom's opinion on the subject?"

Eric Hope turned deliberately and faced the girl who had remained silent during the discussion. For a second she met the cold blue eyes of his, and then said, not defiantly, but calmly and with a just sense of having reasoned her words:

"Children are very wonderful—but I think they are by no means the only blessing in the world, nor do I consider them essential to the complete happiness of a man and a woman."

Flavia's cool, undisturbed glance rested for a moment on Eric Hope's face. He returned the look steadily, then replied with a short laugh:

"It is rather unfair to judge all happiness from your own unemotional standpoint."

A deep flush mounted Flavia's face. For a second it seemed to the dinner guests that an open battle was imminent. They waited for Flavia to speak.

A low ripple of mockery preceded her answer. "How absurd of you to suppose, Mr. Hope, that I would judge that question from my own standpoint." She laughed unrestrainedly and swept in the circle of guests with an affectionate smile. "Every one here knows that my voice is my child, my love and my world; it gives pleasure to my friends, infinite joy to myself, and—"

"What child, no matter how wonderful, could do more?"

A short silence followed her words. Tom Nicholson's voice broke it.

"Hear, hear!" he cried. "I think you've hit the nail pretty nearly on the head, Flavia."

"Tom!" Connie Nicholson flashed an indignant glance at the father of Thomas, Jr.

"My dearest Connie," put in Nicholson, quickly, "I referred only to Flavia's particularly unique happiness."

Why, that fragment of humanity in the clothes basket upstairs was the saving straw to our domestic—

"Tom!"

Eric Hope laughed aloud. "You've put both feet in it now," he said.

Suddenly a blank look overspread Tom Nicholson's face. "That reminds me, Connie; who is going to stay with Stepped Out for a Breath of Air.

Thomas, Jr., tonight? Nurse won't be back until tomorrow and I promised Drake's we'd be over."

A flash of happiness lighted up Connie's face, then died away with a heavy sigh.

"I'll have to call up Edna and tell her we—or rather I—can't come," she said bravely.

"And break up the whole blooming crowd," growled her husband. "Can't you tie the clothes basket on the back of the carriage and take him along?"

"And bump my precious boy over ten miles of rocky road at 3 o'clock in the morning! Besides, it's a basketette—not a clothes basket."

"This makes the seventh dance we've missed on account of that—nurse," finished Tom, lamely.

Flavia laughed. "Why don't you say baby when it's on the tip of your tongue?" She dared not meet the blue eyes of Hope. Something told her that he was not appreciating the humor of the situation.

"Flavia, dear," sighed Connie, "you are so blunt."

"Not blunt," returned Flavia—"sensible. And I am going to be even more sensible and offer to stay with the baby. I don't care a thing about dancing, and besides," she went on hurriedly as if desirous of hiding her pleasure, "I have a new book of ballads."

"But it is such a sacrifice," put in Connie, hopefully.

"Sacrifice?" came the clear voice of Hope. "We all heard Miss Ransom say that her music constituted her world—in that case she is merely doing her desire to be rid of us." There was a tinge of bitterness underlying his words. "I hope, Miss Ransom, that your voice-child will never call forth a sacrifice."

"A child of spirit can scarcely do that," Flavia flung her retort at him half in mockery and half in pain; his words had penetrated beneath the outer calm.

"You two certainly love each other," laughed Tom Nicholson.

"We do," Eric Hope spoke while he lighted a cigar and held Flavia's eyes through the smoke.

An hour later Flavia stood out on the wide veranda and watched the others depart. It was an exquisite moonlit night. She rather envied them the ten-mile drive.

"I hate to leave you all alone," said Connie.

"I am supremely happy," whispered Flavia, "and unafraid."

As they drove off down the lane of elms they heard the rich bel canto tones of Flavia singing an aria from "Faust."

"She certainly loves her music," laughed Nicholson.

"It is everything in the world to her," chimed in Connie.

"Is it?" mused Hope.

Flavia remained at the piano until the clock struck 11. The old servant had long since retired and Flavia stepped out for a breath of cool air before going upstairs.

A persistent rain had begun to fall. Flavia hoped it would stop before the party returned. She went up to the nursery and peeped at the sleeping child. For a long time she stood gazing at him with unseeing eyes, then she turned away and slowly went to her room.

There was a strange, brooding look in her eyes and when she had braided her hair in two long plaits she stole a quick glance at her reflection. Then she covered her face with both hands to hide what she had seen there. Her face grew hot and she stood for a long time before the open window watching the storm break over the night. Then she slipped again to the side of the cradle and, making sure that the infant slept, crept into her own bed.

Toward midnight, when the storm was at its height and the lightning flashed vividly a man dripping and soaked entered the house. He went stealthily up the stairs and slipped into one of the rooms of which the door was open.

A terrible crash of thunder rent the air.

Flavia jumped up hastily, flung on a soft pink something and went swiftly to the nursery. She picked up the small bundle and carried him into the big lounge, purring tender nothings into his tiny ear. His crying ceased after a moment and the man in the open room emerged to follow the sound of Flavia's voice.

She was sitting in a low wicker chair, impervious to the storm, to anything save the small atom in her arms. The pink something had fallen away from her neck and she cuddled the baby close as she crooned her lullaby to him.

The man knew that he was listening to Flavia's voice, but it was a Flavia of whom he had only dreamed. Small wonder the child slept. Her voice was soothing and so warm with love that it drew the man into the room and down on his knees beside her.

"Don't waken him," the girl said. "Lift him carefully into his bassinette."

He trembled as he took the baby from her arms, but all he said was, "Is that clothes basket with the pink stuff his bassinette?"

"Yes," said Flavia, "and when he is safely there you may go down to the library. I will come down later and you may tell me how you came through this dreadful storm. I suppose Connie and Tom will not attempt it."

"I will tell you nothing of the kind," he said under his breath.

Saving Pennies.

"Saving pennies has become quite an industry among a large number of women in this city," said the receiving teller in a national bank. "The same ones come in here regularly to cash their pennies for bills. Some of them have four or five hundred coppers to exchange for bank notes. In most of the cases the women keep wooden or pasteboard boxes as savings banks, and whenever they find a penny in their pocketbooks it is transferred to the box."

"Every night the men in the household examine their change and give the coppers to their wives. They tell me it surprises them how the pennies soon creep to large proportions. With the bills changed for the pennies the women have pin money and can buy a hat, a piece of lace and other articles that appeal to the feminine eye without getting on their knees to their husbands."

"One woman who is a regular visitor here always breaks a five cent piece for change, even though she has plenty of pennies to complete a purchase. It is her rule to gather as many coppers as possible."

Spread of Species.

One of the problems that confront the naturalist is that of accounting for the distribution of identical forms of life through widely separated localities. Investigation frequently shows that this has been accomplished in many ways that appear quite simple when once discovered, although one would hardly have thought of them.

Some interesting facts have been gleaned concerning the dispersion of fresh-water mollusks, accounting for their appearance in remote and isolated ponds. Water fowl play an important part in this work. Ducks have been known to carry mussels attached to their feet a hundred miles or more. Diving mollusks not infrequently cling to the toes of wading birds, and are thus transported for considerable distances. Even aquatic insects have been known to carry small fresh-water mollusks attached to their legs.

Ancient Roman Long Branch.

The sea coast of Laurentum may have been in favor with the fashionable and the wealthy for a brief space of time under Augustus and his immediate successors, but was given up quite soon to parvenues and merchants and retired officers, and the same set of noisy people who haunt at the present day the popular watering places of the world. To make the analogy more striking, an inscription has been found at La Capocotta slaying the praises of a wealthy Jew, and revealing the fact that a synagogue had been built at Ostia for the use of the Semite "villegianti" on the neighboring coast.

WHY HE LIKES WATERMELONS

Colored Man Discusses Philosophical on Those Soothing, Cooling and Filling Fruits.

A well-known lawyer, who is spending his vacation at home doing nothing, or, as he says, "loafing with all his might," tells of a talk he had recently with his colored hired man.

Going to the stable he found John with his face buried in a big piece of watermelon.

"Why is it, John, that colored people are so fond of watermelons?"

"I don't know," he replied, grinning. "less its jes' because dey's people. I knows a heap o' white folks 'at likes 'em, too. I likes 'em 'cause dey's 'sopht in' an' coolin', an' 'fillin', an' 'I souse dey 'stimulates dat a-way wid white folks. I reckon dey ain' much differ ence 'tween white folks and culled folks' insides."

"Perhaps not. Do you consider the watermelon a fruit or a vegetable?"

"Well, now, it's jes' like this: Water melons ain' no vegetable, 'cause dey won't stan' cookin' like cabbage nor cannin' like beans, nor drivin' like red peppers, an' dey ain' no fruit, 'cause dey doan grow on trees an' you can't put 'em in your pockets like apples and peaches. Looks to me like dey's jes' watermelons."

"How would it do to call it the fruit of a cucurbitaceous vine, distinguished for interior pulpiness and copiousness of watery juice?"

"Dat's it, 'zactly," said John; "dat's jus' what I was goin' to say."—Indi anapolis News.

MARRIED SIXTY YEARS.

And Will Hold Celebration in Palmer To-morrow.

FAMILY AND FRIENDS WILL GATHER.

History of Couple's Life Reads Very Much More Like Fiction Than Fact.

In their modest home near Shearer's Corner in Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Laford will to-morrow celebrate the 60th anniversary of their marriage, which took place in 1852. The couple have numerous children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, as well as many friends, and the occasion promises to be one of more than ordinary interest.

Sixty years of life together is vouchsafed to but few married couples.

When added to this there is a generous number of living descendants the event becomes of more than passing interest. To have successfully fought the battle of life for 45 years without hands and with only one arm; to have reared a family of children without assistance from charity in any way; to have maintained through all a disposition ever cheerful and optimistic, is to have accomplished the seemingly impossible. And yet that, in brief, is the record of the man who will to-morrow celebrate the 60th anniversary of his marriage to a woman who has in every way been a helpmeet to him, the sharer of his joys and sorrows, and with him a cheerful worker always for the success of the family.

Mr. Laford's life history reads more like fiction than reality. And yet it is reality—stern at times, as he and his good wife well know. Born in St. Thomas, Ontario, July 24, 1834, of French-Canadian parentage, his mother died when Mr. Laford was a year old, and his troubles began. The father deserted the family of seven children, of which little Michael was the youngest, and he was taken by an aunt, who kept him for a year, when he went to live with an uncle, staying there nine years, often ill-treated, half starved and poorly clothed. He had, at the age of 12, seven horses under his charge, which he had to feed and care for morning and night; it was often midnight when he completed his task, and in the morning saw him again on the job. The treatment sure to be accorded him if he failed to rise on time acted as an excellent alarm clock and he was seldom late. It was his duty after a scanty breakfast to take three of the horses in a single hitch and draw logs from the woods, three trips constituting a day's work. The snow was too deep for him to walk and he was obliged to ride the leader. The lad was so ill-treated that he determined to shift for himself, and he left Canada in March, 1855, walking to Clinton, N. Y., the journey taking him three days and leaving him with $1.25 in his pocket. At Clinton he went to work for the Slater Company, chopping wood at 35 cents a cord and burning charcoal. He had married Miss Mary LaMothe three years previous, and he soon managed to save enough to send for her and their one child. On the journey to join her husband the box containing all the clothing of Mrs. Laford and the child was lost, a particularly distressing hardship just at that time. They lived in a log cabin in the woods, 12 miles from a store and seven miles from the doctor, who refused calls because of the mountainous condition of the country. A 12-mile trip and return for provisions after a day's work was not unusual for the young husband, but the couple thrived and five children were born to them there. After 12 years in Clinton Mr. Laford went to Formerly Lived in Palmer.

Death of Mrs. Blanche T. Clarenbach in Springfield.

The Palmer friends of Mrs. Blanche T. Clarenbach, 31, wife of George E. Clarenbach, were shocked to learn of her death which occurred at her home in Springfield Monday morning after a short illness. She was born in Palmer March 28, 1880, the daughter of George W. and the late Alice Jones Lyman. She lived in Palmer until the removal of her parents to Springfield about 13 years ago. She was married in that city June 12, 1907, to George E. Clarenbach of Holyoke and removed to the latter city, where she lived until the death of her mother in 1910, when she returned to Springfield. She was a member of Hope Congregational church. She leaves, besides her husband, one daughter, Virginia Lyman Clarenbach, and her father. The funeral was held from her late home Wednesday afternoon and burial was in Oak Grove cemetery. There was an unusually large number of floral offerings.

Malone, N. Y.; entering the employ of Charles Rood, Lumbering was the leading industry of that time, and Mr. Laford took contracts for cutting timber and cleaning wood lots. After a time he removed to Stafford, Ct., continuing the same work.

About 45 years ago, while at work on a big circular saw in a saw mill, Mr. Laford met with the accident which in a fraction of a minute left him a cripple for the rest of his life. A misstep was made and his left arm was thrown against the saw, the hand being cut off at the wrist; the shock threw him around and against the saw again, which this time took his right arm off at the shoulder. The man with him ran away, but Mr. Laford managed to shut down the mill and started for medical assistance; the wonder is that he lived at all. With a wife and six young children—the oldest nine years of age—most men would have given up then and there, but in five weeks this man of undaunted courage was at work again as best he could. He continued the same work as before, clearing wood lots, drawing lumber and railroad ties, and taking any contract which he thought offered a margin of profit. To the uninitiated the possibility of a man with only one arm and no hand making any headway in handling lumber would appear the height of absurdity, but Mr. Laford was an adept at it, and would often move and load pieces which no other man in his employ could handle. He seemed possessed of enormous strength and a wonderful knack of exerting it at the right time and in just the right way. As he prospered he acquired teams to assist him in his contracting, and owned some fine pairs of work horses, which always received the kindest treatment and care. In his work he was assisted by his sons as he grew older, until they married and gave their time to their own families. About 13 years ago the father who so heartlessly deserted the young family years ago, died.

With his other accomplishments Mr. Laford was a good deal of a farmer. He made a specialty of potatoes, and one year planted, hoed, dug, picked up and carried into the cellar 135 bushels of the tubers. The picture given in connection with this article was taken while Mr. Laford was engaged in harvesting a potato crop, and shows the method he uses of compelling the earth to yield up its store. At the age of 71 he walked from Brattleboro, Vt., to Palmer, a distance of 56 miles, and at 75 walked frequently to Springfield, a distance of 15 miles. He took up peddling in later life, and for a number of years was a familiar figure in towns in this section, carrying a small stock of articles sure to be useful in the household, for which he found many sales and added materially to his income. He now has a little store which he conducts near the wire mill. Two years ago cataracts threatened to leave him blind, but friends who had long known him provided for an operation which gave him one good eye, and life looked brighter to him. A fall on the ice gave him a severe hip injury, but he recovered and is again about his accustomed duties.

Although Mr. Laford never uses intoxicating liquors he is a lover of tobacco, and it is interesting to see him light a cigar. Laying it on the edge of the table with his teeth, he takes a match in the same manner and lighting it lights the cigar, which he then picks up and proceeds to enjoy.

Mr. and Mrs. Laford have had ten children; three died when young and seven are still living. They are Mrs. Virginia Deshayes of Worcester, a son, John, who has not been heard from for several years, Michael Jr., George, Mrs. Georgianna Lavin, Mrs. Alvina Smart and Mrs. Mary Barsalou, all living in Palmer. There are also 29 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Arcanum Installs Officers.

Delegation from Springfield. Jewel for Past Regent Dillon.

Quabong council, Royal Arcanum, closed Tuesday evening the most eventful year in its history, and installed a new set of officers, as follows: Regent, C. A. Royce; vice regent, L. E. Chandler; orator, Dr. S. B. Keith; guide, F. L. Morway; secretary, James Summers; collector, R. E. Cummings; treasurer, W. L. Shaw; chaplain, E. C. Gould; warden, H. W. Forsman; sentinel, M. J. Farrelly; past regent, D. F. Dillon; trustee for three years, G. A. Rice. The installing officer was District Deputy A. L. Bellden of Springfield, who had with him a suite from that city. They were accompanied by about 50 others from Equity and Pyncheon councils, who came out to congratulate Quabong council on the record it had during the year. In the past twelve months 50 new members have been initiated, a growth of almost 50 per cent. A buffet lunch was served after the installation. A feature of the evening was the presentation to David F. Dillon, the retiring regent, of a handsome past regent's jewel. This number on the program was a complete surprise, and for a time "Dav" hardly knew what to say—and that's saying a good deal. He responded gracefully however, after he had collected his thoughts, and in a pleasing manner thanked the council for the gift in a speech which brought out some new ideas in Arcanumism.

Death of Civil War Veteran.

Henry M. Bliss, Native of Monson, in Wesson Hospital.

Henry M. Bliss, 65, died about 9:30 Tuesday morning in the Wesson Memorial hospital in Springfield, where he had gone only a few days before for treatment. Mr. Bliss was about the street as usual on Saturday of week before last, but on Wednesday of last week began to have trouble with his heart and went to the hospital for treatment. He had a premonition two weeks ago that the end was near, for he remarked to a friend that he was "about done." Mr. Bliss was born in Monson March 2, 1846, and lived in that town for many years. He enlisted in A Co., First Heavy Artillery, September 2, 1864, and was discharged May 30, 1865. He was for a time a member of Marcus Keep Grand Army post of Palmer, and was an officer of that post at the time of his death. For the past 15 years he had been employed in the cemeteries of the town, in the care and improvement of which he took a large interest. Besides a widow he leaves one sister, Mrs. Amelia Hollingsworth of East Wilbraham. Mr. Bliss was a member of the Baptist church of Palmer, from which the funeral was held yesterday afternoon, with burial in Oak Knoll cemetery.

Attempted Burglary at Warren.

An attempt at burglary was made at 2:15 o'clock Sunday morning at the home of Charles L. Converse on East Main street in Warren, but the intruders were scared away before they secured anything. Miss May Converse heard a noise down stairs and awakened her mother. As they entered the front hall Mrs. Converse saw a man in the lower hall with a flash-light. Mrs. Converse called out and the men turned and ran out the front door.

Men's League Speaker.

The next meeting of the Men's League will be held in the Congregational church on the evening of Wednesday, the 31st. The speaker will be Amos T. Saunders of Clinton, the author of the Saunders-Park workmen's compensation act, and he will talk on that subject.

NEARLY ELECTROCUTED.

Lineman Has Narrow Escape at Thorndike Wednesday.

2300 VOLTS PASSES THROUGH BODY.

Tumbles From High Pole. Has Bad Burns and Broken Leg, But Will Probably Recover.

William Whelan, a lineman in the employ of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, narrowly escaped electrocution in Thorndike Wednesday afternoon about 3 o'clock.

Whelan was employed painting a pole, and was about 25 feet from the ground. The pole carries both telephone and electric light wires. He was standing on a cross arm, and in reaching for his pail of paint at some distance above his head his hand came in contact with a light wire. A current of about 2300 volts passed through his body and held him in place for a few seconds, after which he lost consciousness and dropped to the ground. He received a bad fracture of the right leg above the knee. He was rushed in a sleigh to the home of Mrs. A. P. Adams on Commercial street, and Drs. H. C. Cheney and S. R. Carsey of Palmer summoned by telephone. They did everything possible for the man, and later he was taken to the Mercy hospital in Springfield, where at last accounts he was doing well.

Whelan was one of a crew which has been at work on the property of the telephone company for some time. His plight was first discovered by James Dailey, a former employee of the Central Massachusetts Electric company, and by Patrick Sullivan. When first seen he seemed to be leaning against the pole with his hat off gazing at the sky. Smoke was soon seen to issue from his hand, and in a few seconds he tumbled to the ground. In addition to the broken leg he has severe burns on his left hand and heel.

WARE.

Death of Patrick Kelleher.

Patrick Kelleher, a long-time resident of Ware, died at his home on William street Monday morning of heart disease. He was born in Limerick, Ire., and came to this country 40 years ago. He came soon after to Ware, and had lived there since. He was married soon after his arrival in this country to Miss Mary Ratigan, who survives him, with two daughters and three sons, as follows: Misses Mary and Margaret and William A., James F. and Joseph, all of Ware. The funeral was held yesterday morning with services in All Saints' church and burial was in St. William's cemetery.

Joseph Shea of West street was painfully injured Monday afternoon while coasting in St. William's cemetery. The sled ran into a tree and the boy was thrown against the tree with considerable force. The left ear was nearly torn off and he was otherwise bruised and injured.

A reunion of the Bousquet family was held this week, the eight brothers being together for the first time in 18 years. They are the sons of Toussaint Bousquet of St. Denis, P. Q., and Tuesday with their wives and children they formed a party of 24 for dinner at the home of Ameeus Bousquet on Prospect street. The other brothers are: Ovilva, Adelard and Levi of Ware; Joseph, George and Victor of Springfield and Henry of St. Denis, P. Q.

The officers of All Saints' Court, Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, were publicly installed in the town hall Sunday afternoon by Deputy High Chief Ranger, F. J. McCarthy of Springfield, assisted by the pony degree team of McDermott court of Springfield. There was singing by the Glee Club of the same court, consisting of 35 voices. High Chief Ranger, Dennis Dugan of Watertown, High Inside Sentinel, T. J. Collins, William P. Hayes and Thomas Lovett of Springfield gave addresses. A collation was served by Caterer William Rohan. The officers installed were: Chief Ranger, Andrew Campion; subchief ranger, Mrs. Annie Shea; recording secretary, Miss Mary Dugan; financial secretary, Miss Annie Healey; treasurer, Miss Margaret O. Bryan; senior conductor, Miss Mary Shea; junior conductor, Miss Lucy Martin; inside sentinel, John T. PALMER NEWS.

Plenty of Winter Weather.

Mercury 26 Degrees Below Zero, and Many Water Pipes Freeze.

The person who has been longing for a "good old-fashioned winter" has had his wish, and the one who predicted that January would make up for the mild December is in a position to say
"I told you so." For beginning with a week ago last Saturday the mercury stood at zero or below every morning except one until last Saturday, when it touched 20 below. And just to show what could be done with a little practice it dropped to 26 below Sunday morning. As a consequence there was a noticeable absence from church of heads of families. Frozen water pipes were receiving attention about the time the church bells were ringing, and furnace and boiler fires were pushed hard all day in an effort to keep warm.
These were not wholly successful, for the mercury hovered around zero all day. Sunday night and Monday forenoon there was a fall of about six inches of snow, and another of about two inches Wednesday night. The temperature rose yesterday however and a thaw set in. Rain began to fall in the night and has continued steadily all day; consequently the sleighing, which before was the best known in years, is decidedly nix.

Journal's Voting Contest.

Someone Will Get A Good Bank Account.
Announcement on 1st Page.

On the first page of this paper will be found the preliminary announcement of a grand prize and popularity contest which will be inaugurated next week, when the full details of the conditions which are to govern will be made known. The first prize will be a very nice savings bank account, and will be worth having. There will also be valuable other prizes for the several districts which will be included in the contest territory. It costs nothing to enter the contest, and nothing to remain in and win a prize. On the fifth page will be found a nomination coupon, which may be used to enter any person's name in the contest.

Don't Want Pastor To Go.

Unanimous Vote of Baptist People Asking Mr. Williams to Stay.

The Baptist church held a meeting last evening to act on the resignation of their pastor, Rev. C. W. Williams, who has accepted a call to New Jersey.
It was unanimously voted to ask him to reconsider his resignation, and a committee waited on him with the request. Mr. Williams said that he felt it his duty to go, but he would take the matter under consideration and give a final decision at the church meeting next Thursday evening.

Interesting Pool Contest.

The pool contest among the members of the Palmer Business and Social Club goes merrily on, and some wonderful scores have been made, when it is taken into consideration that the match game was the first some of the contestants has ever played. Each game consists of 100 balls, the number of balls won being credited to each side, the final count to be balls and not games. The greater number of the games have been played and the two sides are only 40 balls apart.

Benefit Whist Next Tuesday Evening.

The Palmer Society for District Nursing will give a benefit whist in Memorial Hall next Tuesday evening, to which an admission of 25 cents will be charged. There will be whist from 8 to 10.30, followed by dancing until 12. The society is very much in need of funds, and it is hoped the attendance will be large. Ice cream and cake, and fruit punch will be for sale.

Masquerade Ball.

Invitations have been sent out for a subscription masquerade ball, to be held in the opera house on the evening of Friday, February ninth. The patronesses are Mrs. G. E. Buck, Mrs.
C. A. LeGro, Mrs. Colin Oaks, Mrs.
E. F. Shaw. The subscriptions are 50 cents.

Samuel Brooks, the tailor, goes to
New York Monday on a business trip.

The sophomore class of the high school is planning a sleighride for next Tuesday evening.

The no-school signal was rung at 11.15 Monday forenoon on account of the severe snow storm.

The school teachers postponed their sleighride, planned for Friday evening of last week, until last evening, when they visited Belchertown.

Dr. G. A. Moore gave a talk yesterday afternoon to the teachers of the public schools, explaining the method of testing the sight and hearing of the pupils.

The people of the south-end of the town are very grateful to C. E. Fuller for the benefit they received after Monday's storm from the snow-plow he recently constructed.

The pupils of the high school started yesterday morning with their new musical schedule. It was the first opportunity that they have had to sing together since last June.

The firemen will hold their 16th annual ball in the opera house this evening. A large number of tickets have been sold, and there will be the usual large attendance and good time.

The freshman and sophomore classes of the Ware high school, with the teachers, came to Palmer Tuesday evening on a sleighride and took supper at the Sego. They attended the moving pictures, returning home about 10 o'clock.

The Palmer Ice Company has begun to harvest ice, and has been cutting this week from the Cider Mill pond on Park street. It has also filled the big refrigerator of Armour & Co. The ice is of good thickness and fine quality.

The body of Samuel Ferry, a former resident, who died at the Soldiers' Home in Maine, was brought to Palmer Tuesday and the funeral was held from Phillips' undertaking rooms on Main street. Burial was in East
Wilbraham.

Mr. and Mrs. John Doherty of Park street announce the marriage of their daughter, Grace Viola, to Charles Oren Peterson, the ceremony taking place in New York Saturday, January 6th. After a trip to Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Peterson will be at home to their friends at 160 Wadsworth avenue, New York city.

A force of men was employed the first of the week digging the ice away from the horse bowl on Main street. The waste water from the bowl overflowed upon the paving in such quantities that ice was formed to a depth of about two feet and extending several feet out into the street. To make it safe for teams the ice had to be picked out and removed.

A sleighride party of about 20 young married couples went to Belchertown Monday evening. They found the roads in poor shape, as the snow had been scraped into the center of the roads and had not been trodden down.
On the trip up one load tipped over in the darkness about midway between Belchertown and Three Rivers, but fortunately no one was hurt.

The eighth and ninth grades of the grammar school had a sleighride to Ware Tuesday night. There was a delay on the return trip and Palmer was not reached until 2 in the morning, causing no little anxiety on the part of some of the parents. The seventh grade went to Monson the same night.
Wednesday night the sixth grade went there, and the fifth grade last night.

Among the Churches.

The annual roll call and supper of St. Paul's church will be held next Wednesday evening in the chapel and

The pulpit at the Advent chapel on Park street will be supplied next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev.
Clarence N. Seamans of Springfield.
The public is invited.

The Y. P. C. U. of St. Paul's church held a business meeting Tuesday evening and elected the following officers:
President, William Clark; vice president, Miss Doris Paine; secretary, Miss Edith M. Richards.

The subject of the sermon at the Battist church Sunday morning will be,
"The Christian as a reflector." Bible school at 12; Y. P. S. C. E. at 6; evening service at 7, sermon subject, "The purpose of God's goodness."

The subject of the sermon at the Congregational church Sunday morning will be "Loneliness." Sunday school at 12; Christian Endeavor service at 6; subject, "Worth-while ambitions;"
evening service at 7, sermon, "Our indebtedness to the Old Testament prophets."

The annual meeting of St. Paul's Universalist church last Friday evening resulted in the election of the following officers: Clerk, Arthur H. Parker; treasurer, Charles E. Fish; collector, Granger C. Kinsley; standing committee, Frank N. Carpenter, Charles H. Keith, Henry W. Holbrook, Horace R. Paine, Ralph B.
Francis, Everett W. Carpenter; music

J. G. Butts, Edwin C. Gould; delegate establishment of this course.

Miss Toolin, the German and French instructor at the high school, has planned to have the first and second year German classes back to school every Friday afternoon to study German music. There are about twenty in the class and they are anticipating much enjoyment from this study.

The following, from the Greenville,
S. C., Daily News of Wednesday of this week will be of interest to the many friends of both families in this vicinity:

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Wing entertained very pleasantly at dinner on Monday evening in honor of her guests, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Northrop, of Palmer, Mass., in celebration of their wedding anniversary. Covers were laid for eight. The informal little dinner was a most enjoyable affair, as Mrs. Wing entertains with gracious hospitality.

A Big Furniture Sale.

Meekins, Packard & Wheat began this week their annual mid-winter clearance of fine furniture. The firm has again secured the co-operation of half a dozen of the leading manufacturers, affording them an opportunity to close out, through this sale, their surplus stock and all patterns which they will not make the coming season.
Several carloads of new high-grade furniture have been put in this sale at fully 25 per-cent less than regular prices. This sale also includes every pattern now in stock which the firm will not carry the coming season, making an immense lot of fine furniture for every room in the house at reductions of from one-quarter to one-half less than regular prices.

Big Dry Goods Clearance Sale.

On the eighth page of this paper will be found an announcement of the annual clearance sale at the big Steiger store in Springfield. This store has an enviable reputation for carrying an unusually high grade of merchandise, consequently a clearance sale there means high grade goods at greatly reduced rates. These low prices have been put on everything in this store's big stock, nothing being reserved, consequently an unusual opportunity is presented for the purchase of seasonable goods at figures far below the regular prices. Four large floors and basement are crowded with bargaining.

His Apprenticeship

By Donald Allen

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Mr. John Degraw, the sturdy, steady old broker and banker, sat in the library of his office at home waiting for his son Perry to come in for an interview. Perry was a young man of twenty-eight, and there had been interviews in the past—many interviews. They had been held for Perry's benefit, but he had not seemed to benefit thereby.

This was to be a sort of farewell interview. Not that the father expected to die soon, or expected his son to die, or intended to turn him outdoors, but he had been saving up some vigorous opinions for a year past which were to be delivered on this occasion.

It may be said of Mr. Perry Degraw that he had an income—he belonged to three clubs—he thought he was fast—he had been abroad, and he was no masquerade. In spite of all he could do to be a tremendous fellow, he was considered to have principles and to be harmless. Perry was not a college graduate. He had developed no talent for business or a profession. He was just taking things easy and getting ready to shoot tigers in India and elephants in Africa. The father had fretted and fumed more or less, but there had been no change.

Enter the son for the interview. The father sat with a stern look on his face.

"Oh, now, governor, I say, don't greet a fellow this way," said Perry, who had on his English morning suit and was speaking to match the checks.

"Son," said the father after a long look at him, "you are an ass!"

"B'jove, governor!"

"A silly ass, Perry!"

"You can't mean it!"

"Five times: ten times over. You are a cipher. You have a cabbage head on your shoulders. You would not know enough to come in when it rained if a policeman didn't give you a shove."

"Am I too fast, governor?" asked the astonished Perry.

"Too fast! Why, son, you don't know the meaning of the word. You couldn't be fast. You were never drunk in your life. You never had over two cocktails in an evening. You never won or lost over $5 on a horse race. The newspapers never refer to you as a high roller."

"But, Governor, the fellows all say—"

"I know it. They all say that you are a would-be, but you haven't the brains to blossom out. Sorry for you, son—mighty sorry. I know just how you must feel."

"But this isn't fair, doncher know," protested Perry.

"There you go with another of your sap-headed words! Lord, but what an empty pate! You spent three months in London, and you came back with English clothes and English 'donchers.' Does an Englishman go back home from the States to ape us and make a fool of himself?"

"That's a new one on me, Governor. I must get that off at the club. Is the interview at an end?"

"Almost. I just want to say that the other day you quite finished your career as a braying ass. It has come to my ears that you made a wager with another of your ilk that you would have the widow Strong in love with you within a year."

"Yes, Governor—a bet of ten dollars," complacently replied the son.

"And you have never even been introduced to her!"

"Never, Gov."

"By thunder, but you are forty fools rolled into one! What's a father to do with such an offspring?"

"Oh, I'll win the wager all right. Got me little plan all worked out. It's tremendous, Gov.—positively tremendous. You will be surprised when it unfolds. You will discover that your son Perry has brains after all. B'jove you'll pat me on the back after it's all over!"

The father turned away and looked out of the window for a moment, and then quietly said:

"Perry, we have never had a fool in the family that I have heard of, and I don't like the idea. It seems that I must put up with it, however. Do this much for me, please. Don't be just a common fool, but go in for great things in that line. Gamble, wager, get drunk. Get a flying machine. Elope with somebody's wife. Kill three or four people with your auto. Start for the north pole. Go about with a hobble skirt on. If you'll go in to be the biggest fool in America I'll furnish you all the money you can make use of it."

"Sorry, Gov.—sorry—but I can't do it, ye know," was the reply. "Got my little plans to look out for. Would like to oblige, but must decline. No hard feelings, I hope. Thanks for your kind wishes. By-by."

Mr. Perry Degraw lived at his clubs and appeared at his father's mansion only at intervals. Sometimes he was seen only once a month. On this occasion he disappeared after the interview, and it was weeks before he was heard of again. There was a report that he was investigating the Panama canal, but it was not considered reliable. No one worried about him, however.

The widow Strong owned and occupied a manor house forty miles from the city. She was still a young woman, a member of the best society, and wealthy. One afternoon, as her auto was brought to the door that she might proceed to a village four or five miles away, she made the discovery that her chauffeur was intoxicated. He was discharged on the spot, and just as a young man who looked to be a walking student came along. He saw the situation and offered his services. He claimed to have experience, and after some hesitation was engaged to run the auto for the trip. The results were twofold. The widow had heard of Perry Degraw's wager, and she believed she recognized the young man in the stranger who had arrived at the opportune moment. He was therefore engaged to act as chauffeur, gardener and man of all work.

It was plain that the new man knew all about an auto. Quite sure of his identity, the widow did as any other woman would have done. She kept him at work from morning till night. She found fault on all occasions. The cook was bidden to keep an eye on him, and he was treated a little worse than the average hired man. He bore everything without complaint and did his best to please. After a couple of weeks he dropped his "ye knows" and his "donchers," and he no longer struck tremendous attitudes. The change in him was noticed even by the cook.

The new man, who called himself Hopkins, and was familiarly known to the servants as "Hop," came to the manor house in midsummer. He was still there as winter set in. Not a word or a look had betrayed the fact that he was not Hopkins. The widow now felt sure, but she was simply a bit interested. Perhaps if something were to happen—

And one midwinter day Perry Degraw found his father in the library again. His arrival had not been expected. In his surprise the father looked up and said:

"Why, son, where did you leave it?"

"Down in the country, gov. Been a hired man for the Widow Strong ever since that basting you gave me."

"Why, you fool, did you go down there and—"

"Gently, gov. Stuck in a snowdrift four days ago in the auto. Mighty cold. Snow three feet deep. Widow freezing to death. Chauffeur carries her a mile in his arms and saves her precious life. She revives. Says she has known his identity all along. Says he is some fool, but not all fool. Says she rather likes him. Says it may come off in about three months. Wants to know, as I do, if you have anything to say about it."

The father hadn't. He simply reached out his hand for a shake.

STATUS OF SOUTH AMERICA

Too Little Is Known of the Republics of Chili, Brazil and Argentina.

"It is a mystery to me that the people of the United States do not know more about South America," said Capt. Alfredo R. Searle of the Chilean navy.

Captain Searle spent two years as naval attaché of the Chilean legation in London, and is on his way to resume service at home.

"The impression seems general over here that South America is made up principally of the countries in the north, as Ecuador, Bolivia, Colombia and others, when they should know that the greatness of South America lies in the republics of Chile, Brazil and Argentina," continued Captain Searle.

"Chile has a navy of 15 battleships, mostly cruisers, with a naval enlistment of 5,000 men. Brazil has two dreadnoughts of 20,000 tons each, and Argentina, within a few months, will have the largest dreadnought in the world, a ship of 28,000 tons.

The army in Chile numbers 6,000, but we could easily raise 200,000 men, most of whom would be well drilled. In the revolution of 1891 there were 30,000 troops engaged on each side. Both Brazil and Argentina could muster fully as large a number.

"There are other things Americans do not know about Chile, perhaps. We raise the best quality of wheat in South America, and make a grade of flour that will compete with the best this country can make. Our wool in Liverpool is frequently sold as the highest grade received there, equal in every respect to the Australian wool."

OLD GAME IS WORKED AGAIN

Confidence Men in Paris Substituted a String of Imitation Pearls for Good Ones.

A Paris dealer in precious stones, M. Lagnel, was the victim of an audacious theft perpetrated by means of the time honored confidence trick. A few weeks ago M. Lagnel made the acquaintance of a young man who called himself Sognier. He was anxious to act as agent for M. Lagnel, and declared that he would be able to introduce wealthy clients.

A few days ago Sognier introduced to M. Lagnel a "wealthy friend" of his, whom he called M. Chevalier of Clermont-Ferrand, who desired to buy a pearl necklace for his wife. The two men called at M. Lagnel's office in the Rue du Temple, and M. Chevalier selected a necklace valued at $20,000. When about to pay he found that he had left his purse at his hotel. In order to be sure that the necklace would not be exchanged for another while he was absent in search of the money, Chevalier asked if it could be placed in a sealed envelope. This was done, and Chevalier and his friend disappeared.

As they failed to return, the jeweler made inquiries, but could find no trace of them. He then opened the sealed envelope and found it contained imitation pearls worth but a few francs. The thieves had cleverly substituted a second envelope for the one containing the necklace.—Paris Letter to the London Chronicle.

LUNCH CHILDREN WILL LIKE

How Midday Meal Should Be Packed to Be Kept Warm and Appetizing.

Mothers living too far from the schoolhouse for the children to come home to lunch will find this a solution of the cold lunch problem: Use a box about 15 inches square, inside measurement; pack a three-inch layer of excelsior very solidly in the bottom, then put a tin or agate pall having a very tight cover on this. Pack excelsior solidly around this to the top of the pall. It is very important to have it solid, as the pall must be taken out. A cover must be made to fit the box and this, too, covered for three inches or enough to reach the pall with the excelsior, held in place with cheesecloth or other light fabric tacked securely over it. For the box make a cover of linen or dark canvas. This cover should extend all over the box and hook on side. For the lunch boil in the pall rice, beans, soup, or whatever you may choose that can be boiled. When nearly done, cover closely and put at once in the box; put the cover on the box and it is ready and will be done and hot when the children are ready for it, hours later. Of course, if a tin pall is used, nothing containing tomatoes should be chosen. This will be found of especial convenience to mothers living in the country, where children drive to school.

Toenail Surgery.

The reason why most attempts permanently to remove ingrowing nails fail is because they are not sufficiently radical, says a New Orleans physician in the Times-Democrat. The proper procedure is to anaesthetize the patient with ether or some other general anesthetic, then remove, surgically, the entire side of the nail which tends to grow wrongly. The anesthetic permits the surgeon to dissect out the entire section of the nail to its remotest attachments. One great difficulty about treating ingrowing nails is that the sufferer cannot be persuaded to wear a sufficiently roomy shoe to permit the new nail tissue to grow naturally. Thus do vanity and hygiene contend.

WILLIAM H. HOLDRIDGE.

Died at Home of His Son on East Hill Yesterday.

William H. Holdridge, 78, died at the home of his son, Wilbur H., on East Hill yesterday morning at 12.30 from the effects of a shock, suffered Monday; he had been ill for the past 15 years. Mr. Holdridge was born in Williamstown, Jan. 28, 1834, and attended the public schools of that town. In 1850 he went to Saratoga Springs, N. Y., to learn the painters' trade, and came to Monson in 1853, where he continued the business and where he had since lived, with the exception of about four years, which were spent in Wales, Brimfield and Springfield. In March, 1859, he was married to Miss Charlotte Parker of Brimfield, who survives him. Four children were born to them, three of whom are now living. Mr. Holdridge was a painter and grainer of more than ordinary merit, and there are many samples of his work in Monson. He was compelled to retire from active work 20 years ago because of a shock, which developed into shaking palsy. Mr. Holdridge was a member of the Methodist church. He is survived by a widow and three sons, Wilbur, George L. and Arillus, all of Monson; one sister, Miss Mira Burbank of Warren; one brother, George F. Holdridge of Brimfield, as well as five grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Owing to the illness of his widow the funeral will be private; it will be held to-morrow afternoon at 1.30, and Rev. F. W. McConnell of the Methodist church will officiate; burial will be in the No. 1 cemetery.

PETITION TO LEGISLATURE.

For Permission to Build System of Sewers in Town.

The selectmen, as instructed by vote of the town at the annual meeting last spring, have drawn a petition to the Legislature asking that permission be given the town to construct a system of sewerage. The petition was drawn by Ernest E. Hobson of Palmer, a former representative from this district; it may be modified or an entirely new act drawn, but it is believed that the original will be found satisfactory to the Legislature. If the petition is granted the town will then be in a position to go ahead with the work after so voting. If the town undertakes the work it will be in accordance with a plan prepared a few years ago by a special committee, and adopted by the town.

Twins Gods of War and Melody. How do statesmen get themselves into the frame of mind to declare war? According to a popular German story the method in Bismarck's case in 1866 was one that would hardly be suspected. His subordinate Kendeil was an expert pianist, and Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff put it, "used, it is said, to fulfill toward him the function which David fulfilled toward Saul." On one evening Bismarck was unusually moody and Kendeil surpassed himself at the piano. "Thank you, my dear Kendeil," said Bismarck finally, "you have soothed me and come me so much good; my mind is made up; we shall declare war against Austria."

BONDSDVILLE.

TEAM THROUGH THE ICE.

Take Cold Bath in Potter's Ice Pond, But Are Finally Rescued.

A span of horses owned by T. D. Potter broke through the ice, and for a time it looked as though they would be drowned, but they were finally taken out after an immersion of about 45 minutes. They were taken to the boiler house of the lumber yard and given a good rubbing, and the next day were none the worse for their cold bath. The ice close to the spot where they broke in measured 11 inches in thickness, and it is supposed that springs, of which there are many in the pond, had weakened the ice at this particular point, as a similar accident occurred last winter and a horse was drowned. Since that time ropes have always been put around the necks of horses working on the ice, and this precaution proved the means of saving the animals last Saturday.

TRAFFIC IN SOUTH AMERICA

How Congestion and Accidents Are Avoided in the Streets of Buenos Aires.

Buenos Aires is very much unlike our American cities. In the first place, there are no skyscrapers. The highest building does not exceed seven or eight stories. Then there are miles upon miles of streets with buildings of one story predominating. It is laid out in rectangular blocks, average about 400 feet on each side. The streets are narrow, and even in the residence section they are generally built clear up to the street line. The principal business streets, such as Florida, Cuyo, Cangallo, Bartolome Mitre, San Martin, 25th of May, etc., are only 33 feet wide, and you will wonder how the traffic is managed, says Travel. It is done in this wise: Street cars and vehicles are allowed to move only one way. On the adjoining street they move in the opposite direction. It is surprising how this plan helps to solve a serious problem of congestion. Cabs and automobiles dash along with seeming disregard of human life, yet few accidents result. A uniformed policeman is stationed at each street intersection where traffic is congested and assists in the protection of foot passengers and drivers. This police force, made up of men with Indian blood in their veins, impresses the visitor as most efficient.

Tea and Coffee Consumption.

Russia drinks little coffee, but vast quantities of tea. The same conditions prevail in China and Japan. Coffee is more popular than tea in the countries bordering on the Mediterranean sea. Coffee is preferred to tea in Latin-America as well as in nearly all of the continent of Europe, Russia and the British Isles excepted.

MAY PROVE FATAL

When Will Palmer People Learn the Importance Of It?

Backache is only a simple thing at first; But when you get "tin from the kidneys": That serious kidney troubles follow: That dropsy, Bright's disease may be the fatal end.

You will gladly profit by the following experience.

"The honest statement of a sufferer who was cured.

Mrs. D. H. Barnes, Main St., Monson, Mass., says:— "I gladly verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills given in 1906. I had considerable trouble from backache, especially when I went up or down stairs. I was very restless and in the morning felt tired and unrefreshed. It was about the time of the year of 1906 that I decided to give them a trial and the first few boxes convinced me that they were a remedy of merit. The contents of two or three boxes removed the pain and lameness and restored me to good health. This remedy has been used by another member of my family and in that case the results were satisfactory."

FOR AN AFT-NOON AT PLAY

Mrs. Oldway Made Up Both as to Mind and Costume to Enjoy Little Diversion.

It was on one of those rare occasions when Mrs. Oldway tore herself away from her domestic duties to seek amusement in the neighboring town, and, dressed in her best, she stood on the roadside, waiting for a trolley car to take her to the moving picture show.

"Are you going alone, Mrs. Oldway?" some one asked.

"I presume I am," she replied with the additional elegance and condescension of manner which she always put on with her best gown. "My daughter Eleanor has the supper dishes to wash, and it is hardly possible that she can complete her task in time to take the car with me. But I never repine at loneliness, and these moving picture shows get one's mind so excited that one can't hardly help thinking of anything else. Last time I attended one there was quite a crowd, for it was bargain day at Rockville, and the country people had come to town to advantage themselves of the opportunity to purchase cheaply. I had to stand through the entire performance. But I never minded. I find these little diversions greatly relieve the monopoly— Here the trolley car arrived and whisked Mrs. Oldway off to her 'little diversion.'" Habits of Hedgehog.

The hedgehog passes the winter in sleep, with circulation almost suspended and body fires banked. It carries a reserve of glycogen and fat, however, and recent investigations have shown that soon after awakening it warms up by a rapid burning of glycogen. This carbohydrate proves to be the chief fuel, the fat being quite unimportant. The animal may be awake at a low temperature, for the awakening is distinct from the warming up, and whether the latter is voluntary or an automatic process is not yet determined.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

James Long, who has been in the Mercy Hospital in Springfield as the result of an accident which made necessary the amputation of his thumb, returned home this week.

HAMPDEN.

The officers of the Grange were publicly installed last Friday evening in the town hall. About 125 people were present. A party of four came from the Wilbraham grange and another of six from the East Longmeadow grange. Charles M. Gardner of Westfield, master of the state grange, conducted the ceremonies. The officers installed were: Master, James W. Mulrooney; overseer, Charles S. Shute; lecturer, Mrs. Albert F. Ballard; steward, Robert L. Kibbe; chairman, Rev. Charles B. Bliss; treasurer, Charles I. Burleigh; secretary, Miss Alice May; gatekeeper, Morris Eeklen; Ceres, Miss Beulah Hayes; Pomona, Miss Mabel Davis; Flora, Miss Helen Kibbe; lady assistant steward, Mrs. D. L. McCray; executive committee for three years, Willie M. Pease. After the installation refreshments were served in a room on the first floor. Dancing was then enjoyed until 12 o'clock.

The Democratic town committee has organized with Matthias Casey, chairman; Cornelius J. Flynn, treasurer; Walter S. Beebe, secretary.

New Main Street Bridge.

Street Railway Company to Replace One Over B. and A. Tracks.

The street railway company is to build a new bridge on Main street over the tracks of the Boston and Albany railroad, so as to get a structure strong enough to permit the stopping of the company's heavy cars thereon. The demand for stops there is great, as passengers for or from the steam roads take and leave the electric at this point. A few weeks ago it was decided that the present bridge was hardly safe for the big heavy electric to stop on, and they have been halted either side ever since.

The new bridge will be supplied by the Pennsylvania Steel Company, and will be of the girder pattern, with solid sides, though not as high as the skeleton sides of the present structure. The plan is to begin work on the change early some Sunday morning, just as soon as the electric travel ceases, and to complete the job in two days, the work going on day and night. Travel by that route will necessarily be held up during the work; teams will be obliged to use Dublin, Water and Bridge streets in getting between South Main and Main streets, and foot passengers will have to go by way of the railroad passenger station. Workmen began on Tuesday the changing of wires and other alterations on and about the present bridge. Just when the work of replacing will begin is not known, but notice of it will be given later.

TELEPHONE SHAKEUP.

Superintendent Daboll Pays Visit To Palmer Monday.

FINDS JUST CAUSE FOR COMPLAINT.

Promises Reforms and Sets Some Going The Same Day. Public Has Suffered Long.

Matters telephonic in Palmer received a shaking up on Monday such as has not been experienced before since the establishment of the service in the town, and as a result, if the plans and promises of the officials are fulfilled, we shall have a much better arrangement than has previously existed. For a long, long time there has been a growing feeling of annoyance and distrust of the telephone company among the subscribers of the Palmer exchange, especially those in the village of Palmer. Various methods were tried to better conditions, but none worked any material change, if indeed they produced any effect at all. Matters became so serious at last, and there was so much "kicking" on the part of subscribers, that on Monday Mr. F. G. Daboll of Springfield, superintendent of the western district, came to Palmer to make an investigation and in search of information. He got it.

Tight here it should be said that there has been little complaint of the local service. The operating force of the Palmer exchange is, it is believed, as efficient as can usually be found. There will be annoyances and delays wherever the telephone is used, but in the Palmer exchange these have been reduced to a minimum through careful and painstaking supervision of the operating room force. The trouble has been with general conditions.

Mr. Daboll's question was, "What is it that has aroused such a feeling of antagonism against the telephone company in Palmer?" And the answer was two-fold: First, that the company had apparently devised a scheme whereby complaints of any character, made either to the manager of the local exchange or to the division office in Springfield, were shifted from one to another until they were lost in the shuffle and no one could be found who was responsible or would remedy the difficulty. And second, that it was the firm belief among very many subscribers to the company's service that it had adopted a deliberate plan whereby a subscriber, in order to get a satisfactory service, was obliged to pay a higher price for a line condition which he did not care for. In effect, these were the reasons given Mr. Daboll by almost every person whom he interviewed. In addition there were tales of broken contracts—proved without doubt on the spot, recitals of grievances of numerous kinds which might and should have been adjusted long ago, and much evidence which seemingly bore out the contentions set forth in the reasons given for the feeling against the company.

Mr. Daboll was surprised—very much surprised, but there was nothing for him to do, in view of the facts as handed to him, but to acknowledge that the company was lame, most decidedly so, and make arrangements for changes for the better. These he did, and about the first thing on the program was to inform the local manager, C. W. Chamberlin, that it was up to him to see that complaints were given the attention they deserved; that if he could not adjust the matter personally he was to take it along to the next official "higher up," but not to lose sight of it or let it drop there, but to keep in touch with the matter until it is finally adjusted. Mr. Chamberlin's promise to do so appears in the advertising columns of this issue.

A very important change, which was inaugurated Tuesday night, is the keeping open of the business office of the company after 6 o'clock, affording patrons of the service after that hour an opportunity of using a closed booth for their messages. Heretofore the only service obtainable after 6 at night was through a phone on the side of the hallway of the building; there was no booth and no privacy, and no chance to obtain change in case the user did not happen to have the right coin to drop in the slot of the machine, and there have been instances where long-distance calls have been disconnected and the patrons made to go out on the street for change—with the operator only about 25 feet away on the other side of the partition. The night operator is now supplied with change, and in a few days a booth is to be built in one corner of the operating room, opening into the hall.

Coasting Accident In Warren.

Caused By Icy Roadway. One Girl Painfully Injured.

There was a narrow escape from a serious coasting accident Wednesday noon on Maple street in Warren. Seven small children were sliding on a double-runner guided by Frank Grammo. When about half way down the hill the sled went into the ditch and upset near the home of Mrs. Laura Blair. Mary Mullen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Mullen, was thrown heavily and was unconscious for several minutes. She was carried into a house nearby and cared for by Dr. C. A. DeLand. She soon regained consciousness, but was dazed and the doctor thought she must have suffered a slight concussion of the brain. The left side of her face was badly contused when she slid along on the rough ice. She was later taken to her home and was comfortable. No broken bones could be found. Malcolm Quinlan, son of Mrs. J. Frank Quinlan, was thrown upon his face and his nose and forehead were badly cut and bled profusely, which badly scared him, as well as all who saw him at first. He was taken home and found not to be seriously hurt. The other occupants of the sled were Agnes and Fred Grammo and Alice Mullen, all ranging from 4 to 11 years of age. It is the same place where serious coasting accidents have occurred before when the roadway was icy.

Another important change is the assurance that telegrams will be delivered by messenger in cases where the receiver has no telephone. In the past it has been the custom to get them delivered some time—they might reach their destination the next day. Numerous other matters calculated to improve the service were arranged for; several poles which a citizen has long tried to have removed from in front of his residence—five poles in a distance of 175 feet—were ordered down, and promises of other improvements given.

In the matter of forcing higher prices on subscribers Mr. Daboll emphatically denied that such was the plan or intention of the company. It was prepared, he said, to give any service desired, from the six-party village line to the single long-distance line or the suburban many-instrument line. Subscribers could select that which suited them, and the service would be cheerfully given. Regarding broken contracts there was not quite so much readiness to promise immunity in the future. Mr. Daboll was inclined to make it appear that the printed contract which each subscriber signs would be the guide to govern conditions. There is no question, however, but that many instruments have been installed on agreements made verbally with the solicitors or the agent who secured the subscriber. These, being made by a representative of the company, are to all intents and purposes a part of the contract, and should be so recognized by the company; in fact, they have done so in some instances where subscribers have insisted that it be done. There will be more insistence along this line in the future, and the company will be required to live up to special agreements thus made, one subscriber going so far as to say that if necessary he will contest in court any attempt to set aside such special conditions in his agreement.

Taken all in all, the run-together on Monday ought to be productive of a better feeling between the citizens of Palmer and the telephone people. There is no reason why it should not be, other than a disregard of conditions found and promises made—and we do not believe that will be the outcome.

Man Badly Bruised.

One of the laborers employed in the construction of the artesian well at the Collins Manufacturing Company's mill was severely bruised Tuesday afternoon. He was engaged with some other men loading iron from a freight car to a team, when the horse suddenly started up and one of his legs slipped down between the car and the team and was badly bruised when the horse backed, squeezing it between the end of the wagon and the side of the car. Examination showed that no bones were broken and the injured man was able to resume work in a few days.

WILBRAHAM.

Death of Mrs. Phoebe A. Holman.

Mrs. Phoebe A. Holman, 79, widow of Lorrel Holman, died in Northampton last Friday morning of general debility. Her early life was spent in Lunenburg, but for about 20 years she had been a resident of Wilbraham. She leaves one daughter, Miss Edith A. Holman of Wilbraham. The funeral was held in the chapel of the Methodist church Sunday afternoon and burial was in Woodland Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Jane Hunn had the misfortune to fall on the ice Sunday, severely injuring her hip.

Old-Fashioned Dance.

Woman's Relief Corps to Revive Figures of 30 Years Ago.

L. L. Merrick Woman's Relief Corps has arranged what it is sure will be an entertaining program for a dance to be given in Memorial Hall on Wednesday evening of next week. Instead of a majority of the present-day dances, the program will contain for the major part dances which were in vogue 30 years ago, when quadrilles, contra dances, polkas, and the like were enjoyed by the dancers of that time. The program Wednesday night will be copied largely from a program used at a dance then. The present-day dances will not be entirely overlooked, and there will also be numbers on the program for them. The attendance promises to be large, as the price is to be only 25 cents.

Town Clerk's Report.

Town Clerk William F. Dimean has completed his report for 1911, and has recorded the following facts: Number of births, 224, a gain of 69 over 1910; deaths, 80, five more than last year; marriages, 39, or nine less than in 1910. There were seven chattel mortgages recorded and two discharged. One bill of sale was recorded. The dog licenses fell off, only 203 males and eight females being licensed, 39 less than in 1910, which made the fees paid the county treasurer $85.20 less than last year and a correspondingly smaller sum will be returned to the town to be later turned over to the Warren public library. There were only two town meetings. There were 174 resident hunter's licenses granted and one alien license—an increase of 49 resident licenses. The number of male voters is 675, an increase of four, and women voters 180, a decrease of one. There are two married women's certificates, one assignment and two attachments.

Death of Mrs. Phoebe Gingras.

Mrs. Phoebe Gingras, 65, died Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock after a short illness of bronchitis at the home of her son-in-law, James Culliton, on Moore avenue. She leaves one son, Henry Gingras, and two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Hill and Mrs. Phoebe Culliton; 14 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. The funeral was held to-day from St. Paul's church.

The Democratic town committee has organized with A. A. Cannivan as chairman; Joseph O. Phaneuf, secretary; John Collins, treasurer.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Carliel died Saturday after a short illness of pneumonia. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon.

Alpha Rebekah lodge of Odd Fellows received a fraternal visit Monday evening from the grand officers. Among those present were Grand Master Marshall of Boston, Miles W. Webber of Boston, grand instructor; John W. Roberts, deputy grand master of Springfield. There was also a delegation of 10 from Spencer lodge. Speeches were made by the grand officers. Refreshments were served after the meeting.

The Onward and Upward circle of King's Daughters have elected the following officers for 1912: President, Mrs. Florence J. Phelps; first vice president, Miss Mary C. Burbank; second vice president, Mrs. Harry E. Reed; secretary, Miss Anna L. Demond; treasurer, Mrs. Herbert R. Burroughs; directors, Mrs. Charles C. Closson, Mrs. Charles W. Ball, Mrs. Eugene W. Root, Mrs. Ralph B. Patrick and Mrs. Charles H. Comins.

At a meeting of Warren grange last Friday evening all the past masters who live in that vicinity were present and were presented with past master's jewels. The presentation was made by Wesley E. Nims and those receiving jewels were Albert B. Patrick, William E. Patrick, Clarence M. Sylvester of Springfield, Fred N. Lawrence of Brimfield, Calvin Bliss, S. Newell Cutler, Herbert N. Shepard, Alfred A. Warner and Charles E. Wilson. The jewels were of gold and suitably engraved.

Fosket; guide, Noah Avery; warden, Robert P. Bestick; sentry, Jesse T. Leonard; trustees, Charles H. Walker, John M. Drake and Walter A. Putnam. After the exercises refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

A party of young people went to Bondsville Monday evening on a sliding party.

PASTOR NOT TO STAY.

Rev. C. W. Williams Decides to Go to New Jersey.

WILL NOT RECONSIDER RESIGNATION.

Suggestion to Unite Palmer and Three Rivers Baptist Churches Under One Pastor.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Baptist church last evening the pastor, Rev. Charles W. Williams, announced that he had decided not to withdraw his resignation, as requested last week, but would accept the call to the church in Riverton, N. J. There is a possibility that the Baptist churches in Palmer and Three Rivers may be united under one pastorate. The present pastor at Three Rivers is to leave the first of next month, and the members of that church have suggested, now that the Palmer church is also in search of a pastor, that both parishes be placed in charge of one man, who would preach in Palmer in the forenoon and in Three Rivers in the afternoon. At the meeting of the Palmer church last evening a committee consisting of E. B. Taylor, J. L. Hunt and F. S. Keith was appointed to confer with the Three Rivers church in the matter.

If this is done it will be a return to a condition which existed for a good many years until about 1883, one pastor having both parishes; he lived in Three Rivers and preached there in the morning and in the Palmer church at 1 in the afternoon, Sunday school having been held at 12.

Thrane's Emergency Call

By A. Maria Crawford

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

The telephone bell rang insistently and Dr. Marshall Thrane threw down a book on abdominal surgery and turned indifferently to the instrument.

"Yes, this is Dr. Thrane. Automobile accident? Call Dr. Gates. I am very busy."

Thrane loved his profession and the fact about being busy was his first act of disloyalty. Although a young man of thirty, he was considered the leading surgeon, certainly the most successful one, in the city.

On this particular evening he was not disposed to help humanity, for the world had gone wrong and the bitterness of his first sorrow had made him morose and sullen. His engagement to the beautiful Eileen Hunt, three months before, had made him supremely happy. She seemed possessed of the tact and democratic attitude toward the masses that go to make a successful and helpful wife for a professional man. The quarrel had occurred two days before, yet he was still ignorant of the cause.

They had gone to the country club for dinner and he had thought to tell himself at the table that the girl had been blessed with every feminine attraction of beauty and charm. And now within two months of their wedding day, they had quarreled. Over what? Dr. Thrane closed his eyes and for the hundredth time tried to recall the exact conversation.

They had been discussing love. The topic was natural, for there had been a full moon shining on the river before the clubhouse and the soft strains of the waltz from Salome had reached them from the ballroom.

What was it he had said? Something about the moon making a man say foolish things, he remembered. Then she had grown strangely quiet and when he tried to penetrate her silence and learn the cause, she had told him that probably he had been foolish when he proposed to her; it was moonlight then, she reminded him coolly. All his protestations to the contrary proved vain and useless. He had made the remark because he believed it to be a true statement and she had fortunately been clever enough and quick enough to see that he hoped it would be taken as a personal intimation of his attitude toward her. Argument was plainly useless and in a great and overwhelming silence they motored home at high speed, ignoring the beauty of the night and the voiceless things that breathed of love through the fragrant darkness.

Two days had passed slowly. He was too proud to make advances when he had been innocent of her charge against him. He had proven his love in every known way and he concluded that she was evidently grasping at any petty reason as an excuse for breaking her engagement to him.

Again the telephone rang sharply and Dr. Thrane answered. "Yes, this is Dr. Thrane. . . Who wants me? . . . The people hurt in the automobile accident? . . . Who are they? . . . I will be there in five minutes."

Somebody at the Hunts had been hurt. He summoned his sleepy chauffeur and was soon on the way, a fear growing in his heart that it might be Eileen. How would she receive him? Would she speak? A dozen questions presented themselves as he hurried on to his patient. It was more than probable that her brother Bob had been injured.

He hurried up the steps and found Mr. Hunt holding open the door. His worst fears were confirmed when the older man said, "Come in, Marshall. Eileen was thrown from a car. She fainted, but I think they have brought her around."

"Eileen wanted us to send for Dr. Gates, but of course we didn't want to take any chances, for we didn't know how badly she might be hurt, so I had them telephone for you, Marshall."

"This is no time for personal feeling," said the young surgeon sternly, his heart aching at sight of the girl's white face and twitching hands. "Some hot water, please."

"My ankle is hurt, Marshall," said the girl.

"All right, I'll make you comfortable in a few minutes," he assured her as he dropped a tablet into a tiny glass of hot water. "Close your eyes,"

Poetry in Skyscrapers.

It is a mistake to think we must go back a thousand years or more for genuine poetic inspiration, or that the poet of today must necessarily confine himself to the veins that the Greeks worked to create their lasting vogue. There is poetry in the big modern institutions where twentieth century life pulsates, if only there be the imagination that can treat it in a masterly way.

Shine With Every Drink.

There have been in the history of barber shops such plans as "A shave and a shine all for a dime," "A hair cut and a shine free," but it was left for a negro barber shop at 18 Ivy street to give a free shoe shine when a drink was paid for. That is, it was a Sunday blind tiger in which Will Strong, a bootblack, sold liquor and then gave his customer a free shine. The police had suspected the barber shop for some time and on last Sunday they made a raid and found a large lot of whisky in pint bottles. Will Strong was in charge and was running a bootblack stand. He claimed that another negro had brought the whisky in to the shop without his knowing it. The Recorder sent Will Strong to the chain gang for thirty days.—Atlanta Constitution.

No Sale.

Mrs. Irving—"You didn't buy that Oriental rug after all, did you?" Mrs. Clint—"No, we took a friend of George's to see it and he said that while it was a genuine Bokhara, beautifully woven and all that, it wouldn't last more than a hundred years, so we decided to look farther."

Sparing the Rod.

The bishop of Carlisle, Esq., is a believer in "sparing the rod" and "spoiling the child." In a recent address he deplored "the soft notions now being preached by people calling themselves humanitarians." "It is said to be degading to flog a boy," said the bishop. "Well, I am truly thankful that I was often degraded in that sense in my boyhood. If I had not been so degraded then I should be more degraded now. We need to eliminate these enervating, foolish, soft and therefore cruel notions from our educational system. This is a matter not only for teachers, but for parents."

Rest in Solitude.

The first requisite in resting is to be alone. Every human being is more or less of an irritator. One must get away to his room or to the woods. As near as possible one must secure solitude and silence; for it is in the quiet of what shallow people call loneliness that there is found the fountain of refreshment and a new birth of joy in life.

Pit Brow Lassies.

How difficult it is to make laws to suit everybody is illustrated again in the tale which comes from England about the lassies of Lancashire. The poor slaves! They spend their young lives pushing heavy coal tubs to the pit brows of the mines. No decent civilization would permit its women to be so injured! So the philanthropists argued, and straightway a bill was passed forbidding the employment of women at the pit brows. But were the beneficiaries grateful? Not at all. They protested. A deputation of them traveled to London under the aegis of the mayor and mayor's wife of Wigan to urge the repeal of the law! "They all looked healthy," says the report, "and well dressed for their station." They are quite able to do the work, they protested, and do not want any benevolent Parliamentary intervention in their behalf.

Her Father's Birthplace

By Harmony Weller

Jean Winslow strolled leisurely through the little old village streets. The quaint architecture, the odd unexpected turns into narrow lanes and the entire primitive aspect were all new to her delighted eyes.

Jean had stolen a day from the big house party in order that she might take the short run over to the little New Hampshire village where she could glimpse her father's birthplace. She kept her eyes open for the small landmarks he had told her of and searched for the house of his description. Jean hoped it would be unoccupied—she could ramble about it and see all the places her father loved to recall.

Yes! There it was, its big wings reaching over the brow of the hill and well shaded by giant fir trees.

"It's vacant!" Jean breathed happily and quickened her pace.

Jean had no fear of the so-called haunted house and, besides, a well kept mansion lay within calling distance from her father's birthplace.

Jean picked her steps daintily through the weed-grown paths like a mauve elf among the tall grasses.

"Daddy didn't exaggerate one bit!" Jean's eyes swept in the wide Colonial door and the wonderfully carved pillar caps, "and what a love of a knocker!"

She tried the handle. It was locked. With a pout Jean went around to the back of the house and discovered the slanting cello door.

"Daddy used to slide down this," Jean laughed and tried to lift the heavy door. It yielded and she picked her way down the dark stairs lifting high fluffy mauve laces as she went.

The place was fearfully dark and full of musty odors. Jean bravely stillied her fears and went up the creaking stairs and through the kitchen.

"If only we could have this in town," sighed the girl as she went through room after room each one bigger and more sunny than the last.

On the second floor she found the room with the bow window in which her father was born. Jean peered about as if the very walls might witness her emotion as she surreptitiously dabbed the tears from her eyes.

Her emotions were very near the surface. The utter desolation of the grand old home that had harbored her father's boyhood, the very bare room that echoed her very breathing had all helped to unstring her nerves.

"I haven't seen the nursery with the phantomish border or the little turret room that I saw from the outside," she said half aloud.

Jean's courage was at strangely low ebb when, after seeing the nursery she discovered a small dark stairway which led to the turret room that she had set her heart on seeing.

Again lifting the fluffy laces she made her way carefully up the winding stairs.

So loud was the beating of her own heart that she heard no sounds save the imaginary ones of her own creation.

She turned the handle of the door, the only one on that high landing. It was locked. She tried again making a great noise.

The door opened suddenly after a great sound like an explosion.

A huge man loomed up in the doorway. His face was smeared and his hair was that of a wild man. A towel had been swiftly tied across one side of his head.

"Oh-h!" Jean shrieked and fell in a heap on the dusty floor of the landing.

When she regained consciousness, she found that she was lying on a wide, soft couch; the face bending over hers was neither grimy nor in fact anything that suggested evil. It still wore the towel bandaged over one temple but the expression shining in the eyes was tenderness, fear and something that made Jean blush.

"Great Scott! I thought I had killed you!" he said in the deep voice Jean had somehow expected.

She laughed and sat up among the cushions. "It wouldn't have been your fault—I was snooping and—"

She broke off and asked quickly, "What are you looking at—I feel nervous—is anything the matter with me?"

"No I was only thinking how much you look like a great pausy there among the green pillows."

"That is rather a funny thing to tell a girl who is startled out of her wits and is wondering how she ever managed to stumble on an evidently sane man—"

"Working among explosives at the top of a vacant house," finished Danvers and Jean liked his laugh. After joining it for a moment she said:

"Where is that awful room and where am I now?"

"You are in my den," he said, "and it is adjoining the awful one in which I make experiments—it was one of the latter that you heard blow up." Danvers laughed ruefully. "Is it my turn to ask questions?"

Jean's eyes answered him.

"Who are you and where did you come from? You don't live in the village—that I know."

Jean wisely refrained from asking him how he knew. Her courage had returned but her nerves had taken a funny little turn and she felt strangely afraid of this man with his steady glowing eyes. He looked like the man who commands by the very appeal in his eyes.

"I was the guest at a house party not ten miles from here," Jean told him. My father was born in this house and I came over to see it. I am Jean Winslow."

"Jean Winslow! My father and James Winslow were friends. Has your father ever mentioned John Danvers? At least—I have heard of Jean—Winslow."

The girl liked the way her name was spoken. She laughed and extended her hand. "Since we have heard of one another—we might shake hands."

It seemed for the space of a second as if the turret in the Winslow home-stand was hung in mid-air.

"Oh-h!" Jean cried after a moment, "your head! Did something hit you—before I came?" She arose swiftly and before he could stop her had taken off the bandage. "Oh!" she cried again. "Where will I find some water?"

"It is nothing—a mere scratch," Danvers said, but directed her to the small lavatory. "It doesn't need anything except that it would feel much better—if you bathed it." The half boyish joy in his eyes brought a smile to Jean's lips as she carefully dressed the slight cut on his temple.

When the bandage was neatly on again they went and stood by the tiny window of the turret. They seemed miles above the surrounding country and Danvers pointed out the big house on the hill.

"That is my home," he said simply. Then he laughed. "They won't let me make my experiments over there—in case I blow up the old home-stand."

"You prefer to blow up—this one—my father's birthplace?"

"I can't say that I am sorry," he told her in a deep, serious voice, "but I am going to make up by cultivating the gardens and having the place put in perfect repair. Would you like that?"

Somehow Jean understood all that he meant in the last short sentence.

"If you will let me help," she smiled swiftly into his eyes.

After a moment of silence Danvers spoke.

"If you will come over now and let the matter give you a cup of tea I will drive you over the ten miles. I was invited to the house party," he said and turned to look at Jean.

"How long are you going to be there?"

Jean knew that the appeal was in his eyes and she looked only for a moment.

"That—depends," she said, "upon the new guests."

Wages Eight Cents a Day Higher.
Among the statistics submitted in the report of the state department of labor it is shown that the average daily earnings are larger by eight cents than they were last year, the figures being $3.26 as against $3.18.

Industrial prosperity is not simply a pocketbook and a pair of willing hands working in harmony. The shares which go to one on dividend day and to the other on pay day are determined by larger considerations. Economic conditions are never permanently one-sided.

Energy, guided by judgment and cautioned by frugality in the work-room, means product plus quality in the counting-room.

Eight cents a day is a good sign in more ways than one. But it should have been more. The cost of living should not beat wages to the wire.—New York World.

Cause of Writer's Cramp.
A physician states that writer's cramp and allied muscular affections are induced by the use of too small a penholder. Many of the penholders in common use are too small to allow a firm grip to be taken, and the result is that the fingers close down tightly in an effort to hold the pen securely, and the long tension results in cramp.

If those who write habitually will use a penholder three or four times as large as those generally employed they will never have trouble with their fingers or wrist. A good way to enlarge the penholder is to take a bit of flexible india rubber tubing, and place it on the holder. This both gives a larger stem and affords an agreeably soft surface, which does not need to be grasped very tightly—or, in other words, which does not tend to slip.

In the Toils

There certainly were flaws somewhere in the screens. As Mrs. Stebleton waved distractedly at the buzzing pests that were interfering with the reading of her morning mail she calculated that there must be at least a thousand flies in the flat. And Mrs. Stebleton hates a fly as she hates a cat's paw.

"I simply cannot stand this!" she cried in wrath. So she went to the phone and ordered sent over at once a quantity of sticky fly paper. When it came she hated to spoil the looks of the place, but desperate measures were imperative. The yellow sheets were scattered about through the rooms. Then Mrs. Stebleton hung around counting the first unwary victims and rejoicing as she checked them off.

Presently she got dressed and went out to a luncheon and shopping with a friend. When she came back she hoped that the last of the invaders would have buzzed out his final protests on the sticky fly paper.

Hilda, the maid, some hours later bore an armful of freshly ironed sheets and towels as she tramped heavily down the hall to the linen closet. Then she dropped her burden with a thump on a convenient table. When in the course of putting them away she came to the last sheet something seemed wrong with it. Hilda investigated and then she said: "My land!" One of the pieces of fly paper was immovably glued to the under side of the sheet.

With mutterings of disgust, Hilda peeled off the sheet and tried to wash it out in the bath tub. Her efforts proved to her how very useless it was for a fly to try to get away when once he got stuck to the sticky stuff. The fly paper she removed from its dangerous position on the table and after aimlessly looking around for an out of the way place, deposited it upon the topmost sofa pillow on the library couch.

Linda Stebleton, aged 16, arrived home from school a little later, bringing with her three girls. They burst in with a gust of chatter and distributed themselves through two rooms recklessly. Thereupon simultaneously arose wild shrieks. Guest No. 1 had planted her elbow on one sheet of fly paper and her endeavors to remove it glued it firmly to her other hand. Guest No. 2 had leaned back her head and brought down a sheet hanging over the edge of a bookcase. Four puffs seemed inextricably attached to its surface. Guest No. 3 was trying to remove a sheet from Linda's back.

After the excitement had cooled down a trifle Linda gazed upon the fly paper with hostile eyes. "Mother must have put that horrid stuff around!" she said. "I suppose she saw a fly! You'd think that one fly was a regiment from the way she acts. Now, where can we put the awful stuff?"

They prowled around with the sticky paper gingerly held between their thumbs and fingers and finally arranged it to suit themselves. Then they devoted an hour to soap and alcohol in an endeavor to rid themselves of the general stickiness.

"Tod" Stebleton, aged eight, joined the procession when he rushed in and sat down with a bounce on a sheet that had slid into a chair. His objections were violent and acrid and it took the efforts of his sister and the other three girls combined to calm him. Taking the fly paper in no gentle hand, Tod hurled it out of his way.

Stebleton himself arrived home before his wife. "What's this? What's this?" he demanded in his nervous way, placing an investigating finger on the pale yellow sheet on the hall stand. It stuck. The other hand stuck, too, when he hastily endeavored to get it off. His son and daughter hastened to his rescue, explaining that doubtless mother had been waving war against her enemies, the flies.

When Mrs. Stebleton came in, tired, she was full of apologies for her late-ness, she explained as she tossed off her hat and her gloves and coat. "I'm simply dead!" she ended. "I've just got to rest a few minutes before I dress for dinner!" Then she threw herself among the pillows on the library couch.

But not for long. From Mrs. Stebleton's appearance as she scrambled to her feet wildly after a horrified instant it seemed that Linda and her three friends, Tod and Stebleton all had followed Hilda's example in choosing the sofa pillows on that couch as a safe place to stow the sticky sheets of fly paper out of the way. Every last one of them was plastered on Mrs. Stebleton!

On the Nursery Menu.
Little sicknesses due to unwise feeding sometimes develop into troublesome maladies, and parents do well to watch, during the autumn especially, that injudicious treatment does not give rise to stomach complications in the case of young children. Contrary to the general idea, too much milk is not good, and should not be given promiscuously; there are many occasions upon which water is to be preferred, but cold water must not be given to an overheated child. A little barley water in milk will make the digestion assimilate it more easily and prevent vomiting and biliousness, and many children like and can with benefit be given buttermilk.

No harm can befall a good man, whether alive or dead.—Socrates.

ONE MILLION DOLLARS FOR A GOOD STOMACH.

This Offer Should Be a Warning to Every Man and Woman.
The newspapers and medical journals recently have had much to say relative to a famous millionaire's offer of a million dollars for a new stomach.

This great multi-millionaire was too busy to worry about the condition of his stomach. He allowed his dyspepsia to run from bad to worse until in the end it became incurable.

His misfortune serves as a warning to others.

Every one who suffers with dyspepsia for a few years will give everything he owns for a new stomach.

Dyspepsia is commonly caused by an abnormal state of the gastric juices, or by lack of tone in the walls of the stomach. The result is that the stomach loses its power to digest food.

We are now able to supply certain missing elements—to help to restore to the gastric juices their digestive power, and to aid in making the stomach strong and well.

We know that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are a most dependable remedy for disordered stomachs, indigestion, and dyspepsia.

We want you to try them and will return your money if you are not more than satisfied with the result.

Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store.

PALMER NEWS.

Very Many Penny Savings.

Interest of School Children Unabated. Spreading to Parents.

Any who may have a fear that the interest in penny savings which was awakened anew in the pupils of the public schools a few weeks ago under a new system of collection introduced for the first time in the state by the Palmer Savings Bank, are doomed to disappointment along that line, as the number of depositors is increasing steadily. Not only is the number increasing, but the amount of the deposits is holding its own in an unexpected manner. There are now over 650 depositors on the school lists, and of these 332 have taken out books in the Palmer Savings Bank, each book representing at least one dollar, and many of them showing much larger deposits. The managers of the bank have secured a set of small blotters—one for each month of the year—which is being distributed to school depositors. When a deposit is made the blotter corresponding with the month is given to the depositor. The designs are in colors and unusually handsome, and the complete set is wholly to be desired.

The bank managers find that the new system is working a peculiar influence on the parents of the children who have taken out books. Many of these have never before had a savings bank deposit, but have begun making them since the children acquired their books, evidently feeling that if the youngsters can save their pennies it is a good thing for the heads of the families to lay aside a little something for the future. Some of these books represent small sums, it is true, but the plan of saving has been adopted and is being followed up as rapidly as the means of the depositors permit.

Benefit Whist a Success.

Social Event Nets Net Sum For District Nurse Association.

An unusually pleasing social event, in that it brought together residents of all sections of the town for an evening's enjoyment, was the benefit whist party given Tuesday evening in Memorial Hall by the association for district nursing. Over 200 tickets had been sold in advance, in addition to which an additional sum was taken at the door. There were nearly thirty tables, and all were filled with players, the attendance coming from all villages and every section of the town. There were no prizes, but souvenirs were given those having the highest scores, these being: Whist, Mrs. R. E. Cummings and C. E. Fuller; bridge whist, Mrs. S. B. Keith and C. W. Chamberlain; 500, Miss Anna Doherty. Ice cream and cake, and fruit punch were for sale, and the association will clear over $80. The committee in charge of the event was Mrs. H. C. Cheney, Mrs. H. W. Holbrook, Mrs. F. N. Carpenter, Miss Emma Mulvihill, Miss Hazel Dillon, Mrs. M. R. Sullivan, Mrs. F. W. Harrison, Miss Alice Oakes, Mrs. G. S. Fines of $25 Each Imposed on Three Men Who Beat Another.

Jan Aukstus, Dominic Nowalski and Charles Messon, all of Dublin street, were fined $25 each in the district court Monday morning for an assault on James Burke. All fines were paid. The trouble began at the Weeks House Saturday night, where all hands were gathered. There was a dispute about something, and after an argument Burke left. He was followed by the others and there was evidence that one of the three held him while the others gave him "all that was coming to him." It was more than Burke would have chosen, for when found later he was unconscious and needed a physician's attendance, a wound in his scalp needing sewing up, and other bruises requiring dressing. Nowalski has been convicted of a similar offense once before.

Queer Remedy for Ague. It was prescribed by an old superstition that if those who were affected with ague would visit at dead of night, the nearest cross road five different times and then bury a new laid egg, the disease would be buried. If the experiment failed, they attributed it to some unlucky accident that may have befallen them on the way.

RECORD OF A GREAT MEDICINE

Doctors Could Not Help Mrs. Templeton—Regained Health through Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Hooper, Nebraska.—"I am very glad to tell how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me. For five years I suffered from female troubles so I was scarcely able to do my work. I took doctors' medicines and used local treatments but was not helped. I had such awful bearing down pains and my back was so weak I could hardly walk and could not ride. I often had to sit up nights to sleep and my friends thought I could not live long. At my request my husband got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I commenced to take it. By the time I had taken the seventh bottle my health had returned and I began doing my washing and was a well woman. A tone time for three weeks I did all the work for eighteen boarders with no signs of my old trouble returning. Many have taken your medicine after seeing what it did for me. I would not take $1000 and be where I was. You have my permission to use my name if it will aid anyone."—Mrs. SUSIE TEMPLETON, Hooper, Nebraska.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of woman—ills that deal out despair.

It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

For fourteen years Dickens made Broadstairs his principal summer home in England. London alone held a superior place in his affections. He felt his powers at their amplest when he was at the little channel coast town. Dickens has given the best picture of himself at his summer routine in Broadstairs: "In a bay window in a one-pair sits, from 9 o'clock to 1, a gentleman with rather long hair and no neckcloth, who writes and grins, as if he thought he were very funny indeed. At 1 he disappears, presently emerges from a bathing machine, and may be seen, a kind of salmon colored porpoise, splashing about in the ocean.

"After that he may be viewed in another bay window on the ground floor, eating a strong lunch; and after that, walking a dozen miles or so, or lying on his back in the sand reading a book. Nobody bothers him unless they know he is disposed to be talked to; and I am told he is very comfortable, indeed. He's as brown as a berry, and they do say is a small fortune to the innkeeper who sells beer and cold punch. But this is mere rumorm."

"Sometimes he goes up to London (eighty miles or so away), and then, I'm told, there is a sound in Lincoln's Inn Fields at night as of men laughing, together with a clinking of knives and forks and wine glasses."

VOLUME LXII.

PALMER, MASS., FRIDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 2, 1912.

NUMBER 44.

Great Prize and Popularity Contest Is Approved by Reading Public Very Heartily.

Many Candidates Are Nominated and Voting Soon Commences—Look Over the Names Printed in Following, and Vote for Your Choice.

$10.00 in gold will be paid to the first person sending in the name of the candidate receiving the greatest number of votes in the contest. No conditions attached to this offer. Just send in the name of your favorite, and we will do the rest.

They're off in a bunch! Are you one of them? The first list of nominees in the Palmer Journal's contest is published to-day. Look over the list, pick out a favorite, or better yet, if you are not a candidate, clip out the nomination ballot, fill it in, and then enter the race. The prizes are worth your while. Evidently the people of Palmer and surrounding territory think well of their neighbors. At any rate there's no dearth of favorites, and the "one best bet" would be difficult to select.

From now on the contest will be on in earnest, and interest will increase each day. This will be the only election held this year, or next, where you can "stuff the ballot box" and vote early and often.

The contest manager will call on the contestants as soon as possible, but with such a large list of popular ones it will take some time to see them all, so if convenient call at the office and get one of the subscription receipt books, also valuable information as to the best way to secure votes.

Start Early.

While the nominations will be coming in for a month yet, you had better get in at the start, be in with the first list. Join this live bunch of hustlers and have the time of your life.

If a fairy were to knock on the door of some man or woman, boy or girl, in this section and were to offer them something for which they had been longing for some time, it would be folly on their part to refuse to open the door and let this fairy deposit the much coveted article with him or her.

The Palmer Journal does not pretend to play the part of a fairy angel, but it has brought to Palmer an opportunity for the men and women, boys and girls, living here and in the territory surrounding Palmer, to secure as handsome a gift as has been offered by a newspaper in this section at positively no other cost than the cost of exertion; it will be well for the contestants to let their friends know that they are in the contest, and are in it to win.

A Race Full of Interest.

There will be lots of fun connected with the contest and you don't want to miss any of it.

The contestants who enter in the town districts must not think that it will be an easy matter to get ahead of the other districts. There is a bunch of live hustlers entered from all the outside districts and they are going to show the Palmer contestants a few things that will surprise them.

They realize that the way the prizes are awarded will give them just the same chance to secure the capital prize as those in the Palmer district, and they are going after them with a determination that will have a very important bearing on the capital prize results.

If you enter the contest with the determination to win, and we assume that you do, you should not waste much of your time with the free coupons. It's the subscriptions you will want to hustle for. That is what gets you the most votes, and in this case it is the votes that you want. Start out by asking your friends for a long time subscription, one, two, three or five years; take the small ones also. Don't let any get away from you.

The Way To Get Votes.

There are only two ways of getting votes in this contest; one way is by saving the free coupons which are printed in every issue; the other by securing paid in advance subscriptions for the Palmer Journal.

Another positive assurance you have is that votes cannot be bought. The only money which will be accepted in connection with the contest will be that sent to pay for subscriptions.

Subscribers, this is your opportunity to do a kindness for some of your friends.

You will be doing yourself a good turn at the same time. If you are an old subscriber you will save yourself the annoyance of constant calls from a collector. If you do not take the paper now you will be giving yourself a pleasure hitherto unknown.

It is a satisfaction to feel that the paper you read each week is reliable. It is a pleasure to read the bright, broad views and the clean conservative columns of a newspaper like the Palmer Journal, which is as well fitted to the man of affairs as it is to the home, combining as it does, and as few papers do, the element of state-wide information, detailed local news, and a stand never abandoned for the best interests of the vicinity.

Is Your Name on the List?

Many names have been entered in the contest. Some have been entered by themselves, while others have been nominated by their friends. All have the same opportunity to win one of the valuable prizes. The winners will be the ones who hustle the hardest and do not overlook an opportunity to secure a subscription. Be a hustler; it costs you nothing but a little effort. Your friends will help you if you ask them; so ask them right away before some one else does.

The fact that a large number of candidates have already entered the race should not frighten you. Simply because: The more candidates in the fight the better chance you have of winning. It will require less effort on your part to secure a sufficient number of votes to win if you have a large number of candidates to compete with.

Don't expect something for nothing. While we are going to give every prize advertised, whether the vote be large or small, the wise ones who enter in the race realize that it will take a large vote to win and will get just as many votes to their credit as they possibly can. And remember this is a short contest, so it behooves you not to waste any of the precious time.

Notice.

Each subscription should be made on a regular subscription blank as furnished by this office. Write for receipt books when in need of them. It is not necessary to sign your name on each vote coupon, tie the coupons in a neat bundle and mark on the top one your name and district, also number of votes contained in package. This will save time.

Coupons may be sent direct to the candidate to be voted for or they may be sent to the Contest Department of the Palmer Journal, either by person or mail. Candidates should send or mail all votes and subscriptions direct to the Contest Department of the Palmer Journal and not leave with local agents, etc. The vote coupon will appear each week on page two, cut out same and vote for your favorite.

Open Evenings.

For the accommodation of the candidates and their friends, the Contest Department, located in the business office of the Palmer Journal, Masonic building, Palmer, Mass., will be open all day and every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings from 7 until 9 o'clock. Call and see us.

FOR SWINDLING WOMAN.

Glasses Vendor Arrested For Fraud in Brimfield.

GAVE BAIL OF $200 AND SKIPPED.

Sold Pair of Glasses, Claimed Next Day They Were Wrong, and Got More Money.

Deputy Sheriff George A. Bills gathered in at Palmer Saturday afternoon M. Harrison of New York, alias John Harrison, alias Morant, alias M. S. Barnes, a traveling salesman of spectacles and glasses, on a charge of having defrauded Mrs. H. M. Griggs of Brimfield. He was released on $200 bail and promised to appear in the district court Monday morning, but failed to show up.

Mrs. Griggs' story is that Harrison—or whatever the fellow's name is—came to her house Friday and wished to examine her eyes and fit her to glasses. He said that he represented a Springfield hospital and gave a name, which was not Harrison. She was impressed with the man's appearance and story and finally paid him $10 for glasses, which he left with her. On Saturday he came again and announced that he had discovered the glasses left the day before were not adapted to her, and after some conversation he left another pair, for which she gave an additional $5.

After he had gone Mrs. Griggs' niece—with whom she lives—became suspicious and communicated with the hospital named by telephone; the man was unknown there. She then learned that a man answering the description had been at the Brimfield hotel, and after phoning a business man of the town he called Deputy Sheriff Bills of Palmer. A messenger went to Palmer on the electric and secured a warrant for the man, who was arrested as he stepped from a later car. He went to the Burns Hotel, where he had been staying. He did not deny the transaction, but denied any attempt to do an illegal business, stating that he had been conducting his calling in this section for some time with no previous complaints. He offered to return Mrs. Griggs' money. It is said the same fellow is wanted in Hinsdale, and in Suffield, Ct.

Minstrel Show Next Week.

Nearly Every Ticket Sold For K. of C. Black-face Effort.

The second annual minstrel show of the Knights of Columbus, presented this year under the joint auspices of the Palmer council of the order and the association for district nursing, will be given in the opera house next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. There has been a large sale of tickets—in fact, the house has been practically sold out for both nights—and a generous profit is assured. Holders of tickets may exchange them for reserved seat coupons at the Kinsey pharmacy, Tuesday tickets at 9 o'clock next Monday morning and Wednesday tickets at 9 o'clock Tuesday. There will be a chorus of 50 voices, supporting the following:

Interlocutor, John W. Conway.
Bones Oscar Bressette
D. W. O'Connor
John S. Welch
J. E. Learned
Peter Brouillette
Frank D. Duffy
David P. Dillon
Jasper Bressette

All have been rehearsing strenuously under the direction of Frank J. Read of Holyoke, and propose to give a good account of themselves when the curtain rises. There will be the usual number of local "gags," and some are said to be "corkers." For the old specialists there will be Billy McDonald with a monologue, which will surely be worth listening to; Read, Moran, Read and Lynch will present "Glad Rags," a song and dance act; the Knowles Brothers, Stanley and Harry, singers and dancers; and a scene, "Down in Dixie," presenting the Columbia Four and William Syner, solo dancer. There will be a matinee for school children Tuesday afternoon at 3.30, when the admission will be only 10 cents.

BELCHERTOWN.

Death of Lewis Dodge.

Lewis Dodge, 17, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dodge, died Tuesday morning after a short illness of pneumonia. He was a member of the junior class in the high school, president of his Sunday school class in the Congregational church and an usher in the church. The funeral was held in the chapel yesterday, with burial in the South cemetery.

The Palmer Ice company has been filling the ice houses at the Monson State hospital with ice from the "Cider Mill" pond.

SCHOOLS ATTENDANCE.

Three Rivers Building Has Best Record For Month.

BUT BONDSVILLE A CLOSE SECOND.

Individual Room Record Goes to Bonds-ville, With an Almost Perfect Attendance.

For the school month ending January 26, 1912, the Three Rivers grammar school has 96.42 for its per cent of attendance, the highest of all the nine schools, with but twelve cases of tardiness, while in January, 1911, twenty-four cases were reported. Bonds-ville grammar school is next, with a per cent of 96, and only one tardy case.

The room having attained the highest record of attendance is Bonds-ville, grades 8 and 9, with a per cent of 99.5 and no tardy cases. This record is indeed excellent. The per cent of attendance of the room of grade 9, Palmer, is 98.63, which is again the second highest. Room of grades 8 and 9, Thorndike, occupies third highest place on the list, with a per cent of 98.3.

It is very interesting, as well as encouraging, to note the striking decrease in tardiness in our schools, and it is to be hoped that with the continued co-operation of the parents next month's record of tardy cases will be a great deal lower than this month's, especially in the districts.

The following is the record for the month in detail:

MAY MOVE TO PALMER.

Option on Land Near Forest Lake Said to Be Taken.

BY SPRINGFIELD PROVISION COMPANY.

Compelled to Move From Present Location, Would Give Them Excellent Facilities.

There is a rumor—originating in Springfield—that Palmer may ultimately be the home of a present Springfield industry, the Springfield Provision Company and the Springfield Rendering Company, provided they are forced to move from their present location.

There is much opposition to the present location of the concerns by a neighboring manufacturing plant, and numerous hearings have been held before the state board of health with an idea of securing an order for their removal, though no decision has been given as yet. It is reported that the companies have secured an option on a large tract of land in the vicinity of Forest Lake, and may remove there if forced to vacate their present locations.

This section of the town is removed from residences or business places, and such odors as would be likely to emanate from properly managed plants would be unlikely to annoy anyone. The railroad facilities there are unusually good, and there would probably be no objection to their coming, especially as they would employ a considerable number of workmen.

MEN'S LEAGUE MEETING.

Hears Workingmen's Compensation Law Explained.

ACT CONCERNS INJURED EMPLOYEES.

Employer Also Has Large Interest. Damage Section Takes Effect Next July.

Owing doubtless to two social features the same evening, there was only a small number present at the meeting of the Men's League in the Congregational church Wednesday evening to hear Amos T. Saunders of Clinton explain the workingmen's compensation act, passed by the last Legislature. Mr. Saunders started out by explaining that the three principal defenses of the employer formerly set up in cases of accident—contributory negligence, negligence of a fellow workman, and assumption of risk—had been wiped out by the present law. Under the old law less than ten per cent of workmen injured had any legal right to recover damages, and the greater portion of these had to wait from two to six years for their money—they could not get it at their time of greatest need,—when they were incapacitated from labor,—and then averaged to get only 25 per cent of the amount paid by the employer. Under these conditions the remaining 90 per cent who are injured become—many of them—a public charge. Under the old law, too, the question of liability and the amount of damages lies wholly with the jury.

Under the new system it is planned that all persons injured shall recover enough to carry them over their period of inactivity, and that they shall receive it at once instead of at some indefinite time in the future. Investigation has brought about a belief that in all industries there will be a certain number of accidents,—a percentage based on the number of employees,—and that the employer should take cognizance of these as one of the fixed charges of running his plant, the same as insurance, taxes and rent. Workmen so hurt are to receive compensation for time lost after the second week, to the extent of half their weekly wages, but to receive not less than $4 nor more than $10 per week; the payments are to continue for various lengths of time, and these are fixed in the bill. There are also larger payments for serious accidents, such as loss of hands, feet or eyesight, and for fatal injuries; also under certain conditions the injured person is to receive double amounts.

Hearings and adjustments of claims are taken from the courts and placed in the hands of a company formed for the purpose among the manufacturers, they choosing a board of directors from among their number. To inaugurate the system the state names the first board of directors, and these have already been appointed by the governor; they hold office only until the employers perfect their organization and get into working shape. Employers are not obliged to so combine, but may do so if they wish, they may still purchase liability insurance of private companies if they choose. That clause of the bill creating the mutual insurance organization went into effect January 1, the portion affecting accidents to employees takes effect July 1.

There were several employers of labor present, who were much interested in the explanation of the act. It struck them however, that, as the first section of the act expressly provides that it shall not be a defense in case of accident that the employee was negligent, that there was contributory negligence on the part of a fellow employee, and that the injured man had assumed the risk, that the employer under the act is placed in a position whereby he will be obliged to settle for any accident on his premises, no matter what the conditions or disobedience of orders on the part of the employee, and questions asked Mr. Saunders brought replies which seemingly corroborated this view.

Boston Letter.

Anent the Lawrence Strike—Governor Needs Protection—Election by Popular Vote—Congressional Redistricting—Foss For President—Butler Statue Again—Trouble Ahead.

Boston, Jan. 31, 1912.

For the time being the necessity of preserving the public peace in Lawrence overshadows the discussion of the rights and the wrongs of the strikers, as far as the Legislature is concerned. This is seen in the unanimous report of the committee on rules against the adoption of the order of Morrill of Haverhill, the one Socialist in the House, for such an investigation. His order was offered long before the strike and its consequences reached such dire proportions. It is, of course, true that not all of the Legislature is of the same mind as the committee on rules. Mr. Sanborn of Lawrence, by offering his substitute order for an investigation by the Legislature, shows his dissent from the committee. Lawrence is his home city and naturally he feels the stress of the strike more than members who have lived further from the scenes of action. Still further, he is a Democrat, one of the very best in the House, a member of the judiciary committee and one who would be regarded as by temperament and training and surroundings to be a conservative. Therefore his dissent is significant. In the main, as far as the committee on rules is a sign, the feeling among a majority of the members is that order must be enforced first and investigation must come afterward.

There is constant excitement about the governor's chamber. The special officer of the district police who has been on duty there much of the time since the practice began of having an officer there, after the killing of a man in Gov. Guild's administration, tells me that there is no doubt that such protection is necessary, for the circumstances are far different from what they were in the good old days before radicalism became so militant.

But all our conservatives are becoming radical. It is only a matter of degree and method. Practices which a few years ago were accepted as permanent are now antiquated. Senator George F. Hoar was not only opposed to the popular election of United States senators, but he was shocked at the very idea, it was so repugnant to him, so impossible for a rational, patriotic mind to entertain, as he saw it. But everybody to-day, in spite of the further objections of Senators Lodge and Crane, are for it. Joseph Walker, conservative by nature, associations and inheritance, stands to-day for popular methods in politics and taxation which have made him persona grata to the Republican managers, and yet they are themselves following in the same direction, only a little way behind. Walker advocates a sort of referendum, though he would have the Legislature decide what measures shall be submitted to the people. Senator Holden of Suffolk falls into line, though he is the Back Bay man, and Chairman Hatfield of the Republican state committee says that they desire, as the representatives of the Republican party, to do what the majority of the party wants done, though what the majority wants is far more radical than seemed possible only as recently as Lodge's Faneuil hall speech against the popular instruction of representatives and senators. In truth, it seems as if our supposed leaders were really followers, while the real leadership is on the side of the struggling masses who are determined to get a larger proportion of the good things of life and are ready to fight for every inch of their progress. Certainly the combative temperament is foremost and Lodge and Crane both hate that.

To-day is the last day for public hearings before the congressional redistricting committee. Strong opposition has been made by several parties of the state, especially by the Republicans of Worcester, the shoe towns in the vicinity of Brockton, the towns of the jewelry manufacturers, which want to be grouped together, the Cape, which protests against being yoked up with New Bedford, and the city of Lynn, which insists that it is so different from the textile city of Lawrence that its shoes ought not to be put into the same class. Congressman Roberts hates to lose nearly all his safe towns and cities and to receive Somerville, the home of Charles J. Glidden, who may defeat him for the nomination as Republican candidate. Some very clever substitutes for the committee's plan have been presented, but the committee seems to stand like a stone wall against any amendment of its suggestions, for the instant one change is made, and a precedent established, the door will be open for other changes to follow. The fact disclosed by a Democrat who has done a piece of figuring which the recess committee did not do, showing that, by the last congressional vote the Democrats carried six of the 16 new districts and may carry one more easily, seems to have secured Democratic support, and it is now a question whether this discovery may not cause some change in the plan, especially if all the Republicans should agree with Senator Denny of Worcester in his frank assertion that this is a

BRIMFIELD.

Objection to More Poles in Streets.

The selectmen gave a hearing Saturday afternoon in the town hall on a petition of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company for permission to set 14 poles along the south side of the common from the library to the Brookfield road, and two on the Brookfield road between the residence of Charles Tarbell and the hotel. Many interested citizens as well as abutters were present, and there was unanimous objection to the proposition. The telephone company wishes to put all the present individual or loose wires into one cable, but the abutters want the poles set in the lots at the rear of the houses. The selectmen reserved their decision for 30 days.

Several books on Japan have been loaned by the Springfield public library to the library here. This is along the plan of interlibrary loans recommended by the library commission of Massachusetts.

The executive committee of the Hitchcock Free Academy alumni association held a meeting last evening. President Harry Back coming from Danielson, Ct., for the purpose. Very little business was transacted other than fixing the probable date for the triennial reunion as August 29.

The Academy orchestra gave a concert, followed by a dance, last Friday evening in the Sturbridge town hall. The orchestra, directed by Principal George F. Kenney, consisted of 10 pieces, as follows: First violins, Leroy F. Jarrett, H. Earle Doyle, Frances M. Kirby; second violins, William P. Mallahy, James E. Kirby; cornets, Bernard Maloney, Maud Locke, 1911;

'cello, G. F. Kenney; xylophone and traps, Mrs. Lillian N. Kenney; pianist, Earle S. Jarrett; leader, Principal G. F. Kenney. A line program was given, Mrs. Kenney adding much to the entertainment by her readings.

Then and Now.

Prior to the last 15 years, by the time people had attained their first quarter of a century, they considered themselves pretty much formed as to physical and mental characteristics. If they were ambitious and energetic they perhaps carried on some kind of exercise for their physical well-being, and guarded against mental deterioration as they advanced in years by occasionally taking up new studies or reviewing old ones: as a dear old lady of my acquaintance at the age of eighty-nine began to review her algebra to keep her mind active.

Now everything is changed. We cannot settle down comfortably in the thought of anything in the regular routine of life which we may not be called upon to alter at a moment's notice. Most of us have found that few of our established habits are right and that unless we are willing to be left hopelessly behind our associates we must learn over again all that we acquired in infancy, and that has since become a matter of automatic action.—The Atlantic Jews and Suicide.

The Jewish World of London notes that a proportionately greater number of suicides occur among the Jews in England and in America than in the countries in which the race meets with the harshest treatment. This is said to be due to the fact that the Orthodox Jews of European countries look upon self destruction as a crime no less abhorrent than is murder, whilst many Anglicized Jews are more lax in their adherence to the teachings of their fathers.

UP TO THE FREEZING POINT

Ample Cause Why Miss Oldgirl

Should Heave a Sigh on Awakening From Dream.

The shimmering moonlight silvered

the placid water. The tinkle of a banjo down in the cabin floated up the companionway and spread itself around the deck. The girl leaned against the rail. The captain was first.

"Miss Oldgirl," he said softly, "from the first minute you decorated this ship with your charming presence, I have worshiped you. Yea, worshiped.

Worshiped. As an old sea dog, the word ought to have 'ship' in it somewhere. Will you go halves with me for the rest of this earthly cruise?"

The girl was just about to answer

when the first mate appeared.

"Hear me before you promise," he begged. "If you don't make me the happiest man on earth I will jump overboard and stick out my tongue

at the life boat. Say, yes; ah,

yes!"

Softly, though. The second mate is approaching.

"Hear me, ere you decide," he besought. "I love you so much it's a shame. Nobody did. Nobody could.

Won't you?"

With a start the girl awoke and rubbed her eyes with two knuckles and a sigh. It was her thirty-second birthday, and thirty-two is freezing point.

Do It Now.

Don't thou intend a kindness to thy loved one? Do it straightway before the future comes, destroying thy opportunity. Has thy heart's friend carelessly or cruelly stabbed into thy heart? Forgive him; think how when thou art dead, he will punish himself.—Thos. Carlyle.

HELPFUL HINTS ON HAIR HEALTH.

Scalp and Hair Troubles Generally Caused by Carelessness.

Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a microbe which also produces baldness. Never use a comb or brush belonging to some one else. No matter how cleanly the owner may be, these articles may be infected with microbes, which will infect your scalp. It is far easier to catch hair microbes than it is to get rid of them, and a single stroke of an infected comb or brush may lead to baldness. Never try on anybody else's hat. Many a hat-band is a resting place for microbes.

If you happen to be troubled with dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair or baldness, we have a remedy which we believe will completely relieve these troubles. We are sure of this that we offer it to you nothing for the trial if it does not produce the results we claim. This remedy is called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We honestly believe it to be the most scientific remedy for scalp and hair troubles, and we know of nothing else that equals it for effectiveness, because of the results it has produced in thousands of cases.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is devised to banish dandruff, restore natural color when its loss has been brought about by disease, and make the hair naturally silky, soft and glossy. It does this because it stimulates the hair follicles, destroys the germ matter, and brings about a free, healthy circulation of blood, which nourishes the hair roots, causing them to tighten and grow new hair. We want everybody who has any trouble with hair or scalp to know that we think that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is the best hair tonic and restorative in existence, and no one should scoff at or doubt this statement until they have put our claims to a fair test, with the understanding that they pay us nothing for the remedy if it does not give full and complete satisfaction in every particular. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies only at our store—The Rexall Store.

Old-Time Dances Enjoyed.

Woman's Relief Corps Revives Years Old Program With Success.

If there has been any suspicion in the minds of the younger generation that the good old-fashioned dances of 20 or more years ago were out of date and not cared for at the present time, that impression must have been rudely dispelled by the attendance at the dance given Wednesday evening by the Woman's Relief Corps in Memorial Hall. The program was made up from dance orders preserved from 20 to 30 years, and included quadrilles, contra dances, polkas, etc., and the large attendance and the zest with which the various numbers on the program were "stepped" was an emphatic refutation of the idea that the fancy dances of the later days are the only ones cared about. Over 200 tickets were sold. Prof. Comfort called the figures for a hall full of dancers, and everybody had the very best time ever. And they were not all dancers of a former day—the younger generation was there in force, and seemed as much pleased with the dances as those who were familiar with them years ago.

District Always Protected.

When Steamer Leaves the Village, Men and Apparatus Remain.

The question has been asked, since the Three Rivers fire a few weeks ago, as to what protection is provided for the village of Palmer when the steamer is taken to one of the other villages, with a part of the members of the fire department, and there has been apprehension on the part of some that the property here has been left unprotected. This is not the case. Such conditions—the necessity for taking the steamer and men to other parts of the town—was provided for a long time ago by Chief Summers. At such times at least one of the engineers, with other members of the department, are left at the engine house until the rest of the men and apparatus which has gone has returned. When the steamer is taken away the large hose wagon, with the jumper, always remains in the quarters here, with men on watch.

Enjoyed Talk On Mexico.

Woman's Tuesday Club and Guests Listen to Ware Woman Traveler.

The members of the Woman's Tuesday club, with invited guests, enjoyed a most delightful afternoon Tuesday at the home of Mrs. C. K. Gamwell on Foster street, the occasion being a lecture by Mrs. E. F. Utley of Ware on "Mexico of to-day." Mrs. Utley has traveled for three years in that country, and what she had to say was more in the nature of a talk than a formal lecture. She spoke of the country, the people and their habits, conditions as they exist at the present time, and proved a most entertaining speaker. She also exhibited a large number of curios and other articles brought from that country. A part of the program was a piano solo by Miss Frances Chandler, an instrumental duet by Mrs. F. S. Keith and Miss Chandler, and vocal solos by Mrs. C. W. Williams. Lunch was served.

Death of George Johnson.

George Johnson, 74, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frank H. Lee, on Knox street last Saturday afternoon at 3.15. Mr. Johnson was a native of Glasgow, Scotland, and came to America when six years of age, going to Norwich, Ct. He had lived there since, until coming to Palmer two years ago. He was a member of Somerset lodge of Masons of Norwich. He leaves one son, James Johnson, of Norwich, and five daughters, Mrs. Frank Rathburn and Mrs. Werner Heideloff, both of Plainfield, N. J., Mrs. Herbert Draper of Norwich, Miss Fannie Johnson and Mrs. Frank H. Lee of Palmer. There was prayer at the house Sunday afternoon, Rev. C. W. Williams officiating. The body was taken to Norwich, where funeral services were held Tuesday.

Miss Ethel Oakes' class in St. Paul's Sunday school will hold a candy sale in Whitcomb & Faulkner's store tomorrow afternoon at 2.

The members of the Baptist congregation gave a farewell reception in the church Wednesday evening to the pastor, Rev. C. W. Williams, and wife, who are soon to leave for New Jersey, where Mr. Williams will assume a new charge. There were about 150 present, a large number considering the church membership. The program of the evening consisted of pipe organ selections by Mrs. Frank S. Keith, readings by Mrs. Parkhurst and Mr. Darby, and vocal solos by Harold K. Taylor and Mr. Sanderson. The men's Gordon Bible class presented Mr. Williams with a purse of money, and another was given Mrs. Williams by the Ladies' society. Refreshments were served, followed by a social hour.

The directors of the association for district nursing will hold a meeting in the reference room of the public library Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A dance will be held in Memorial Hall Tuesday evening, February 13th, under the auspices of the Woman's Relief Corps, the proceeds to be used for special patriotic work.

A large number from this town went to see the "Spring Maid" in Springfield Saturday, but many were disappointed, as the house was sold out early and tickets could not be obtained.

The teachers of the Palmer grammar school building entertained the teachers of the rest of the town and the members of the school committee in the school building last Friday evening.

Dillon as director and member of the purchasing committee were read and accepted. The directors elected Clifton H. Hobson librarian, and Freeman A. Don't Let Anything Get Away

Practically every farm in this country would show a nice profit if the above expressed idea could be and was carried out with all its possibilities. Good fences and lots of them go a long way toward solving the question of bigger profits. Put up the fences and let the hogs and other animals go after the waste places, pick up the lost grain, eat and grow fat on that which otherwise would not bring a penny. Two five-acre hog pastures alternated will furnish much more grass and make many more pounds of pork than one ten-acre pasture. Good fences add to the value of your farm,

HIS REVOLUTIONIZED COOKING

Famous English Chef Who Worked Out and Perfected Popular System of Paper Bag Cooking.

Women readers of this paper will be interested to learn that we have arranged to publish a series of articles on the famous Soyer system of paper bag cooking with recipes that have been carefully worked out by M. Soyer and Martha McCulloch Williams, the well known American cooking expert. The system of paper bag cooking, once understood, has been eagerly adopted by housewives and cooks all over the country. Some months ago M. Nicholas Soyer, chef of Brooks' Club, London—himself one of the world's most noted living chefs, and grandson of that Soyer, "the immortal Alexis," who has been called the gastronomic regenerator of the Nineteenth Century—worked out and perfected a system of cooking in paper bags. After years of study and effort he this—and then he told of his system and its advantages over the old pot and kettle method.

M. Soyer's system of paper bag cooking is unquestionably fast revolutionizing household cooking in England, for a thousand years noted for its ultra conservatism. All classes of housewives are hailing it with delight; and, to cap the climax of praise which has risen about M. Soyer's ears, his fellow chefs have pronounced his paper bag system of cooking a practical success in every way, and have adopted it for much of their cooking.

PAPER BAG COOKING CONVERT
Martha McCulloch Williams Declares Soyer System is Latest Gift to Woman's Greatest Art.

Mrs. Martha McCulloch Williams, one of America's foremost cooking authorities, is a strong advocate of paper bag cooking. She has prepared a number of recipes for good dishes that will be printed in the series of articles on M. Soyer's famous system of paper bag cooking that we have arranged to run.

Mrs. Williams proclaims herself joyously a self-made cook, and mighty proud of her ability in that line. Indeed she says she thinks it a shame that so many millions are wasted in the endowment of colleges, libraries and so on—the money would bring so much greater increment of happiness and human comfort were she endowed liberally enough to permit of her cooking all the time, and all the things she likes.

"I am keenly interested in public affairs—almost as much so as in paper bags. But you couldn't chase me with the ballot—to give it to women would mean the spoiling of two excellent-good things. The profession of woman I regard as the finest in the world—and sufficient to satisfy the most supreme talent. But in cooking lies my real enthusiasm. It is the one art that might tempt me into capital letters. And paper bags are the last best gift of it."

Mrs. Williams keeps house, and delights in dinners for six—which she cooks and serves herself. Thus what she has to say in this series carries the weight of experience.

GIRL WAS WISE TO THE LAW

Prospective Servant Knew Just Exactly Amount of Breakage for Which She Could Not Be Held.

"Some girls may be green and easily imposed upon," said the woman, "but just as many more can give their employers points on law. The girl that came to my house from an employment agency knew more in a minute about the rights of employer and employee than I would know in a year. About the first thing that she did was to look out at that big hole in the ground at the other end of the lot, where they were preparing to build. She said:

"If I should break any dishes while that building is going up you couldn't make me pay for them."

"I asked why not and she informed me that a girl working in a building that is likely to be shaken by blasting is protected by the same rule that governs employees in a dining car. Owing to the insecurity, they are allowed $20 a month for breakage. Dishes valued at less than $20 may be smashed with impunity. She gave me a printed account of the trouble of two friends who had threshed that matter out in court and had been sustained in their contention for a $20 leeway. I didn't employ that girl. I don't want to impose upon any girl, but I didn't want to hire one who knows that she can smash my best dishes up to $20 worth and get off without paying damages."

Freaks of Lightning.

Lightning has playfully snatched a whip from a rider's hands, made off with the knitting needles of two gossiping women who were sitting knitting, and, seizing the pitchfork from the shoulder of a farm laborer, carried it off 50 yards or thereabouts and twisted the tines into a corkscrew. It has torn the misal from the hands of a singing youth and destroyed it, and has lighted a candle and a gas jet. It has caught up the scissors from the hand of a girl seated at a sewing machine and whisked them off, while it lifted her bodily upon the machine, where she found herself when she recovered from her experience. It has melted earrings without killing the wearer.

WORK THAT TELLS.

Plenty of It Has Been Done Right Here in Palmer.

Cures that last are cures that tell. To thoroughly know the virtues of a medicine you must investigate the cures and see if they prove permanent. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test, and plenty of proof exists right here in Palmer. People who testified years ago to relief from backache, kidney and urinary disorders, now declare that relief was permanent and the cure perfect. How can any Palmer sufferer longer doubt the evidence?

Mrs. Osborn, 38 Converse St., Palmer, Mass., says: "I still recommend Doan's Kidney Pills highly and confirm all I said in their praise when I publicly recommended them in 1908. My head and back ached and it was plain to be seen that my kidneys were disordered. I always felt tired and I knew that something must be done. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I obtained a supply at Lynde and Gould's Drug Store. They soon gave me relief and after taking them I enjoyed good health."

Finding a Home.

For every life a cat has there seems a way to find the animal a good home. One of the ways was sprung on a policeman who patrolled Ninety-seventh street the other morning at daybreak. In a basement area he noticed a tightly sealed willow basket bobbing up and down, apparently of its own volition in front of a basement door.

"Baby," grunted the policeman, although even he could not see how a baby small enough to go into the basket could cause such violent commotion. Cautiously he raised the corner of the lid and saw not a baby, but a cat. Accompanying the cat was a note.

"Please give Ethelbert a good home. He is a fine mouser. We are leaving town and cannot take him."

The policeman aroused the cook. Presently the whole family appeared. "It's up to you," said the officer.

"Ethelbert is a fine looking and he behaves like a gentleman. Do you want him?"

"We will keep him," said the housekeeper, "but what a funny way to dispose of a cat. Why didn't they give him away or sell him if they didn't want to turn him adrift?"

"I guess," said the policeman, "they thought he'd find a better home this way."

THREE RIVERS.

Minstrel show of Palmer council, K. of C., in Palmer opera house Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Feb. 6 and 7.

Baptist Pastor Closes Pastorate.

Rev. Paul Weber closed his short pastorate at the Baptist church last Sunday night. The service was a union one of the Union and Baptist churches, the Union church giving up their service for the occasion. Mr. Weber's sermon was not of a farewell nature, but was one which left lasting impressions on all. Mr. Weber came as pastor of the church last June at the close of a year's study at the Newton Theological Seminary. He was born in Switzerland and came to the States with his parents when a young boy. He was a graduate of the William Jewell College of Liberty, Mo., and was at one time principal of a school in Missouri.

Mr. Weber was first introduced to the church here during the winter of 1910-11, when he supplied the pulpit Sunday mornings for several months in connection with his work at the Carlisle mission, Springfield, where he preached Sunday evenings, coming each week from Newton. He so won the hearts of the people during his term of supplying that he was extended a unanimous call to become pastor of the church. He accepted and began his duties at the close of the school term.

In the seven months that he has been here he has made a large circle of friends. Mrs. Weber also has won a great many friends who regret to see them leave. At Christmas time Mr. and Mrs. Weber were presented with a sum of money by the members of the church, and Mr. Weber's night school presented him with a sum of money.

He was also presented with a watch chain from the members of his night school as a parting gift. The members of the church presented Mr. and Mrs. Weber with several photographs of themselves, which were taken by Woodhead of Palmer by request, all these instances being demonstrations of the kindly feelings held for Mr. and Mrs. Weber by all. Mr. Weber's short stay here has not been in vain, for an interest such as has not been felt for several years was being made manifest by all. Several members were added to the church and the night school for men on Tuesday evenings was much appreciated, as was the Bible class on Friday evenings. The community as well as the church regret to have him leave, for he was highly esteemed by all with whom he came in contact, as was also Mrs. Weber. They have gone to St. Charles, Mo., where his new pastoral duties begin next Sunday. The pulpit will be occupied next Sunday by William Paul of Chicopee. The following Sunday it is expected that Rev. M. G. Tupper of Maine will preach.

Death of William Riddle.

William Riddle, 53, died at his home Saturday afternoon at 3.15. He had been in ill health for the past three months, but had been confined to his bed only a few weeks and the news of his death came as a shock to his friends. Mr. Riddle was born in Glenore, County of Armagh, Ireland, April 15, 1858. At the age of 23, he came to America and settled in Three Rivers where he had resided ever since.

Mr. Riddle was employed in the Palmer Mill for several years, leaving its employ only a few years ago. The deceased leaves besides a widow, six children, Sarah, Mary, Margaret, Elizabeth, John and Rose, all of Three Rivers, and also one sister in Ireland. The funeral services were held Monday in St. Mary's church, Thorndike, of which the deceased was a faithful member. A high mass of requiem was said, Rev. P. J. Griffin officiating. Burial was in St. Thomas' cemetery. The bearers were D. J. Hartnett, James Manning, Thomas Bothwell, James King, James Hartnett and Daniel Horgan.

IOWA WOMAN WELL AGAIN

Freed From Shooting Pains.
Spinal Weakness, Dizziness,
by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my health."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WAMPLER, 524 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Consider Well This Advice.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

All these testimonials are guaranteed genuine and truthful. The original of each came to us entirely unsolicited. They are sincere expressions of gratitude for actual benefits received from the medicine.

Monson News.

WANTS NUISANCE ABOLISHED.

Objection to Overflow From Cesspool at Meacham Street Schoolhouse.

The school committee has received complaint from a resident and property owner near the Meacham street schoolhouse concerning the cesspool in the school yard, the overflow from which runs into the man's yard. The cesspool was constructed under the direction of the committee which had the erection of the school building in charge, and it was supposed to be large enough for the purposes intended. It is now found, however, to be much too small. The complainant has agreed to allow the matter to remain quiescent until the frost is out of the ground, when it is probable that a new and larger cesspool will be constructed. There has been a suggestion that the sewerage from the school building be carried to a nearby brook, but there is a question whether the approval of the board of health could be secured.

Officers Installed.

About 275 members and friends of Massachusetts Catholic order of Foresters attended the installation of officers of the Wiseman court in Memorial Hall Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. There were many present from out of town, including members of the high standing committee of Boston, and members of different courts from Springfield and Holyoke. Two special cars conveyed the Springfield guests. The installation was under the direction of District Deputy Catherine E. Fitzgerald and suite of Springfield. An interesting program followed the exercises, consisting of a solo by Jeremiah Seannell, a selection by the Wiseman court quartet, composed of Miss J. V. Cantwell, Mrs. J. J. Burke, Miss Emma Mulvihill and Mrs. J. P. Herlihy, and a selection by the Glee Club of the McDermott court of Springfield. There was also some very interesting speaking by the members of the high standing committee. Refreshments were served by Faulkner and Osborne. The officers were installed as follows: Past Chief Ranger, James Burdick; chief ranger, Miss Sarah Gavin; sub-chief ranger, Miss Annie E. O'Connor; recording secretary, Miss Mary T. O'Brien; financial secretary, Miss Mary O'Connor; senior conductor, Miss Lillian Lafor; junior conductor, Miss Grace Sullivan; inside sentinel, Miss Mary Gavin; outside sentinel, Miss J. V. Cantwell; delegates to the state convention, Miss J. V. Cantwell and James Burdick; alternates, Mrs. John Burke and Mrs. James Burdick. Miss Gavin was presented with a handsome bouquet of flowers by Miss J. V. Cantwell, following her installation to the principal office.

Good Wrestling Match.

A very interesting wrestling match was held in Memorial hall last night, when Sandy McLeod, the so-called champion of Scotland, took two falls from Bailey, the 210-pound strong man of Brattleboro, Vt. The first fall was with a bar-arm and scissors hold in 31 minutes and the second fall in 21 minutes with the same hold. It was announced during the intermission that on Wednesday night Bailey's home had been destroyed by fire and that in attempting to save some of the furniture his hands had been badly burned. This was found to be true by the spectators, many of whom went to the ringside as Bailey wanted to prove his statement. It was a clean match and it is probable that both men will appear again this winter. In the preliminary young Mohamet defeated Battling Drulett in 12-12 minutes.

Pleasant Entertainment.

There was a large attendance of both Monson and Palmer members of the golf club at the club house Monday evening, the occasion being the regular monthly entertainment, in charge of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Cushman, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Flynt, Miss Cooke, Miss Cushman, Miss Wingate and Miss Holmes. The program consisted of humorous original monologues and pianologues by Miss Livermore of Boston. Miss Livermore certainly proved an entertainer of rare merit; her original monologues were clever and witty, and rendered with inimitable manner strikingly true to the character being portrayed. The pianologues too proved a decided novelty much enjoyed. Refreshments were served after the completion of the program.

Might Have Been Serious Fire.

What might have been a serious fire was discovered just in time at the Monson House Saturday night at 11.15. A chimney fire from which sparks were lying had set fire to the roof over the back veranda of the building. The guests of the hotel were awakened and an alarm from box 15, which is in front of the hotel, was pulled in; the fire department responded in less than five minutes and the blaze was put out immediately by the use of the chemical engine.

Say, have you entered?
That's what's on the tip of the tongue of every man, woman, boy or girl in Palmer and vicinity.

No one stops or hesitates a moment to ask "In What?" for everyone knows that everyone else is talking about the same thing they are thinking about—the phenomenal prizes offered by the Palmer Journal.

The announcements in the Palmer Journal Jan. 26, created a stupendous sensation and straightway evoked enormous enthusiasm. The very first mail received after the paper was out contained a nomination of a popular young lady by a well known business man. That's the way to get going. Of course she will have no big advantage over those who are also getting started. But it makes impressive the importance of getting an early start.

If you have a friend, any man or woman, married or single, or boy or girl, whom you think would make an active candidate, send in his or her name at once on nomination blank, or if you are a hustler YOU will nominate YOURSELF and get under way. The thing is to DO IT TO-DAY, DO IT NOW.

The candidates already enrolled in the $250 cash and prize contest are beginning to straighten their thinking caps, shove them on more firmly, and figure divers ways and means of securing votes in abundance.

The contest manager had some pleasant little heart-to-heart chats with the old and several prospective candidates who dropped in at the contest department yesterday.

Its members were greatly impressed by one thing—the necessity of the vote-gatherer enlisting the support of a hustling male campaign manager to promote his or her candidacy.

The campaign manager may be anyone sufficiently interested in your progress, and who comes in contact with enough people every day to make his work in your behalf effective. Perhaps the very individual who appears to you to be always effacing himself might be the very one whose efforts will carry the most influence.

As for the lady contestants, there are scores of bright, breezy young men who are just jingling to be asked to help you by assistance and advice in securing the effective ballots. How about that live brother—either your own or some other girl's brother? Or father, (consult him often, anyway,) or husband, for the married aspirants for the $250 cash and other valuable prizes, or that nice young man; perhaps one of the men in the office, or better still, your employer? If you go at it in the right way you can get him interested. Or that man who lives in your block and whom everybody knows—you know the one we mean? And postmaster—my, what perfectly splendid campaign managers postmasters or their assistants make—a collector or assistant collector—none better.

You see there are so many places—offices, business concerns, lodges, cigar stores, etc.—where men go and where they can secure votes galore, but where you never had an entrance. Take a friendly hint, based on past experience. Hustle around and secure a good masculine campaign manager. Better still, get two or three. While working along your campaign may progress as smoothly as a perfect "buzz wagon" on a macadam road, but some days there will come a hitch in the easy running. You will be down in the dumps. It will be necessary for you to have some wise counsel to infuse new life and wisdom into your campaign. A different plan of action than the one you have been carrying out may be needed. That's where he comes in, with cool-headed judgment, suggestions and encouragement. This is the time when you will appreciate the value of a man in a campaign like this one. The e is nothing more important than picking a pilot (and a captain and first mate if you can secure them) to safely guide your ship of effort through the channel of progress into the harbor of success. Whom are you going to interest?

Think and Then Act.

Think the suggestions over that are presented to you to-day, observe the voting table, and carefully consider all the features in detail. You will surely agree it is "well worth while." Earnest effort will secure success.

Prospective Subscribers.

Now a word about subscribers to other papers who are paid in advance. Many such subscribers tell contestants that they would help them out by subscribing for the Palmer Journal if they were not paid up on another paper for six or eight months. When contestants find such persons simply say you can take their subscription to start any time they wish, even a year from now.

Remember the ten thousand special bonus vote offer closes Wednesday night, Feb. 14, at 8 o'clock.

The 10,000 ballot will be given to candidates securing five yearly subscriptions for the Palmer Journal. No limit to the number of ballots secured on this offer.

Contestants Take Notice.

If you learn that some of the subscribers have paid their subscriptions on or after Jan. 26, 1912, pick up their receipt and give them one of yours in return. Votes will be allowed on same in accordance with the rules of the contest.

Coupons may be sent direct to the contestants to be voted for, or they may be sent to the contest department of the Palmer Journal.

Knights of Columbus and District Nurse Association Will Divide a Considerable Sum.

That the amusement loving portion of the community takes kindly to a good minstrel show, especially if it be a local production, was demonstrated by the large audiences which greeted the Knights of Columbus in the opera house Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Practically every seat in the house was sold for both performances, and it is estimated that the Knights

WALES CHURCH BURNED.

Overheated Furnaces Start Sunday Morning Blaze.

METHODIST STRUCTURE DESTROYED.

Built in 1832, Remodeled in the '90s. No Regular Pastor Lately. Insurance $1000.

The Methodist church at Wales was entirely destroyed by fire Sunday morning. The blaze was discovered soon after 9 o'clock by Miss Sadie Royce, who gave the alarm, and every effort was made to save the building. It was an old wooden structure and it burned like tinder. The townspeople had only hand extinguishers, and finding that the building could not be saved, they devoted their attention to saving nearby property, the summer home of H. C. Needham being in great danger. The house was saved, but one side of the building was badly scorched.

The church was an old-fashioned structure, with a square steeple, and was painted white. It had a high basement, used as a vestry, with the large audience room above. It was built in 1832, but during the '90s was remodeled and renovated. It was insured for $1000, covering only a small part of the loss, which will be from $3000 to $5000. It is believed the fire started from the overheating of the furnaces. The church had not been used for several weeks, but Sunday a fire had been built in preparation for the morning service. There has been no settled pastor in the church for some time.

Honors For Palmer Man.

L. M. Hoyle, of National Biscuit Company, Wins Valuable Prize.

L. M. Hoyle, manager of the Palmer agency of the National Biscuit Company, is showing with a great deal of pride a handsome sterling silver cup which came last Friday, being a prize offered by the company in an agency contest.

The contest was open to all agencies in Southern New England, and there were 13 in the field; Palmer was the smallest, and Mr. Hoyle had for his competitors agents in such places as Springfield, Worcester, Providence, Fall River and New Bedford—all being city agencies but Palmer. The contest was on the basis of the highest average increase in sales, and in general efficiency. Scoring was by a set of ten regulations, which included greatest increase in the sale of any one product, increase in sales of certain named varieties, proportion of returns to sales, etc. Agencies must be established a year before the manager may enter a contest, and last October was the first month in which the Palmer agency was eligible. Mr. Hoyle started right after the prize however, and at the end of the first month had secured so good a start that a circular letter to the others in the territory warned them to look after their laurels. Mr. Hoyle was never headed however, and finished well in the lead. Springfield was seventh and Worcester at the foot of the list.

Mr. Hoyle is a young man who is universally well liked by the merchants in the Palmer territory. He was for three years a traveling salesman for the company, and before the Palmer agency was established was for a short time at Morristown, N. J. His work is all the more creditable when it is known that the Palmer agency covers only the territory from Stafford Springs on the south to Belchertown on the north, with Ware, Warren and Fiskdale as the boundaries in other directions—in all 22 towns, and none of them very large.

Wilbraham Church to be Rebuilt.

The Congregational society of Wilbraham, whose church edifice was burned last summer, has voted to rebuild, and has appointed a committee consisting of Chauncey L. Peck, Ethelbert Bliss and Myron L. Brewer to solicit funds. The society has also voted to hold services in the Methodist church during this year.

Elected to School Committee.

Word has been received that Rev. C. Julian Tuthill, son of Mrs. Delight Tuthill of Pleasant street, now pastor of a Congregational church in Matapoisett, was on Tuesday elected a member of the school committee of that place. Mr. Tuthill had no opposing candidate, and received 214 votes, 40 more than were cast for any other candidate for town office, showing the esteem in which he is held by the fellow citizens.

and the district nursing association, which are to share the proceeds, will realize about $200 each from the effort. And the show was well worth attending. The participants showed that they had been carefully trained and had worked hard to secure a high degree of perfection, and the audiences were prepared not to expect too much from amateurs whose days are full of other duties and who must do their rehearsing in "overtime" at night.

The curtain rose on a pretty stage setting. The back was paneled in white and light blue bunting, on which was displayed a large K. of C. emblem. Back of the front row were two other rows of the chorus, only slightly elevated; all were black face with the exception of the interlocutor. The end men—there were eight of them—were gorgeously attired in trousers of blue satin with old-gold stripes, and claw-hammer coats of old gold with blue facings and cuffs; large red bow ties and immense white collars completed their outfit. After the opening overture and the preliminary prancing of the end men the audience listened for the expected local "gags." And they were in no wise disappointed. There were about a dozen and a half of them, and they were appreciated to the full. Interspersed were the following songs:

"Sweet Dreams of You," M. J. Donahue
"Mandy Lou," End song, W. M. Duffy
"If Tears Were Pearls," F. D. Barrett
"Sometimes," End song, A. J. Brouillette
"Sweetest Song of All," Leo Goodreau
"That Daffy Rag," End song, Jasper Bresette
"My Rosary of Dreams," J. J. Donahue
"Alexander Jones," End song, D. F. Dillon

Encores were accorded all the singers, and some of the end songs had to be repeated more than once. The first number in the olio was Billy McDonald in monologue. It took him some time to get fairly started, for someone in the wings insisted on borrowing the ancient lantern he had brought along to see his way back with; after producing three more "ancient and honorables" from various locations in his apparel, he satisfied the borrower and was allowed to proceed. His observations were along numerous lines and brought forth generous laughter from the audience. Read, Moran, Read and Lynch, in "Glad Rags," rendered several musical selections of merit and a couple of dialect sketches. The last number on the program was a scene "Down in Dixie," representing a plantation in the cotton belt and a gathering of dummies, which included The Columbian Quartet—Reno, Roy, Pero and Camerlin—and Billy Syner, a dancer of no mean ability.

The Knights deserve much credit for the production. The committee in charge was J. E. Doyle, J. J. Donahue, D. W. Dillon, William Holden, J. J. Sullivan, R. F. Donovan, W. M. Barrett, W. E. McDonald, C. M. Foley conditions existing from the time of King Solomon, with its anarchy, revolution and bloodshed, he touched on the organization of the "Knights of the Hospital" in 1099, known to history as the "Knights of St. John," of whom the modern Knights of Malta are the disciples. After outlining their part in restoring the world to civilization and Christianity, the speaker said in part:

The twentieth century is no longer interested in the empty sepulchre. The history of Palestine is a thing of the past. Our several visions of the Holy City serve merely the purpose of acquainting ourselves with the facts of the past. If we may learn by the mistakes of past civilizations, or be inspired by the bravery and chivalry of the Sir Knights of the middle ages to guard against a repetition of the forces that have been the undoing of the past, then our review together has not been in vain. We are living for the future. This is an age of moral forces as applied to the souls of men. The empty sepulchre has lost its virtue. "He is not here. He is risen!" The only lasting power is in the touch of the living Christ. It is not a question of journeying to a sacred shrine for absolution of our sins; nor yet of making war upon unbelievers; but it is a vital issue in our lives whether an alien foe has possession of the temple of our soul, "that house not made by hands but eternal in the heavens."

The souls of men in our very midst are being desecrated by the anti-Christian influence which society fosters and perpetuates. The soul is besieged by monstrous antagonists manifesting themselves in diverse ways. Greed is sapping the life's blood from many a man. What if a man has gained the whole world and lost his soul? Are there knights of the cross to protect the widow and the fatherless, when this selfish age has given them a stone for bread? Are there knights of the cross who by the power of the Christ can take up their cross and follow him? On temptation mount we meet our personal devils. An empty sepulchre will not save us from degradation and ruin. It is the power and the grace of the living Christ that alone can save the man. It is high time that we declare a crusade against the infidels in our hearts—that sheer apostasy in religious things, that indifference of spirit to worship, that soul-stifling doubt that denies the real values in life. It is a call for modern Knights of St. John, of Rhodes and Malta; it is a call for a general crusade of men, women and children to conquer the ape in human life, to route the devil and his kingdom, to drive the Mr. Hyde to suicide, to crucify selfishness, to take up our cross and follow the Master!

An unflinching and genuine Christian knighthood is demanded. An ob-smashed to a serious extent, but fortunately no one was injured.

In working on the fill it is necessary to run train loads of earth from a bank near by. The grade is downward on the trestle that extends over the fill to a siding, on which one train is held while the low cars of the other are being filled. Friday afternoon three cars of the train that was being loaded broke loose when only one had been filled and started down the grade. Seeing them approach and knowing that if their course was not deflected they would run off the end of the trestle, the engineer of the train on the siding sprang from his cab and turned the switch, with the purpose of shunting the cars onto the siding and bringing them to a stop against the engine. But when the cars struck the engine they did not stop, but pushed the engine and four cars behind it along the track toward the end of the trestle, throwing the whole train off and following on to the heap that was piled up in the fill. The engineer jumped before the crash came and escaped injury. The damage will probably amount to several thousand dollars.

Boston Letter.

Street Railway Problem — Legislature Working Hard — Republican Politics — Walker, Frothingham and Luce — Move to Protect Game Birds.

Worcester county and all of Western Massachusetts beyond has a vital interest in the street railway problem which has been before the committee on street railways this week. It looks, beyond doubt, as if the scheme for the unification of the trolley service with the steam roads would surely come in the near future, even if it does not come this year. There is an association of 21 towns west of the Connecticut river, comprising a material area of the large undeveloped and isolated tracts there, whose purpose is to secure the building of the Blandford extension, so called. Their name in this alliance is the United Hill Towns Traffic Association of Western Massachusetts. Part of the broad scheme is the bill for the combination of the Worcester, Springfield and Berkshire systems into one and then turning over the entire property to the New Haven railroad. All this Western Massachusetts sentiment runs strongly in favor of the railroad control of the situation. It is highly interesting to compare the sentiment as brought out at these hearings with the general alarm on the part of the people when they first saw clearly in sight before them, in the near future, the specter of railroad monopoly of all the steam and trolley transportation of the state. One of the speakers for the hill towns put it in this way. It must be conceded that the railroad commission was entirely in error when it laid down the dictum that if trolleys could be run at a profit in this western territory, private capital would be forthcoming to build them. It has been abundantly demonstrated, it was said, that private capital will not build trolley lines among these hills. Yet the New Haven road stands ready to do it, provided the authority is given. Then the proposition was figured out financially in this way: In itself the new business to be developed will not pay for the construction of the new electric lines, because those lines will be feeders to the steam road, bringing down milk and other freight, as well as passengers, for transportation to market. The fares and freight from the point of production to the point of steam shipment will be too small and the trolley line, owned independently, can take only the charges for bringing to the steam road. But the steam road, which is already built, will get the benefit of further charges in taking the passengers and freight from the point of shipment or embarkation, to the cities. These combined charges, on the trolley and on the steam road, will equal the cost of operation and yield a profit also. Hence the steam road can afford to do what private capital in an electric road would find a losing business. Hence the exceedingly earnest effort in these hill towns to put the New Haven road in monopolistic control of the entire transportation of that part of the state.

It is true that it is pointed out that the Connecticut Valley, the Northampton, the Holyoke and some other lines are not yet in the proposed steam monopoly, but there can be little doubt that all the trolley service of that part of the state would eventually be swallowed up by the system and that it would also gulp down the trolley system in Worcester county, in the main.

Probably no session of the Legislature ever began in a more unassuming, effective business way than the present. Committees have settled down to business quickly and reports have been made promptly in many instances. Some of the committees, such as that on agriculture and others with short dockets, have about everything already assigned for hearing and they are evidently making a strenuous effort to comply with the rule to have their reports in by the second Wednesday of March. There has been a complete discontinuance of the pernicious practice of referring matters to two committees sitting jointly, and though there is not as much of an effort as there was last year and in 1910 to have committee hearings after the sessions in the afternoon,—for the experiment was not wholly satisfactory,—yet the forenoon hearings crowd on all steam and hold the petitioners up to the mark of promptness and preparedness as much as possible.

In marked contrast, too, with last year, is the situation in the governor's chamber. Then, Gov. Foss was not only inexperienced, but an unknown quantity. There was an eagerness on the part of the Republicans to put him into a hole, and conditions were not favorable for effective work. This year the contrast is marked. Gov. Foss is on his second term, known by experience. Everything is quiet thus far. Very little is heard in the Legislature of the governor. Perfect calm prevails and the inevitable politics of presidential year has cut no figure yet. Martin M. Lomasney is as undemonstrative as a volcano a hundred years asleep, and business is considered upon its merits. There is friction between the Walker survivors and the Cushing administration which may affect the progress of House business.

The Lawrence strike is such a portentous affair that it is not yet clear how the political partisans will handle it. Hence it has not yet come to be a football in either branch. Several propositions have been made for legislative action, but how they will work out practically and whether the strikers or the employers would fall in with the plans of the legislators is so uncertain that no one can yet foresee any decided gain for either side, save that the effect does not seem favorable to the standpat faction of the Republicans. There is something doing in Republican politics, for the progressives are pushing their ideas for presidential primaries and are arranging for rallies in the cities where they have not yet held them, sticking to their novel plan of not saying anything about their doings till after the thing has been done and then letting the public judge them by performance, not by promise. They still stick to their affirmation that principles, not candidates, are their chief aim, and that they are not committed to any presidential candidate.

Joseph Walker is at the state house occasionally and it is evident that he is waiting to decide whether or not to enter the race for the governorship, while the friends of Louis A. Frothingham are absolutely confident, from their information from all parts of the state, added to last year's primaries, that he can have the nomination if he wants it and that Walker must play second fiddle to Frothingham, if he wants any further advancement in Massachusetts. Lieut. Gov. Luce has his friends, but Frothingham seems, by his friends' account, to dominate the situation.

The congressional redistricting committee, having finished its public sessions, went into executive session this afternoon in an effort to bring its recalcitrant minority members around to the ways of thinking of the majority. Since their last hearing a warm protest has been filed with them from some 400 prominent men all along Cape Cod, protesting against being put into the same district with New Bedford, but all expressions of disapproval seem to roll off from the backs of the committee and not to make the least impression.

John R. Thayer of Worcester made one of his characteristic speeches today before the committee on fisheries and game against the proposition to restrain self-hunting dogs. The commission on fisheries and game, backed up by the state ornithologist, Prof. E. H. Forbush, is making war against the cats which destroy large numbers of birds and against the dogs which go off hunting without their masters, or self-hunting dogs, and scare up many birds from their nests, kill the young, or smash the eggs, and kill what old birds they can. The scientific men make out a very strong case for the protection of the birds and for the benefit of the farmers, but the lover of cats and dogs make a strenuous remonstrance and the impression has got abroad that nothing will be done this year. It is easy to make fun of the proposition to license cats, and so the serious part of the case gets small consideration with some people. Mr. Thayer is a lover of hunting dogs, and he does not want the dogs put under restrictions which will make them nervous, or worry them in any way.

New Russian Oil Region.

While Baku is known as the great oil producing province of Russia, and its wells have produced immense quantities, its reputation bids fair to be overshadowed by the new region, the Sallany Steppe. Sallany is about 125 miles distant from the city of Baku, on the shore of the Caspian sea, at the mouth of the Kura, the largest river in the Caucasus. Its position is a commanding one, both for supplying the European and eastern market. The petroleum deposits in the Sallany steppe have been known for years, but only recently has attention been attracted thereto. The possibilities are very great.

HUMOR IN HIS EXAGGERATION

Jahish Furlong's Recital Illustrates the Characteristic That Makes Maine Stories So Amusing.

Novel and exaggerated smiles and comparisons characterize Maine speech. Instead of such commonplaces as "As light as a feather" and "As dark as a pocket," the comparisons are likely to be "Forty pounds lighter than a straw hat" and "As dark as the inside of a cow."

And it is this same humorous exaggeration that makes many a Maine story so likeable. Jahish Furlong, who worked for old man McKusick in haying time, had it.

"I had the greatest luck out gunning the other day," said Jahish. "I was walking a log across a deep hole in the brook, when I see a squirrel up a spruce on the further bank. I up right there and fired, and I fetched down the squirrel and a partridge besides that was settin' in the spruce budbin'. But the old gun kicked me into the brook. Well, I floundered around, catchin' bolt of everything within reach, and when I found myself up on the bank, I had a mink in one hand, a muskquash in t'other and the seat o' mer pants was full o' trout."

Are Fishes Mirrors?

A scientist says he always fancied little fish were protected against the mouths of the big fish chiefly by their markings looking like the stones and reeds in the water, but he now concludes that all shining, silvery fish are mirrors, reflecting the dark bottom of the pond, and it is only when such fish come to the surface that the light shines on them, and they become visible to the big fish that they prey on little fish. So long as the little, silvery fish stay close to the bottom they look like mud and stones, only showing their shining silver when they come near the top and so are soon swallowed down.

Bearded "Ladies."

M. Brandt, a Danish professor, comes to the conclusion that bearded ladies in time to come will be the order of the day. Ladies with beards who are now to be seen may be regarded as the precursors of the future race, and the professor comes to the conclusion that the more masculine woman becomes in her habits so much the more will she be in appearance. He does not think that bearded ladies will become general until at least two centuries have elapsed. His investigations show that the number of women with traces of mustaches, although clearly visible, increases but slowly. The Paris contemporary from which we take the foregoing suggests that the professor has missed the great point which he might have made and that is that as the number of men who shave increases daily it would follow that women would endeavor to grow beards from sheer perversity.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR PAPER BAG COOKING.

By M. Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

I do not claim for the paper-bag system of cookery that it can cook everything. It is evident that tea must still be made in the teapot. Generally speaking, we may waive our claim to having mastered the difficulty with respect to soups, although I have made beef tea with excellent results. The following is a list of articles that may in the meantime be avoided:

Soup (except beef tea), omelette, scrambled eggs, jam (except in small quantities), Scotch kale, beans, cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, artichokes, macaroni or kindred Italian pastes.

The success of the system depends entirely upon how it is carried out. Good cooking requires time, care, attention to detail, taste and a temperature suited to the particular dish being cooked. While the paper-bag system is labor and time saving, as well as affording more nutritive and appetizing effects than the present, it does not abrogate any of the rules that apply to efficient work at the kitchen-table.

The Bag.

Specially prepared bags should be used. Without them the method cannot be practiced with assurance of success. The bag should be made of materials that guarantee its purity. It should be odorless, and its purity a guarantee that nothing injurious can possibly be imparted from it to the food cooked in the bag.

Before using the bags—

(1) Select one that "fits" the food intended to be cooked:

(2) Grease slightly the inside of the bag, except in the case of vegetables or when water is added. For beginners it is advisable. Butter, lard or dripping may be used.

(3) When the food has been prepared for the bag, place the same on the table and lift the uppermost edge of the bag while you insert the contents.

(4) Fold the mouth of the bag two or three times and fasten with a clip. Strong wire paper-clips, obtainable of any stationer, answer the purpose. It is desirable to fold the corners of the bag so as to secure as near as possible a hermetic closing.

The Oven.

Practically any oven will do. Paper-bag cookery is as well suited to a gas stove as it is to a coal oven, an electricity cooker or oil stove, always provided the necessary heat is secured. The size of the oven makes no difference to the cooking, only to the size of the article.

Before placing the bag with its contents into a gas oven, the gas should be lighted at least eight minutes beforehand. The average oven heat should not be less than 200 degrees Fahrenheit, and when the bag is put into the oven this ought to be reduced in eight minutes after to 170 degrees. To find out the correct degree a thermometer, of course, is the most accurate method; but experience will soon teach the cook what is required, and the color assumed by a piece of paper placed in the oven will at once tell whether it is too hot or too cold.

In the case of coal-heated stoves with solid shelves a wire broiler should be used. This should be placed on the shelf with the bag containing the food. It is necessary to emphasize the fact that, except in the case of pies, no dish should be used.

How to Know when the Food is Cooked.

If the time-table is adhered to, the bag may be taken out of the oven in confidence that the food is well cooked. But if from any cause the heat declines, it is very easy to find out whether the food is properly cooked. Except in the case of vegetables, a little hole can be made in the bag by which the food can be seen and judged as to whether it is cooked or not. This will not militate against the cooking of the food in the slightest. In many articles, however, a slight touch of the bag will indicate to an ordinary cook whether the bag is ready to be served. A prick with a needle is another method that may be adopted. But a peculiarly favorable feature of paper-bag cookery is that if the food is left five or ten minutes in the bag in the oven longer than the specified time on my table, the food will not be spoiled. There is little chance of over-cooking.

Dangers to Be Avoided.

Cooking generally has its dangers, like other occupations. It is the beauty of this system that the dangers are reduced to a minimum. One does not require every now and then to open the oven door "to see how the roast is getting on." The oven is doing its work, because the whole force of the heat is playing upon the bag and ensuring every part of the food being properly penetrated. Nevertheless, care should be exercised when opening the oven.

Care, again, should be exercised in taking the bag out of the oven. A plate should be placed gently under the bag about a couple of inches, and the bag drawn completely on to the plate with the fingers. The bag should be ripped open from the top and the fragments thrown at once away.

HAMPDEN.

The committee appointed by the town for promoting a trolley line to Hampden attended the hearing by the legislative committee on railroads which was given in Springfield last week Thursday. Friday evening a citizens' meeting was held in the selectmen's room at the town hall to hear the report of the trolley committee. About 50 attended and it was voted to have the committee go to Boston to attend the hearing at the state house Tuesday. The committee consists of Julius L. Gottsche, Albert F. Ballard, Thomas H. Ingham and Cornelius J. Flynn.

BELCHERTOWN.

The Republican town committee has organized with E. C. Witt as chairman, Almon Pratt secretary and Myron G. Ward treasurer.

J. W. Jackson was painfully injured last Friday. While chopping in his woodlot a piece of the wood struck inside the ear, injuring the drum, which affects his hearing.

Albert, the elder of the twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Guy C. Allen Jr., and grandson of F. G. Shaw and Guy C. Allen, died Monday after a long and painful illness of pneumonia, complicated by other diseases. Mr. and Mrs. Allen have the sympathy of the community in their loss.

WARE.

Mrs. Emily Duval Condreault, 75, died Tuesday at her home on Canal street. She leaves two daughters, Louise and Elmiere of Ware. The body was taken to Canada for burial.

The Republican town committee has organized as follows: Chairman, C. G. V. Sjostrom; secretary, Walter H. Apperson; treasurer, Dr. A. J. Blodgett. The other members of the committee are Waldo O. Lincoln and Joseph Dupre.

William J. Cote, 31, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cote of Eddy street, died at the state hospital in Westfield Saturday from a hemorrhage of the lungs. He was a barber by trade and was well known in Ware. He leaves, besides his parents, one brother, Theodore J., of Ware.

John Salomonowicz, 53, died Monday morning at his home on Water street of acute indigestion. He attended a christening party the evening before at the home of his son John and retired about 10.30. He was taken ill some time later and died in a short time.

DIET OF THE TEETOTALER

He Tells What He Ate and Drank During Day of Golf and Business.

"I was just recalling what I had taken in the way of refreshment to-day," said a teetotaler to his wife when he came home to dinner on one of the hottest days, "and it makes me astonished that there are not more cases of upset stomachs."

"You know I got up early and went up to play golf. Well, for breakfast I had a lamb chop, cereal, coffee, toast and a couple of bananas."

"After I'd played the six 'hill' holes I had a drink of ice water, and after playing the fifteenth hole we repaired to the shanty of the flagman on the railroad and had one of his lemonades, which he makes for the thirsty golfers and through which trade he probably makes more than his wages amount to."

"After we'd finished I had a dish of ice cream and two large glasses of excellent milk. Then I took a shower bath, dressed and went down town, tarrying for a pineapple ice cream soda and a glass of ice water."

"For lunch at my usual downtown restaurant I took a lettuce and tomato sandwich, leed tea, a good sized section of watermelon and a piece of coconut pie. About fifteen minutes after four o'clock I took an egg chocolate at a soda fountain."

"And here I am, ready for dinner, and not aware of any ill effects from the variety of foods and drinks I've taken."

Sermon to K. of M.

ligation of holiness and a vow of religion should be taken. Every true knight of the cross should be affiliated with the Christian church. Right thinking, right willing and right loving are the ministering angels of light, and they will help us to drive the anti-Christian influences from the Holy Land of our souls.

The twentieth century calls for manhood. Aspiration marks all the processes of growth in our lives. Too long have we lived primarily for the having—gold, stocks and bonds, treasures of earth—too long have we lived primarily for the doing—to follow illusive fame, to climb the ladder of the social coterie, to aggrandize power in temporal things—but to-day the slogan of the true knight of the cross is manhood on the strength of being a living soul in touch with infinite and eternal power. "I am come to give them life, and life more abundant," said Jesus.

The twentieth century calls for equal courage and chivalry to protest in the name of the cross that the injustice, the robbery and the murder in business and in high finance be tolerated. Too long has capital ruled the industrial world. It is high time that labor be emancipated and an economic justice established that will relegate strikes and cast systems to the museum of antiquated things.

What America needs is a Peter, the Hermit, to preach a crusade against unrighteousness, graft, adulteration of drugs and foods; against the hell of the open saloon, against the white slave traffic, tenement houses with unsanitary conditions, against child labor in mines and factories. What America needs is Christian knights, undaunted, courageous; knights who have taken a vow of purity, who have mastered self, to march in a mighty army against all the evils in high places, against the strongholds of economic and sociological wrongs.

Have you not read in the papers that capitalism is sacrificing little children in factories and shops because of their cheaply bought labor? What are Christian knights doing to save the child? Shall despotism sit in our legislative halls? Shall this age not produce a modern crusade against corrupt politics? The devil walks arm in arm with many a congressman. Who will drive these barbarians out of the sacred places? In political realms we see despotism not to be outdone in the days when Nero laughed as Rome slowly burned at his command. In the days when knighthood was in flower women were protected by the sword. What are the modern knights doing to save their daughters from the hands of those who would desecrate their womanhood?

In conclusion, let me remark, that the twentieth century calls for a cosmopolitan brotherhood.

The slogan of the church is: "The world for Christ!" The thirty thousand knights of America must co-operate with the church to bring the kingdom of God to all men. The principles of the order stand for an ennobling brotherhood. The precepts and ceremonies are mere vain glory if they do not exalt the life of man, improve his morals, refine the gold of character from the dross of unholiness; the principles are weak if they do not imbue men with courage, making them intolerant to wrong, gracious to right, protecting the weak and the fatherless, the widow and the outcast. This, then, is Christian knighthood.

It is the doing, not the saying, that makes the hero.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

We Guarantee to Relieve Dyspepsia. If We Fail the Medicine Costs Nothing.

To unquestionably prove to the people that indigestion and dyspepsia can be permanently relieved and that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will bring about this result, we will furnish the medicine absolutely free if it fails to give satisfaction to any one using it.

The remarkable success of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is due to the high degree of scientific skill used in devising their formula as well as to the care exercised in their manufacture, whereby the well-known properties of Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin have been combined with Carminatives and other agents.

Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin are constantly employed and recognized by the entire medical profession as invaluable in the treatment of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The Pepsin used in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is carefully prepared so as to develop its greatest efficiency. Pepsin supplies to the digestive apparatus one of the most important elements of the digestive fluid. Without it the digestion and assimilation of food are impossible.

The Carminatives possess properties which aid in relieving the disturbances and pain caused by undigested food. This combination of these ingredients makes a remedy invaluable for the complete relief of indigestion and dyspepsia.

We are so certain of this that we urge you to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets on our own personal guarantee. Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies only at our store—The Rexall Store, Lynde & Gould, 385 Main St., Palmer.

WHAT DOES PALMER NEED?

The time is rapidly approaching for the selection of officers to look after the affairs of the town for the coming year, and for the annual "Town meeting," when matters financial and otherwise are to be decided. What does the town of Palmer need? What action—or actions—can be taken at the town meeting which will best enhance the welfare of the town as a whole? The Journal knows that there are many and different views on this subject, and would like to present them to the public in general. Suggestions are therefore asked for to be printed in these columns, either with or without the name of the maker, as may be desired. Here is an opportunity to "get together" before the issuing of the town warrant, which will be made up before many weeks.

THE eighth wonder of the world was discovered Wednesday morning when readers of the Springfield Republican opened their papers and found cuts in the advertising column. It was hardly believable, but it was true! For years the S. R. adhered rigidly to its rule of nothing but light-face type for advertising, but advertisers demanded it and gradually type of heavier face was supplied, with no detriment to but rather an improvement of the appearance of the advertising columns, relieving the previous monotony of the lighter and smaller faces. The paper now yields to the further demands of the progressive advertiser for cuts, which oftentimes tell his story more fully than can be done in words, and if censored—as the Republican proposes—rightly, will make the advertising columns still more attractive to the reader, which is what both the advertiser and the paper is striving for.

It will not be surprising if, under the situation as it is being presented, the New York, New Haven and Hartford road is permitted to own trolley roads in Massachusetts. There is a growing demand among the small towns for close touch with the larger business centers; for an opportunity to quickly and economically market the products of the hill-town farms and secure supplies of various kinds from the city markets. These can only be accomplished by the electric road. Private capital will not build them; the New Haven will, if allowed. The construction of such roads as are proposed in the western part of the state will mean much for the financial prosperity of the sections they will serve, and who shall say they are not entitled to the best available in life? It ought to be possible to protect the interests of all concerned in granting such permission.

SPORTSMEN who are interested in the protection of game for the sake of a day's pleasurable shooting now and then will need all the aid in their power for the adoption of the bill now before the Legislature prohibiting the use of the "pump" shotgun, or any gun which can be fired more than twice without reloading. It is not to be expected that the bill will be popular with the man who wishes to secure as big a bag of game as possible for the sake of bragging over it.

A LAW to require a clean bill of health and evidence of normal mind before a marriage license will be issued is to be introduced in the New York Legislature. There is a growing tendency to such a belief among those having to do with feeble-mindedness, pauperism and crime in many sections, and there can be no question of the material benefits such a law would work on civilization at large—if it could be made national in its scope.

'Nother Old-fashioned Dance.

To Be Held in Memorial Hall Next Tuesday Evening.

There was such a large attendance and so much satisfaction expressed with the old-fashioned dancing program given recently by the Woman's Relief Corps, that the committee in charge has decided to give another, and have set the date for next Tuesday evening. The place will be Memorial Hall, as before. The program will consist principally of dances which were in vogue a quarter of a century ago, or so—quadrilles, contras, etc.—but there will be a generous proportion of the popular dances of to-day, and more of them are promised than at the former event.

Pool Tournament Arranged.

Palmer and Ware Players Had First Meeting Last Evening.

A pool tournament has been arranged between members of the Masonic club of Ware and the Palmer Business and Social Club. The Palmer team is composed of George A. Moore, George S. Holden, Thomas J. Moran and Charles Walker, with Harrie M. Howe as referee; the Ware team is composed of Minot C. Wood, Howard A. Tucker, C. E. Besser and C. E. Bills, with C. B. Wetherbee as referee.

The first of the series of eight games was played in Ware last evening, the contestants being Moore and Moran of Palmer, against Besser and Bills of Ware. The result was: Moore 50, Besser 49; Moran 27, Bills 50; total, Palmer 77, Ware 99, leaving Ware 22 points in the lead. The second game will be played in Palmer next Wednesday evening, when the other four members of the teams will try conclusions. The Palmer team and the company which went to Ware to see the games, speak in the highest terms of praise of the treatment accorded them and the entertainment furnished, both before and after the contest, by the Ware contingent.

Woman's Club Guest Night.

Large Number of Friends Entertained With Pleasing Program.

The annual guest night of the Palmer Woman's Club was held last Friday evening in Masonic Hall. A color scheme of pink and white was carried out in the decorations, which were largely of ferns and potted plants. The entertainment was furnished by the Imperial male quartet of Worcester, with Milton C. Snyder as bass soloist, and Miss Roseth Knapp of Boston as reader. Miss Knapp has been heard by a portion of the audience once before and these were glad of a second opportunity; the others hope for another in the near future. The quartet had never been heard here previously, but there was unanimous desire for their return at an early date. After the conclusion of the program refreshments were served and a social hour was enjoyed. There was a large number present. The committee in charge, to whom the success of the evening is due, was Mrs. Katherine B. Holbrook, Mrs. Blanche C. Brainerd, Mrs. Myrtice Loring, Mrs. Rebecca R. Flynt, Mrs. Harriet R. Tabor and Mrs. Maryett G. Stewart.

Major Morgan Vet. Firemen.

Old Organization Disbanded, New One Formed; Officers Elected.

At a special meeting of the Major Morgan Veteran Firemen's association Monday evening it was unanimously voted to disband the old organization and to start a new one beginning March 1. These officers were elected: President, H. T. Huntington; first vice president, P. M. Shearer; second vice president, Fred Thompson; clerk and secretary, D. E. Marey; treasurer, E. J. Duncan; foreman, M. J. Farely; steward, George Mayer; directors, Peter E. Bard, Daniel J. Connors, James Summers, Frank J. Roche, N. J. Comfort; finance committee, Louis E. Chandler, Charles E. Fish, M. O'Grady; delegates to Connecticut Valley League of Veteran Firemen, John F. O'Neil, William S. French.

Still Hope to Keep Pastor.

Baptist People Ask New Jersey to Release Mr. Williams.

The people of the Baptist church have not given up hope of being able to keep their pastor, Rev. Charles W. Williams, who recently resigned to accept a call to New Jersey. After Mr. Williams' declaration to reconsider his resignation pressure was brought to bear until he finally agreed to remain in Palmer if the New Jersey church would release him from his promise to go there. At the church meeting last Sunday evening a committee was appointed to communicate with the New Jersey church, and a letter was drawn up, signed and mailed at once. A meeting of that church is to be held this evening, when action will be taken on the request of the Palmer church.

Paper Bag Cookery.

Much is being written and published nowadays of cooking in paper bags, and the experiment has been tried by numerous of the housekeepers of the town. The Journal prints to-day the first of a series of articles on the new science—if that is what it may be called—written by M. Nicholas Soyer, the perfecter of the system. They will make interesting reading, if nothing more. To-day's article will be found on page 3.

Town Books to Close Next Thursday.

The books of the town will be closed on Thursday of next week, the date fixed by vote of the town. The several boards of town officers will draw their last orders on that date, and bills remaining unpaid after that time will have to wait until next April, after the appropriation meeting.

Associate Justice Named.

Monson Man for District Court of Eastern Hampden Position.

Gov. Foss on Wednesday sent to the council the name of John P. Herlihy of Monson as associate justice of the district court of Eastern Hampden. Since the recent death of H. A. McFarland of Wales there has been but one associate justice, David F. Dillon of Palmer, and friends of Mr. Herlihy soon began to interest themselves in his behalf. His confirmation will follow as a matter of course. Mr. Herlihy has been a long-time resident of Monson, has served the town in numerous official capacities, and has many friends who believe him eminently fitted for the position.

Death of Mrs. F. D. Thompson.

Mrs. Jessie G., 55, wife of F. D. Thompson, died suddenly at her home on Chestnut street yesterday morning at 9.45 as the result of a paralytic shock. Mrs. Thompson suffered a similar shock nearly three years ago and had never fully recovered. She was born in Malden, the daughter of Almon A. and Mary D. Gott. She was married to Mr. Thompson in North Wilbraham 27 years ago and had lived in Palmer nearly 16 years. She leaves besides her husband, seven children, William A., Sara M., Harry W., Edith L., Olive F., Fred D. Jr., and Fayette, all of Palmer. The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 from the house. The body will be placed in the tomb in Oak Knoll cemetery.

Was Painfully Injured.

Myron Trowbridge of West Springfield, engineer on the express going east about 8.23 Wednesday morning, was painfully injured just west of Palmer and was forced to leave the train on its arrival. While ascending the grade at "Butler's Hill" east of North Wilbraham, in attempting to throw the lever Mr. Trowbridge badly lacerated the back of his right hand. He was attended by Dr. J. P. Schneider upon reaching here and a local engineer ran the train to Boston.

Change of Meeting Date.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a meeting at the home of Mrs. D. L. Bodfish on Central street next Wednesday afternoon, instead of Tuesday, the regular meeting day. This will be a mothers' meeting. Plans are being made for a union temperance service to be held in the Congregational church February 18th. The meeting will be in commemoration of Frances Willard's heavenly birthday. Miss Mabel R. Makepeace will speak.

The Baptist church and parsonage is being painted by G. A. Authier & Son. J. T. O'Connor has taken a position in the barber shop of his father, J. P. O'Connor, on Main street.

The meeting of the Woman's Tuesday club next week will be with Mrs. C. K. Gamwell on Foster street.

The Entre Nous whist club met last evening with Mrs. A. W. Holbrook at her home on North Main street.

The young people of the town have been enjoying the coasting on Pond street this week, it being unusually good.

Mrs. Helen Irwin of Ardmore, Pa., is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Buck of North Main street.

The 14-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Ditto is seriously ill at his home at Shearer's Corner from the effects of diphtheria.

Rev. Henry Bowden of the International college, Springfield, spoke in the Congregational church Sunday morning and evening.

The Woman's Relief Corps will hold their annual chicken-pie supper in Memorial Hall on the evening of the 22d. An entertainment will follow, with dancing from 9 to 12.

The pupils of the high school are selling tickets for the play, "Good as Gold," to be given in the opera house next Friday evening, and are meeting with excellent success.

The sophomore class of the high school enjoyed a sleighride to East Wilbraham Saturday afternoon. They were entertained at the home of Miss Muriel Green, who is a member of the class.

W. E. Leighton gave an illustrated lecture in the opera house last evening on "Explosives and the method of handling them as practiced by the railroads." It proved interesting to all who attended.

A large number of acceptances have been received to the invitations for the masquerade ball in the opera house this evening, and the attendance promises to be large. The music will be by Getchell's orchestra of Springfield.

Albert R. Jenks of Three Rivers will give a talk in Masonic Hall this evening under the auspices of Palmer Grange, on his recent western trip, where he went to investigate the fruit industry of that section. A small admission fee will be charged.

The Sego restaurant has been sold by D. E. O'Connor & Co. to John F. O'Neil, who is renovating the interior of the same. Mr. O'Neil conducted a restaurant in the Caryl block several years ago, and has a thorough understanding of the catering business.

It has been necessary to change the place of meeting for the Woman's Club next Friday afternoon. The meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Brewer on Pleasant street. The subject will be "Some of the domestic problems of our foremothers" and the speaker of the afternoon will be Mrs. Francis Hornbrook of Newton.

Many Palmer Grangers—and others in this vicinity—are planning to attend the winter field day of the State Grange, which will be held in Memorial Hall in Springfield next Tuesday. The speaker will be M. P. Hull, Master of the State Grange of Michigan and Lecturer of the National Grange. Attendants are reminded that dinner will be on the basket picnic plan, and every one is urged to carry food; coffee will be served by the Springfield Grange.

A Shakespeare reading was an enjoyable event, which was furnished by the members of the Palmer Historical society Tuesday night. "Henry the VIII" was the play selected, portions of which were arranged and parts allotted by the Misses Linton and Robinson. The play is a very lengthy one, so as a matter of course, only the most effective and interesting parts could be made available, but this task was admirably done. The reading was well and effectively rendered by all who had a part. There was a good attendance notwithstanding the numerous other attractions.

Don't Let Anything Get Away

Practically every farm in this country would show a nice profit if the above expressed idea could be and was carried out with all its possibilities. Good fences and lots of them go a long way toward solving the question of bigger profits. Put up the fences and let the hogs and other animals go after the waste places, pick up the lost grain, eat and grow fat on that which otherwise would not bring a penny. Two five-acre hog pastures alternated will furnish much more grass and make many more pounds of pork than one ten-acre pasture. Good fences add to the value of your farm,

He Was Hateful

"Don't talk to me, Ernie, I tell you!" said Miss Zimmerman, heatedly, after she had devoted fifteen minutes to telling him her exact opinion of him.

"But I'm not talking to you," objected Ernie. "I haven't had a chance! It's been so long since I heard the sound of my own voice that I don't know now whether it's myself talking! Is it?"

"It doesn't make any difference," retorted Miss Zimmerman with infinite scorn. "When a person makes as much noise as you do and says as little it isn't necessary to bother wondering who's talking, because nobody listens, anyhow!"

"Wow!" said Ernie.

"How do you soak 'em! Straight from the shoulder! I almost begin to think that you're mad at me!"

Miss Zimmerman nearly choked. "Mad!" she repeated. "Have you just got it through your head, Ernie Casey, that I'm not making love to you? You didn't think, did you, that I was calling you pet names the last half hour? If that's your idea of a lady's way of expressing undying affection, you're behind the times! I'd have you know that I am mad, good and plenty! And what's more, I'm mad for keeps!"

"Well," said Ernie, "I am surprised. The worst is what you say about there being no hope of your ever getting over it."

"Never!" cried Miss Zimmerman.

"I know I have an easy going disposition and people think I'm meek, but when I get stepped on I know it and I have spirit enough to resent it and stand up for myself! And you needn't sit grinning there, Ernie Casey. It's serious!"

"Now, Evangeline!" began Ernie, cooling like a dove. "You pain me by—"

"Oh, piffle!" interrupted Miss Zimmerman. "Pain your grandmother! As though you cared! As though it made the slightest bit of difference to you if every girl on earth got mad at you! You're just a jiving block, Ernie Casey, and I'm glad I discovered it in time! Why haven't you got any more feeling in your heart—as for that, you haven't got a heart! It's some kind of a machine that keeps things running. Something like an alarm clock. And how much more convenient! It never disturbs you when you do hateful things to other people! I suppose that's why you can't understand that the rest of us are really human and can be hurt! It's really your misfortune!"

"I'm glad," remarked Ernie with becoming gratitude, "that you are sorry for me, Evangeline! Pity, you know—"

"Sorry for you!" cried Miss Zimmerman, agitatedly. "I'm not wasting any sorrow on you! There's people that better deserve it! I just despise you! I didn't know it was possible for me to be so downright furious at a man as I am at you! —"

"Yes," said Ernie, as though convinced at last against his will. "I can see that you are actually annoyed. I didn't believe it at first, but—"

"Annoyed!" almost shrieked Miss Zimmerman. "Land o' goodness! Is this your idea of 'annoyed'? Why, if I got any madder I'd explode! You needn't try to be funny, Ernie Casey!"

"I feel far from funny," declared Ernie. "I'm all of a tremble, I'm so nervous! I'm not used to being jumped at and eaten alive! Kind treatment is what I've been brought up on and I haven't a bit of doubt that I'll have a nervous chill when I get home!"

"You—you're a brute!" choked Miss Zimmerman. "You don't care! You just enjoy it!"

"Excuse me," protested Ernie firmly. "You mean I just endure it!"

"Well, I wish you'd go home!" snapped Miss Zimmerman, feeling for her handkerchief with her chin very high in the air. "Good-bye, Ernie Casey!"

Ernie, rising, walked over and looked down at her sternly. "See here, Evangeline," he demanded, "just what are you so mad about, anyhow?"

For an instant Miss Zimmerman glared back at him. Then a little bewilderment drifted into her eyes. She clutched the table back of her and swallowed.

"I—I can't seem to remember," she said vaguely. "We've said so much since that—I guess I'm all mixed up! But, anyhow, I had a perfect right to get lots madder than I did and I'll do it again if you do what you did to make me mad, whatever it was—and look out, Ernie Casey—you're knocking all my hair down—no-o-o, I won't k-k-kiss and make up—I won't—"

"Well, I did, anyhow!" said Ernie, calmly, "and 'hat's what really counts."

Brought Strangers.
Visitor—Last time I was here your board of trade was booming the town. Didn't they keep it up?

Uncle Eben—Nope! We called them off pretty quick. First thing we knew there was a lot of people coming into town that we didn't know at all!—ruck.

COSTA RICAN IS DIGNIFIED

He Loves Pomp and Ceremony and His Formal Banquets Are Distressingly Solemn.

"The Costa Rican loves pomp and ceremony. He plays with diplomacy, and from force of habit strikes a threatening attitude toward the head of the government, whoever he may be, but never carries it so far as to provoke a revolution, as is done in the sister republics.

"He is a perfect picture of the posing hero in the comic opera, never yet having been conquered by his enemy, but always on guard," writes a woman correspondent of Health Culture. "The old Spanish hidalgos who warred with the Central American states did not consider the country around San Jose (reached then by a bridge path over the mountains) worth fighting for.

"So they left the natives in possession and the consequence is that the peon, or barefooted native, driving his yoke or diminutive oxen, is nobody's slave. He owns his mule and cart, his little patch of land and farmhouse. The tax gatherer has no place there, therefore when you meet him reincarnated as the dignified merchant he is a most self-respecting citizen.

"A dinner of fifty covers, with three kinds of wine, was tendered a foreign diplomat during our stay at the Hotel Imperial. When they were all seated and the dinner well on we gained a coin of advantage where we were not seen, and I aver that a woman's suffrage luncheon in New York city was a hilarious affair in comparison to it. Yet nearly every man present had been educated in Europe.

"At Christmas time, during the ten days of fete, they enter heartily into the spirit of the carnival, and then fold themselves away for the rest of the year."

PARIS LIKES WHITE CANARY
New Songbird Is Most Popular in the Gay Capital and Fetches High Price.

The Parisian has an amiable little weakness for the canary. Every street echoes to the song of this noisy bird, and in the holiday time, when families are away, there are congeries whose more or less restricted quarters are positively cumbered with cages of canaries left in their charge by absent tenants.

But in or out of the season the bird market is held every Sunday in the year in the City Island and a lively trade in canaries is always done. The best songsters in the market come from an old house close by the market, where lives an ornithologist who spends his life in teaching canaries to sing, and he has now, after some years of effort, produced a pure white canary with a song as powerful and sweet as any yellow or green bird ever sold.

The supply of the white canary being at present strictly limited, those that were sold last Sunday fetched comparatively high prices; but they had all the honors of the day, and for the few hours that they adorned the stall they were the center of an admiring and wondering crowd. There are plenty of canaries that are nearly white, but this bird is as white as a dove, without any speck of yellow on his plumage.

The Parisian has his own special way of transporting his canaries to the cage that awaits them at his home. The bird is placed in a small paper bag and pinned to the lapel of his coat.

CONFIDENCE.

We Back Up Our Statements With Our Personal Reputation and Money.
We are so positive that we can relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine free of all cost if we fail.

We think that it is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Cathartics may do much harm. They may cause a reaction, irritate and weaken the bowels, and make constipation more chronic.

Constipation is often accompanied and may be caused by weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or colon. To expect a cure you must therefore tone up and strengthen those parts and restore them to healthier activity.

The discovery of the active principle of our remedy involved the labor of skilful research chemists. This remedy produces results such as are expected from the best of the best-known intestinal tonics, and it is particularly prompt in its results.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our guarantee. They are exceedingly pleasant to take and are ideal for children. They apparently act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels, having, it would seem, a neutral action on other organs or glands. They do not purge or cause inconvenience. If they do not positively cure chronic or habitual constipation and thus relieve the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, your money will be refunded.

Try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. Three sizes of packages, 10c., 25c., and 50c. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store, Lynde & Gould, 385 Main St., Palmer.

MAKING RAIN WITH ROCKETS

Experiments Tried With Considerable Success on a Coffee Plantation in Southern India.

Experiments made to ascertain whether the discharge of explosives during cloudy weather produces rain-fall are described in a letter from James Stanes.

"Some years ago," he says, "an experiment was tried in the Cuddapah district of southern India with considerable success. I am part owner of an estate in the Seramully hills, which is situated in a particularly dry zone. For several seasons poor coffee crops withered away from lack of rain during July and August.

"When I was visiting the estate in July, 1905, I noticed that heavy clouds gathered every afternoon and I thought that if we had been in a position to fire explosive rockets from the highest peak of the hills, about 4,500 feet, a shower of rain might have been produced.

"I therefore arranged to have a supply of rockets kept on the estate and fired off every afternoon at the rate of one rocket every five minutes, but only when the condition of the atmosphere was such that heavy rain threatened on all sides.

"Whether rain has fallen in response to these explosives or not the fact remains that ever since we first tried the experiment we have been fortunate enough to catch sufficient moisture to enable the crops to survive the drought."

Firing into the clouds with the object of causing rain was practiced for several years in southern Germany, Switzerland and France, and seems to have been abandoned some time ago. The idea was to protect the vineyards and other cultivations from damage by hailstones, it being thought that by the discharge of large guns rain would fall and that the danger from hailstones would be averted.—London Daily Mail.

Cossack and Saint.

A Paris contemporary by way of illustration as to how some persons discharge their religious obligations relates a story of a Cossack who was overtaken by a terrible storm of thunder and lightning. In his terror he prayed to the saint to save him and promised if only he once more reached his home he would sell his horse and the proceeds should be spent in candies in honor of the Saint. The saint, pleased with so generous an offer, stayed the storm and the Cossack reached home in safety.

This is how he discharged his vow. The next day he went to the market with a cock and a horse. His method of sale was this: He would only sell the two together, the horse at 30 kopecks (about 15 pence) and the cock at 200 rubles (about £20). After a time the Cossack found a purchaser on these terms and faithful to his vow the Cossack devoted 15 pence to the purchase of candies for the altar of his patron saint.

Squinting.

I heard recently of a mother who smacked her small boy because he squinted. She remarked that if that would not cure the child she did not know what would.

She evidently had no idea that squinting is a nervous affection (unless it comes from a deformity of the eye, which generally can be cured by operation), and that sometimes it is a symptom of serious brain disorder.

Most of the "ugly tricks" that children develop in childhood are simply the result of "nerves" and to attempt to cure them by nagging, scolding or smacking is about the worst possible way to set about it.

It is very important that they should be remedied, however, because sometimes these tricks have lasting impressions that endure even into adult life, and spoil the appearance or the manners—or perhaps both—and also may considerably injure the health.—Exchange.

THESE SIX LETTERS

From New England Women

Prove that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Does Restore the Health of Ailing Women.

Boston, Mass.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from hemorrhages (sometimes lasting for weeks), and could get nothing to check them. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound (tablet form) on Tuesday, and the following Saturday morning the hemorrhages stopped. I have taken them regularly ever since and am steadily gaining."

"I certainly think that every one who is troubled as I was should give your Compound Tablets a faithful trial, and they will find relief."—Mrs. GEORGE JUBY, 802 Fifth Street, South Boston, Mass.

Letter from Mrs. Julia King, Phoenix, R.I.

Phoenix, R.I.—"I worked steady in the mill from the time I was 12 years old until I had been married a year, and I think that caused my bad feelings. I had soreness in my side near my left hip that went around to my back, and sometimes I would have to lie in bed for two or three days. I was not able to do my housework."

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me wonderfully in every way. You may use my letter for the good of others. I am only too glad to do anything within my power to recommend your medicine."—Mrs. JULIA KING, Box 282, Phoenix, R.I.

Letter from Mrs. Etta Donovan, Willimantic, Conn.

Willimantic, Conn.—"For five years I suffered untold agony from female troubles causing backache, irregularities, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It was impossible for me to walk up stairs without stopping on the way. I was all run down in every way."

"I tried three doctors and each told me something different. I received no benefit from any of them but seemed to suffer more. The last doctor said it was no use for me to take anything as nothing would restore me to health again. So I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to see what it would do, and by taking seven bottles of the Compound and other treatment you advised, I am restored to my natural health."—Mrs. ETNA DONOVAN, 763 Main Street, Willimantic, Conn.

Letter from Mrs. Winfield Dana, Augusta, Me.

Germs Spread in Skin

Eczema, Psoriasis and other skin troubles are caused by myriads of germs at work in the skin. Unless these germs are promptly destroyed they rapidly multiply, gnawing their way deep into the sensitive tissue.

This is what causes that awful itch, and what seemed a mere rash may grow worse and develop into a loathsome and torturing skin disease with its years of misery. Don't take any chances! Destroy the germs at the beginning of the trouble with the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema. A 25c bottle will prove this to you. We have had experience with many remedies for skin trouble but have never seen such remarkable cures as those from D. D. D. Prescription. Instant relief from the very first application. We are so confident that D. D. D. will reach your case that it will cost you nothing if the very first full size bottle fails to make good every claim. If you have skin trouble of any kind, we certainly advise you to drop in and investigate the merits of D. D. D. anyway. We know that D. D. D. will help you.

HOUSE DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Occupants Have Narrow Escape. Loss Estimated at $2000.

The house of Edward J. Locke on the Stafford road in South Monson was burned to the ground and its contents were entirely destroyed at about 12.30 o'clock yesterday morning. The cause of the fire is not known, but it is believed that the woodwork around the chimney on the second floor caught from the chimney. Mr. and Mrs. Locke were asleep on the first floor and were awakened about 12.30 o'clock by the crackling of the flames, which had already started to break through the ceiling of their bedroom. Mr. Locke ran into the hall to go to the second floor, where he had $400 in cash, but upon opening the door he found that the upper portion of the house was a mass of flames. Mr. and Mrs. Locke ran to the street and the men of the near by houses were aroused and with no little difficulty the barn was saved. Word was telephoned to Fire Chief Needham, but as it was too late the alarm was not pulled in. The house and contents were entirely destroyed. The house was insured for $800 and the furniture for $200. The total loss is estimated at $2000.

Close and Exciting Contest.

One of the cleanest played and most exciting basketball games ever witnessed in Monson was played in Holmes' gymnasium Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when the Monson Academy team won from the Chicopee high school quintet by the close score of 23 to 19. There has been some newspaper talk during the past week of rough and dirty playing of the Chicopee players in a game with another school, but a cleaner game was never played on the local surface, although they played to win until the final whistle. They were good losers and showed the best of sportsmanlike conduct throughout the game. Smith played the best for Monson, and was the high scorer with four double counters. Capt. Flynt and Fagan were there with two good baskets each. Fritz Orfinger also played well for the visitors. Savarin and Mossberry were the stars.

He is survived by a widow, two sons and one daughter at home, and one son, Stanley, of Indian Orchard. The funeral was held from St. Patrick's church Thursday morning at 9.30. Rev. Thomas O'Keefe officiating; burial was in the Pearl street cemetery.

At present the last car out of Palmer on week days leaves at 10.15, and the petition asks for a car an hour later. As this line is considered a good paying one for the company it is hoped that they will see fit to act favorably on the petition. There were over 200 signatures on the paper.

The 50,000 special offer appears on page 8. This is one of the most liberal offers of the Contest, and those who are wise enough to take advantage of it have every reason to rejoice later on, as you receive a great many more votes on a subscription now than you will later on when there will be no special inducements. What will the 50,000 special vote mean to you? You will be surprised to see what little effort it will require to capture a good reserve of votes during this offer, just make up your mind that you are going to win and when once your friends see that you are enthused, it will encourage them to turn in and help you. Start to-day with a determination that you are going to win and you will win.

Well, candidates, have you secured the manager for your campaign? If so, you are to be congratulated. If not, be sure and do it to-day. The tip given was a real "live one," as you probably will realize later if you neglect to be guided by it.

The Contest manager has been planning and working to make the road to success as smooth as possible for you and that is the best thing yet figured out—the value—which amounts almost to an absolute necessity—of having some friend who will assist you in your campaign.

There are so many persons he will come in contact with daily whom it might prove difficult for you to see. He can mention to his men friends that he is interested in seeing you win and just as sure as shot they are going to say, "Sure, Bill," or Harry, or John, as his name happens to be, "we will help you."

"Now, consider again; take a speculative glance at the valued prizes the Palmer Journal are offering; $250 in cash, four genuine diamond rings, four gold watches. Remember that no one's chances for winning are a whit better than yours. The Contest manager is primed with answers to all questions.

Ask all the questions you like; phone or write, if you can't call. Fire away. Do not be bashful or timid. Ask what you want to know. View the situation as it exists to-day, then, after doing so, under no circumstances should you neglect enrolling your name, for you can never tell with how much success you will meet until you have tried.

You should see those who are in and realize the difference between bright hustlers with personality, and those who in a weary tone tell you "they will win if they have luck." Luck will never win. Ambition first, then energetic efforts—then success.

As the season advances, one's thoughts naturally turn to a vacation—a trip somewhere away from the daily routine and the humdrum existence, to surroundings different from the too familiar scenes around home. There is a craving for a sight of new faces, for the ever changing panorama that falls to the lot of the traveler, this where the $250 comes in, you can take good long vacation, or better yet, for the boy or girl who is desirous of securing an education this is opportunity time for them.

The candidates who are leading are the ones who have organized a regular force to assist in their campaign, both for the collecting of single ballots, and the securing of subscriptions. That is the only way to do. Organize your friends into regular channels of vote getters, work systematically, and you cannot help but realize pleasing returns.

Some contestants and their friends are under the impression that in order to have the votes on coupons that are clipped from the Palmer Journal count, they must be accompanied by subscriptions. This is not the case. Coupons brought or sent in, whether they are accompanied by subscriptions or not, will count. Secure all the coupons you can, and send them in for yourself or your favorite.

STATE INSPECTORS' CALL.

Looking After Local Dealers' Weights and Measures.

BUT ONLY PART OF THEM VISITED.

Tried Hard, But Failed to Find Anything Out of the Way in Method of Selling.

A delegation of state inspectors of weights and measures visited Palmer last Friday afternoon looking for short measures, under-weight package goods, etc. They tested in various ways but failed to find anything radically wrong in this village; according to their statements they were more successful elsewhere.

About the middle of the afternoon a young woman drifted into a local store and asked for a bottle of oysters. When the clerk produced it she asked if it was a "pint of oysters," but was told it was a "bottle of oysters," and more than that the clerk refused to state. The law requires, where such articles are sold by the pint or quart, that the receptacle shall contain the full measure; if sold by the "bottle" and not by the measured quantity there is no penalty for short measure. She also asked for a "pound of butter," and on receiving a package promptly removed the wrapper and weighed it; it happened to be a package which had been in stock about 10 days and had shrunk one ounce in weight, which the inspector considered was only reasonable. At another place a "pound of butter" was called for and paid for, then weighed, proving to be full weight; the inspector then returned it to the clerk and demanded his money back.

Decidedly Wintry Weather.

Mercury at Zero or Below Every Morning For a Full Week.

Seldom does this section of the country witness a more severe protracted spell of cold weather than has been in order during the past week. Beginning last Saturday, the mercury has stood at zero or below every morning,—until to-day, when it stood at 25 above,—the peculiarity being the uniformity of the temperature each morning since Sunday, there being a variance of not more than five degrees.

Saturday morning was "the limit" for discomfort. The mercury registered 10 below in the morning, although they were reports in places of a much lower figure. Accompanying was a very sharp wind which made the day the most severe of the winter in which to be out. So penetrating was the wind, filled as it was with frost, that many persons were numbed and compelled to seek shelter after being out only a short time. The mercury rose but little during the day, not getting much above the zero mark. Sunday was much the same kind of a day, minus the wind.

WARE.

Harrington—Quigley.

A pretty wedding took place in All Saints' church Wednesday morning, when Julia Gertrude Harrington was united in marriage to James Joseph Quigley of Lee. The bridesmaid was Miss Elizabeth Harrington, sister of the bride, and the best man was John Cassidy of Lee. The ushers were James T. Owens of Lee and Dr. James Harrington of Ware. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Quigley left at noon for a trip to New York and Philadelphia. The bride was graduated from the Ware high school in 1900. Some years later she graduated from Smith college. She was for some time connected with the faculty at Smith as an instructor. She later took courses leading to a master's degree at Columbia and became a teacher in the high school at Lee. Mr. Quigley is the proprietor of a general store at Lee and was a few years ago well known as an athlete. He was a member of the championship basketball team at Holy Cross college in 1904. After leaving Holy Cross, he entered the dental department of the university of Pennsylvania, from which he graduated in 1909. His father, having died while he was at the dental school, he has not practiced his profession, but has conducted the business at Lee established by his father. While at Pennsylvania he was a member of the track team.

A very successful mothers' meeting, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., was held at the home of Mrs. D. L. Bodfish on Central street Wednesday, there being an attendance of 24.

Death of Dr. Benjamin Gill.

Dr. Benjamin Gill, 69, of Bellefonte, Pa., formerly of the faculty of Wesleyan Academy in Wilbraham, died in a Baltimore hospital the first of the week. Death was due to cancer. Dr. Gill was professor of Greek and Latin and chaplain of the Pennsylvania State College. He was a native of Yorkshire, Eng., where he was born July 11, 1843. He came to America at an early age and studied at Wesleyan Academy, where he was graduated in 1870. He returned to Wilbraham as an instructor at the Academy, first teaching English and later Greek. He continued as a member of the Academy faculty until 1892. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon in the Wilbraham Memorial church.

OLD-TIME HOUSE SOLD.

Home of Some of Early Settlers Of the Town.

CHILD HOUSE ON SOUTH MAIN STREET

Present Commodious Structure Built in 1853. Future Owner is Fred Bressette.

The sale this week of the Child house on South Main street, which in earlier times was one of the half dozen conspicuously large houses of the town, has prompted a little search into history, with the following results:

The homestead is located on a part of the farm owned very early by Dea. Thomas King, son of John King, the first settler in Palmer. The farm extended from the river to the summit of what is now known as Dewey Hill, and from Dublin street on the south to Church street on the north. Mr. King built here about 1760 a commodious two-story house with a large ell in the rear, what would have been called a fine residence in those days. He was the hero of the often recounted tale of the bear killing in the branches of the old pine still standing in the yard of the Ridges' Food Factory. Thomas King, after serving well his day and generation, died in 1801 and the farm descended to his son, Capt. David King, who was an officer in the Revolutionary war. Here was born August 27, 1800, Thomas Butler King, son of David, who attained a national reputation. Mr. King after studying law in Philadelphia, at the age of 23 went to Georgia, where he married the only daughter of a wealthy planter, Maj. William Page. He entered into political life and was elected to the Georgia state senate, and at the age of 36 was elected to the national house of representatives, to which he was returned six times in succession. He was the chairman of the naval committee while in congress and worked actively for the promotion of its varied interests. He was also an active factor in developing the newly acquired territory of California. His marriage brought to him a large estate, which he managed with success. He died in Waynesboro, Ga., May 10, 1864. After the death of his father, Capt. David in 1815, his son David Jr. succeeded to the King homestead, and in 1836 he deeded the farm and homestead to Capt. A. V. Dewey, who had come to Palmer from Becket, Lucy and Mary King, aunts of David King Jr., held a life lease in the homestead during their natural lives. They both died in 1840 at advanced ages.

In 1839 Capt. Dewey removed the two-story part of the residence to the present site of the Weeks House and converted it into a hotel called the Western Railroad House. This house, with changes and additions, became at last the Weeks House, which was burned Aug. 3, 1891. The large ell of the original King house which was probably built before the two-story part was erected, was moved to Dublin street and was occupied for many years by the Finnerty family till burned some years ago.

The present Child house was built by William C. Child in 1853. He had married Emily, a daughter of Capt. Dewey. He died in 1861, when the place became the residence of James K. Child, who had married Laura E., daughter of Capt. Dewey.

Mrs. Laura Child, who survived her husband for some years, died June 14, 1896, when the house was occupied by her brother, Charles E. Dewey, till his death in 1899, Aug. 19. After the homestead had remained in the King and Dewey families for about one hundred and fifty years it passed into other hands, Mr. Sprague buying it I think of the Child or Dewey estate.

Sleigh Overturned—Milk Spilled.

While crossing the car tracks at the underpass in North Wilbraham Monday morning in front of the 7.33 o'clock car, a milkman's sleigh, driven by Albert Rivers, was overturned and several gallons of milk lost. Mr. Rivers was watching the car and failed to notice the position of the sleigh, which caught in the car track and threw the driver and about 10 cans of milk to the ground. Several cans were broken open by the fall.

New Forest Lake Theatre.

Ground Staked Out For the New Structure This Week.

The plans for the new theatre at Forest Lake have been prepared, and the ground for the building has been staked out this week. [The new theatre will differ materially from the former, in that it will be all one building, instead of a small structure containing the stage and dressing rooms, with a covered amphitheatre separate. The main part or audience section of the new structure will be 60 feet wide by 80 feet long, and will seat over 800 people; it will be covered, but the sides will be open, permitting free circulation of air on hot days and evenings. The roof will be of the pitch variety instead of flat. At one end will be an addition 40 by 40 feet; this will contain a stage about 28 feet deep by 40 wide, and the dressing rooms will be located directly in the rear of the stage. The new building will occupy much the same location as the old, except that it will be moved nearer the lake, so as to secure less slope for the floor of the audience room.]

Boston Letter.

Legislature Working Fast — Trolley Project Matters — Capital and Labor Conflicts — Biennial Elections — Presidential Preferences.

Boston, Feb. 14, 1912.

This Legislature has set out to make a business record. Innovations have been introduced to keep the business status of the work prominently before the eyes of the members. For instance, last week they put on the calendar a comparison between the condition of business then and at the corresponding date last year. This week they make comparison with last week so that every member can see just how fast they are getting along. Comparing February 5 with February 12, the figures are as follows: The first of each group of two being for February 5 and the second for February 12: Matters referred, 1886 and 1945; matters reported, 253 and 411; matters not reported, 1633 and 1534; hearings closed, 301 and 437; hearings not closed, 1332 and 1097; hearings assigned, 895 and 903; hearings not assigned, 437 and 194. Tuesday there were 110 different titles of petitions and bills referred to committees for hearing on that day, which beat the record by considerable in the entire history of the Legislature. The committee on the judiciary headed the entire list, with a full page of matters put down for hearing at 10:30, 3 o'clock and 7:30. They were all kindred matters relating to relations between capital and labor, such as peaceful persuasion, compensation of employees for injuries, picketing, boycotting, punishment for violation of injunctions, restraining orders, punishment of inciting to sympathetic strikes, and the like. There are many of these matters and the labor forces are pushing the fight all along the line, while the employers, warned by the 54-hour law of last year and the Lawrence strike, are said to be better organized and more militant than usual.

If a stranger, not familiar with the intensity of public activity in Massachusetts, which is credited with leading the country in that respect, were to drop into the committee hearings, he would think that the state had just waked up and was about to push forward with new vigor. It seems to be true of the state as Longfellow pictured it in the launching of the ship:

"She starts, she moves, she seems to feel
A thrill of life along her keel."

Western Massachusetts is alive as never before in the history of the state. Even while the lawyers were putting in their pleas for the proposed consolidation of the Worcester, Springfield and Berkshire street railway companies, preparatory to turning them over to the New Haven railroad, the adjoining committee room of the committee on roads and bridges was packed to the doors by citizens of the Worcester county and the four counties beyond, all there to urge the extension of the system of state highways so as to open up their inaccessible towns. Trolley lines and macadam roads are now wanted in as much profusion as the state can be induced to build. It is admitted that the business in sight will not pay, but there is a magnificent faith in the future. There is a glowing painting of the wondrous scenery of the hill towns. Switzerland in America is what Massachusetts is, according to these men who have lived there and ought to know, and the possibilities in way of business with summer tourists and automobile travelers are immense. On the other end of the state, there is a clamor for money for harbors, in Fall River and New Bedford and elsewhere, as well as in Boston, and new transportation projects are constantly cropping out. We are in a rush of new development, as if we had just started and had not been at it for over 100 years.

Without question there is a sharper struggle this year than usual between labor and capital. This does not appear on the surface, but one of the labor legislative leaders says that he feels it this year as he has never felt it before. The labor men carried the 54-hour law last year and the Lawrence strike is one of the consequences. The employers did not realize the full force of the bill, any more than the employees in Lawrence did. They did not understand how strong the employees were. This year they are more on their guard, so this labor man finds them. They are playing a more cautious game, are trying to find weak spots in the organizations and plans of the labor men and are more alive to their own needs. On the other hand, the labor men are using their brains to the best advantage in getting public sympathy and in playing the game of strategies as well as their employers. The situation has come down more to the tug of war with both sides straining hard on the rope, and yet very little disturbance to record. The judiciary committee has its room full when these labor cases are heard.

One of the incidents of to-day has been the hearing in regard to women core-workers. This is the matter on which the district police, after investigation last fall, under direction from Chief Whitney, brought in a clean bill of health for all of the establishments which were charged with offending the laws of common humanity in their treatment of women workers. It will be remembered that Gov. Foss's establishment was one of those brought under the ban. At to-day's hearing the labor leaders took strong ground against permitting any women to work under such unnatural and debasing conditions. But, on the other hand, the opponents of such legislation had some of the women there and produced other testimony to prove that the charges of heavy work for women were totally without foundation, that the women did not have to work beyond their strength, that they were not improperly clothed while at work, and, in general a flat denial of the charges of the petitioners for the legislation. It was shown that conditions in core-making have changed materially from the former days when it was all heavy work and men were the only persons capable of meeting the requirements for muscular strength.

One of the hearings to-day was upon biennial state elections. It was not much of the former sort when strong forces were arrayed against each other. The hearing was more or less mixed up with other propositions of initiative and recall, and there were different kinds of biennials proposed. The labor men were out in force against the change, and Henry Sterling, one of their leaders, who has had the honor of being on some state commissions relating to labor, was one of the chief opponents of biennials. Senator Stowe of Hampden spoke for his straight resolve for a change, and Russell A. Wood, late Republican candidate for nomination as secretary of state and signer of the statement issued Sunday last in behalf of the militant Roosevelt Progressives in favor of Roosevelt as candidate for president, spoke for his amendment. Last year the labor men were caught napping when the matter came up first, but they saved themselves later. This year they are wide awake from the first.

There is not much presidential talk yet. As far as the regular Republican organization is concerned, there is no question that it is strongly for President Taft. The admiration for Roosevelt does not come at all from the cool heads which are at the front in the state organization, but from the more emotional men who make followers, rather than leaders, however much they may lead in this movement. There is more or less connection between the militant and the Progressive Republicans, for while the former are pronounced Roosevelt men, and the latter profess not to be decided yet regarding a candidate, Secretary H. Oveson of the progressives writes to William N. Osgood of the militants, who is trying to arrange for a Roosevelt meeting in Lowell, that he is with him in that effort, and Matthew Hale, the foremost man of the progressives, is a pronounced Roosevelt supporter. A militant tells me to-day that he gets it from a man who heard Roosevelt say it that he had said once that he should not again take the nomination to the presidency, but that he should never again put himself in that position, thus practically withdrawing that statement that he would not be a candidate and declaring that he will be one. This man, who is strong for Roosevelt, says that there is not the slightest doubt that Roosevelt is a candidate and that he has been working for the nomination.

The progressives have their regular committee on legislative affairs and are watching their matters closely. No test vote has yet occurred to reveal their voting strength in either branch.

Cooper's Piano.

W. N. Potter of Cooperstown, N. Y., has in his possession a piano which he values very highly and is fond of showing to his visitors. It was owned by James Fenimore Cooper.

C. D. Pease of Cooperstown made the piano and the great novelist bought it. Afterward he sold it to Judge Stewart, and after passing through the hands of B. F. Jacobs of Milford and his daughter, it came into those of Mr. Potter. It is of six octaves, and is in a solid mahogany frame of plain design.

Men's League Holds Ladies' Night.

The Men's League of the Congregational church observed ladies' night Tuesday evening, and a very interesting program was furnished. The special feature of the evening was an address on the Men and Religion Forward Movement, given by Rev. Dr. Frank W. Merrick, pastor of Faith church in Springfield. In opening Dr. Merrick told of his own experience in country life. He said that there were opportunities in the country life, with its freedom and advantages, which the busy city life would not afford. He showed that although the country people may naturally be slow in comprehending, in the end they adopt the new ideas and are now likely to return to them. The city churches are enriched by the younger people from the country. The country stands back of the strength of the city. Before the address an excellent musical program was furnished, consisting of a 'cello solo by Principal George F. Kenney with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Kenney, song by Charles L. Pierce of Springfield, song by Robert Sawin, 'cello solo by Mr. Kenney, song by Rev. William Jennings, song by Mr. Pierce, and a song by Erford Corbin. LEE'S IDEA OF A GENTLEMAN

Great Southerner's High Idea of a Gentleman Shown by Memorandum Found Among His Papers.

Lee hated parade, display and ceremony, hated above all things being made an object of public gaze and adulation, declares a writer in the Atlantic. His idea of high position was high responsibility, a superior was simply one who had larger duties, and the mark of a gentleman was a keen sense of the feelings and susceptibilities of others.

No one has ever expressed this attitude more delicately than he himself in a memorandum found among his papers after his death.

"The forbearing use of power does not only form a touchstone, but the manner in which an individual enjoys certain advantages over others is a test of a true gentleman."

"The power which the strong have over the weak, the magistrate over the citizen, the employer over the employed, the educated over the uneducated, the experienced over the confiding, even the clever over the silly—the forbearing or inoffensive use of all this power or authority or a total abstinence from it when the case admits it will show the gentleman in a plain light."

"The gentleman does not needlessly and unnecessarily remind an offender of a wrong he may have committed against him. He cannot only forgive, he can forget; and he strives for that nobleness of self and mildness of character which impart sufficient strength to let the past be but the past. A true man of honor feels humbled himself when he cannot help humbling others."

How to cure a cold is a question in which many are interested just now. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has won its great reputation and immense sale by its remarkable cure of colds. It can always be depended upon. For sale by all dealers.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

MY EXPERIMENTS WITH PAPER BAG COOKERY.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

When Soyer's paper bag method of cooking was first brought to my attention by friends, who, rightly or wrongly, seem to have a high opinion of my abilities as a cook, I admit that I was skeptical of its practicability. Indeed, I was more than that—I was rather firm in my belief that it could not prove out. But I was induced to put the system to a trial—and, lo and behold!—the very first trial made me an enthusiastic follower of M. Soyer. Since then I have been doing all my cooking by the Soyer method, and each succeeding day more than ever convinces me that any woman, simply by following Soyer's general directions, and using that good common sense and care which are essential to all good cooking, can master the Soyer paper bag method of cooking in a very short time, and will find it a great boon both to herself and to all the members of her household.

Following M. Soyer's general directions for paper bag cooking, I speedily learned that there are sundry commandments to be observed while pursuing his method of cooking.

The first and greatest of these is to get the right bag, which is made specially for cooking, is paraffined, odorless even when crumbly-crisp, sanitary and to be had in sizes big enough to hold a Thanksgiving turkey, or tiny enough for a single chop.

Next, nearly as important, is to grease the bag inside liberally, using butter, lard, oil, drippings or a very fat rind of bacon.

Further, proportion your bag-size to what it is destined to hold. The closer the fit of bag and contents, the better, and the more even and compact the lay of the food, the less trouble in handling.

Use a footed wire broiler, or very open grid-iron, in the oven. All paper bag cooking is done in the oven. If a gas oven, it must be lighted eight to ten minutes before putting in the food and kept at blazing heat until the bag corners scorch lightly; then slacken the heat a third or even half throughout the rest of the time of cooking.

Be sure to lay the bags in the oven with the seam uppermost, especially if water has been put inside. Seams will steam open now and then—if the opening is downward there will be a leakage and much bother. Finally, it is important to remember that all manipulation, seasoning and flavoring of food must be attended to before it is put in bags. There can be no stirring or tossing in the course of paper bag cooking. Nor must a bag be opened at any time during cooking; such action is absolutely unnecessary if directions are faithfully followed.

A PAPER BAG DINNER.

By M. Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Roast Beef, Round, Ribs, or Sirloin.—Grease well with drippings, but do not season. Put in bag, lay on a wire broiler, and cook in a moderate oven. For a three-pound joint allow forty-five minutes; for seven-pound, one hour and twenty minutes.

Lima Beans.—Take a quart of Lima beans, add two ounces of butter, four ounces of diced ham, a little sugar and salt, a good teaspoonful of flour, and a few sweet herbs to taste. Put in a paper bag with half a pint of water, seal up, and cook for an hour in a moderate oven.

Baked Potatoes.—Thoroughly wash twelve good-sized potatoes. Make a few small slits in them, but do not peel. Place in a paper bag, with one tablespoonful of water. Seal and cook thirty-five to fifty minutes, according to size.

Tomatoes.—Place six tomatoes in boiling water for twenty-five seconds. Peel, butter your paper bag, put in tomatoes with salt, pepper, a suspicion of sugar, and a small piece of butter. Put the bag on the broiler after sealing, and cook for twelve minutes in a hot oven.

Apples a la Duchesse.—Wash and dry ten large apples. Core them, put stick-cinnamon—only a bit—in the place of each core, and pour over them a tablespoonful of rum. Put in a buttered bag, and bake on the broiler thirty minutes. When quite done, dish up, remove the cinnamon, and fill the centers with jam—strawberry, raspberry, or apricot. Cover with stiffly whipped cream, sprinkle with chopped nuts, and serve, or set on ice till wanted. Use sweet apples and let them cool before adding the jam and cream.

Light the gas range eight minutes before beginning to cook, or open the draughts so the coal range will be hot. Put the roast on first, upon the lowest shelf. Put the apples upon the upper shelf, so as to leave room for the tomatoes beside them. As soon as the tomatoes are done, remove, set the bag in a plate, and stand where it will keep hot. Put the Lima beans in the vacant place—and when the apples are done, remove them and put on the potatoes. Thus, you will be able to have the cooking come out even, also to chill and season your apples before sitting down to table.

What She Thought

After the young woman in pink had "red the young man into a secluded seat under the palms on the plea that she was too tired to dance she talked herself hoarse without being able to start a flow of conversation on his part. Then he coughed.

"There—er—was something I wanted to say," he began, hesitatingly.

The young woman in pink leaned over and adjusted her slipper rosette to conceal her gratified surprise. "What was it?" she murmured as she sat up and regarded him confidently. "Somehow," he said, "I feel that you always understand me—you have a sympathetic nature."

"I am glad if you think so, Mr. Friller," the girl in pink said softly. "Oh, I do!" declared the young man, earnestly. "It makes it easier—"

"I hope, Mr. Friller—Henry," the girl in pink said, looking at him with great seriousness, "that you feel it easy to say anything to me. Why, we've been friends so long! It was four years ago last January that we were introduced!"

"Was it?" asked the young man, startled.

"Do you think I could ever forget," the girl in pink asked him, tenderly. "Oh, no, indeed."

"It's been a long time," agreed the young man. "By the way," he said suddenly, "you know Antoinette Graves, don't you?"

The girl in pink wrinkled her brow a bit. "I haven't seen much of her of late because, really, she's not in our crowd at all!"

"Oh, is that so?" asked the young man in some surprise.

"No," the girl in pink told him. "Poor Antoinette simply dropped out

"You Know Antoinette Graves, Don't You?"

of things—she is so very odd, you know. I feel sorry for a girl who fails to be popular! Of course, I can't even faintly imagine how it seems, but I should think it would be awful!"

"As bad as that?" asked the young man.

"Goodness, yes," said the girl in pink. "You never see Antoinette anywhere. She hasn't been to a dance for a year or so. And she wears such funny clothes! Of course you can't really blame a girl if she has no instinct for style and doesn't care to keep up with things! Why, last winter when every one was pawning her rings to buy enough hair to keep up with the styles I saw Antoinette going around with just her own hair on—"

"She has a lot of it," said the young man.

"But fancy!" cried the girl in pink. "No matter how much hair you have you can't do it up in style if one end of it is fastened to your head! She just didn't care! And she's never had a hobbie skirt to her name. She's gone right on wearing her last year's tailor suit as though she felt perfectly up to date in it. Don't you like to see a girl progressive?"

"Er—yes," said the young man.

"But—"

"I really don't like to say anything that sounds like running another person down," went on the girl in pink, in a pained voice. "That isn't my nature, as you know, Mr. Friller—Henry. But Antoinette always struck me as being terribly empty headed! I never could get her to settle down to a serious talk—she would act restless or laugh or move away."

"I think a really sweet natured girl would take some interest in her friends' affairs, don't you?"

"Poor Antoinette! I wonder what life can hold for unfortunate girls like her! They have nothing to look forward to! But I try not to dwell on such things. There is no use in harrowing one's self over the misfortunes of others. However, I feel things so deeply. I really suffer, Mr. Friller—Henry, if I think every one isn't as happy and contented as myself, I—"

"But you said you had something to ask me?"

"I asked it," confessed the young man, looking red and uncomfortable. "I asked what you thought of Antoinette. You see, I wanted to tell you that she and I are engaged!"

WARREN.

Narrow Escape.

Thomas Wrobel, who lives near No. 4 mill, narrowly escaped being killed Friday by being struck by the engine of passenger train No. 20, east-bound, at about 6:40 a. m. Wrobel was thrown to one side of the track and picked up by the train crew in an unconscious condition and brought to Warren depot. He soon regained consciousness and was taken to Dr. J. E. Dalton's office, where it was found that no bones were broken, but his head and shoulders were badly bruised and cut. After a short time he recovered sufficiently to return to his home.

The main line of the Warren Aqueduct Company has become frozen and the 30 or more families who are supplied with water from this source are without water. Several other smaller aqueducts are also frozen in places, so that at present over 50 families are without a fresh supply of water.

The Tuesday Club and its honorary members were entertained Tuesday afternoon at the home of Miss Esther L. Gage, who was assisted by Mrs. Charles A. Deland and Mrs. Herbert R. Burroughs. Rev. O. S. Raspe of Palmer gave an interesting talk on "Social service" and Mrs. H. W. Cutler of North Wilbraham sang. Refreshments were served.

Those who have been predicting a severe winter on account of an unusually hot summer are now saying "I told you so."

Will Teddy run or won't he? And will he run for the nomination or from it? That's what's bothering his close friends, and his enemies as well.

Another attempt to secure a place on the statehouse grounds for a statue of former Gov. Butler has been foiled. The thing is getting to be something of a habit.

There's a suggestion that a 2 1/2-cent piece may be coined for use in shopping where the cent is split in half, with the odd half always taken by the dealer. It's not such a bad idea at that; there's lots of use for a coin of that denomination.

PALMER will have no quarrel with the bill now before the Legislature to put the expense of arresting tramps taken from freight trains on the county instead of the town in which the arrest is made. Many arrests have been made in Palmer on the request of railroad officials, and as the hoboes seldom have funds for the payment of a fine the cost to the town has been considerable.

The work of raising the wreck of the battleship Maine from Havana harbor has so far progressed that the after part of the vessel is now afloat at the harbor level, ready to be towed to sea and its last resting place beneath the waves. The thoroughness with which the work has been prosecuted is shown by the finding, a few days ago, of the remains of the 65th and last man reported missing when the ship went down.

Apparently Richeson's chances of passing the rest of his life in confinement, in the hope that he might do some fellow prisoner good, are slim. Gov. Foss announces that he will make no move for a commutation of sentence, but will hold a hearing "if the council so requests." The council won't "so request." Being composed of men of intelligence, they may be trusted to know what the sentiment throughout the state is in this case,—that the penalty imposed by the law be carried out. No councilor who cares for reelection will ask for a hearing in this case.

There will be much interest in the outcome of a matter recently brought before the board of railroad commissioners—a complaint against the high entrance steps for electric cars, especially the open cars of summer. The board decided after a hearing that there was cause for complaint. Everyone who travels on the summer cars knows that the one step provided between the ground and the car is often much higher than an ordinary man can take in comfort, to say nothing of women and children. In some localities the cars are equipped with a double step; in others with a second folding step. Some good is expected from the agitation.

Palmer Wins Second Game.

Ware Pool Players Defeated in Close and Exciting Game.

The second in the series of pool games between teams from the Ware Masonic club and the Palmer Business and Social club was played in the rooms of the Palmer club Wednesday evening. The result was a victory for the Palmer players, though by an extremely narrow margin. Ware won the first game, Tucker defeating Walker 50 to 39; the second went to Palmer by the close score of 50 to 38, Holden winning from Wood. As the contest at Ware last week was won by the home team with a lead of 22 points, the second series leaves them still 21 to the good.

If there was ever any suggestion that the Ware men are not "some pool players" it was dispelled in the games here Wednesday. Both matches were hard fought and abounded in brilliant shots which were appreciated by the large audience assembled. The Ware team and its friends came down in a special electric, and the members of the Palmer club exerted themselves to do the agreeable, in return for the fine treatment accorded them at Ware the previous week. Refreshments were served after the match, Edmonds catering.

Better Telephone Service.

Central Office Now Has Booth For Use of Night Patrons.

The New England Telephone and Telegraph company has this week installed a much-needed improvement at its central office in the Caryl block—a booth in which persons who wish to telephone after six o'clock at night may have the seclusion and secrecy which a telephone message demands. The business office at the exchange closes at 6 and heretofore, when a person wished to use the company's lines after that hour, the messages had to be sent from a wall telephone in the hall of the building, with no protection from the inquisitiveness of any other person who might choose to be present and listen. Now a sound-proof booth has been installed in one corner of the operating room, with an entrance from the hall of the building, where a light is maintained all night and users may be assured of the exclusiveness which is their right. As it is a pay instrument the night operator is now provided with change, in case the customer does not have the right coins to drop in the slot. The improvement will surely be appreciated by all who have occasion to use the service after business hours.

Pleasing Masquerade Party.

Large Number in Costume at Opera House Friday Evening.

The masquerade party held in the opera house last Friday evening proved one of the most enjoyable social events of the season. A large number of invitations had been issued and the response was even more generous than had been hoped for. There must have been over 200 in costume. The variety of dress was almost infinite, and included everything from the grotesque to the classic. There were clowns, cowboys, courtiers, monks, hoboes, Rubes, farmers, waitresses, ladies-in-waiting, Indian maidens, nurses, etc. Music was furnished by Blodgett's orchestra of Springfield, and dancing was in order until about 1 o'clock, after which a special electric car was run to the villages. The association for district nursing, which was given the surplus above expenses, will have about $25.

Rev. Mr. Williams to Go.

Closed His Labors With Baptist Church Here Last Evening.

Rev. Charles W. Williams, who has been pastor of the Baptist church in Palmer for the past eight years, closed his labors with that church last evening, and will leave soon for his new pastorate in Palmyra, N. J. A letter was received late Saturday evening from the New Jersey church, answering the request of the Palmer church to release Mr. Williams from his promise to go there. The letter, while regretting the situation in which the Palmer church found itself, declined to release Mr. Williams from his agreement.

Pool Tournament Ended.

Summers' Side Victorious in Business Club's Contest.

The pool tournament which has been in progress several weeks among members of the Palmer Business and Social club came to an end last evening. The side captained by James Summers won from Charles Walker's followers by the narrow margin of 14 balls, and expects to eat supper at the expense of the losers. The entire resident membership of the club was chosen on the two sides, and the greater portion of the games have been played. As some of the members had never had a cue in their hands before there were some interesting contests. Each game consisted of 100 balls, the final count to be by balls instead of games. The closest score was 51-49, and the highest 81-19. The date for the supper has not been set.

Cold Reaches Water Pipes.

Burst in Lynde Block Causes Damage. Frost Deep in Ground.

The cold snap of Saturday and Sunday caused a stoppage by freezing in more than one water pipe about town, and no little annoyance was caused during those two days. A pipe in the office of D. B. E. Loring in the Lynde block on Main street froze and burst Sunday, the water doing considerable damage by soaking the dental office and running down into the Edmonds restaurant below, where its appearance was the first intimation that anything was wrong. The pipes of the Knox Hill Water company have frozen in several places, and A. E. Park of Springfield, manager of the system, has been in town a part of the week getting them into serviceable shape again.

Carpet Mill Employees Make Merry at Elms House Saturday.

The Whittall Mutual Aid Society of the Palmer carpet mill held its annual banquet at the Elm Inn Saturday evening. An excellent turkey supper was served by Landlord W. F. Dunn. The supper was followed by speech-making; also singing and instrumental music. The occasion was enjoyed to the utmost by all present. Following is the menu:

Cream of Tomatoes, with Croustons Celery Sliced Pickles
Sugar Cured Ham Ox Tongue
Young Vermont Turkey Dressing
Giblet Gravy Cranberry Sauce
Mashed Potatoes Hubbard Squash

Conduct of Murder Trials.

Interesting Event Next Week For Royal Arcanum Members.

Members of Quabog council of the Royal Arcanum are promised an unusual entertainment at the regular meeting next Tuesday evening, when Past Regent David F. Dillon will give an outline of the method of conducting murder trials in this commonwealth, explaining the rights of the accused, the course of procedure from start to finish, and the reasons for many matters which appear strange to the uninitiated. The talk is sure to be interesting and enlightening.

Killed Deer Unlawfully.

Wilbraham Man Pays Penalty For Shooting Out of Season.

George E. Knowlton of Wilbraham was in the district court this morning charged with shooting a deer in the closed season. He pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $25. Knowlton attempted to sell the meat to Springfield parties, but they "squealed" on him, and a complaint was made by Deputy Game Warden Hatch of that city.

Christian Endeavor Union Annual.

The first annual meeting of the Eastern Hampden Christian Endeavor union will be held in the Congregational church in Palmer next Friday evening at 7.30. There will be reports of committees, election of officers, and addresses on "Fellowship." The principal address will be by Rev. Jesse Nichols of South Hadley, president of the Hampden County Christian Endeavor union. The public is invited to the meeting.

Articles For Town Warrant.

The selectmen at their meeting last evening voted that all articles intended for the warrant for the annual town meeting must be in their hands by the evening of Thursday, Feb. 29.

Uncle Tom's Cabin Next Monday.

Al. W. Martin's "mammoth scenic and spectacular $30,000 revival" of the celebrated masterpiece of Harriet Beecher Stowe, entitled "Uncle Tom's Cabin," will be given at the Palmer opera house next Monday evening. It is one of the grandest, most interesting and heart-rending plays ever placed upon the stage, and it will live forever in the memory of the theatre-going public. Mr. Martin, the manager, has taken great pains in staging and producing the original version of Mrs. Stowe's beautiful story, every year trying to outdo the previous. The company this season numbers over 50 people, 20 of whom are colored, engaged to fill out the many pictures of the play and introduce their many old and new songs, dances and plantation shins. A 70-foot car is required to transport the people, scenery, bloodhounds, log-cabin floats, chariots, etc. A grand street parade will be given at 12 o'clock sharp, starting from the theatre.

Chicken-pie Supper Next Week.

The annual chicken-pie supper of the Woman's Relief Corps will be given in Memorial Hall next Thursday evening; supper will be served at 6.30. This event needs no economies; it is known to everybody—almost—and the excellence of the menu always served requires no emphasizing. That the committee in charge will use their utmost endeavors to keep next week's event full up to the usual high standard. After the supper there will be an entertainment, followed by dancing. A prompter will be provided and there will be square as well as round dances. Supper and entertainment tickets will be 50 cents; entertainment, 10 cents; supper tickets for children under 12 years, 25 cents.

Improvements at Public Library.

The trustees of the Young Men's Library Association are making some changes and improvements which the public is sure to appreciate. The walls and ceiling of the reference, reading and stack rooms are to be calcimined, the floors in the reference and reading room shellacked, and the floor of the stack room covered with linoleum. The shelves in the stack room are also to be rearranged so as to give better light; when this is done the stack room is to be opened to the public.

Sunday School Entertained.

The Baptist Sunday school passengers on the Lusitania entertained their rivals, passengers on the Mauritania, in the attendance contest, with a "Topsy-turvy" social in the church Wednesday evening. Every attendant was expected to wear some article of clothing in an inverted position, and there was much amusement among the half a hundred who were present. Refreshments were served.

Asks to Have Checks Collected.

The school committee held its last meeting for the present municipal year Tuesday evening. Town Treasurer Clough requests that all who hold town checks present them for payment at once, so that he may be able to check up his books and prepare them for the auditors.

The National Tree of China.

The tung, or wood oil tree, is worthily named the national tree of China. It is stately in appearance, with smooth green bark and wide-spreading branches, affording a fine shade. It bears a fruit resembling a shellbark hickory nut, but as large as a small orange. Each nut contains three triangular seeds similar to small Brazil nuts. The oil is pressed from these seeds and the refuse is used as a fertilizer. The oil is used principally for polishing woodwork and dressing leather. Considerable quantities are exported.

The wood of the tung tree is used for making musical instruments, fine boxes and the framework of small houses. It is believed that this tree might flourish in warmer parts of the United States.—Scientific American.

TO PROTECT WATER BUCKETS

Stable Boys Bore Holes in Their Bottoms and Carry Corks in Their Pockets.

"Anybody who has occasion to use a water bucket," said a man acquainted with their various uses, "is likely to pick up the first one he comes to, then he may put it back where he found it or he may not."

"It was to prevent their being carried off in this way and left around where they didn't belong that the fire buckets came to be made with round bottoms, so that they wouldn't stand on their own bottom. Such buckets, as you know, are kept filled with water and standing around in buildings, supported in holders having rounded out spaces in which the buckets rest. These buckets are likely to be left where they belong."

"A man who doesn't know their peculiarity may come along some day and pick up one of them and carry it off, but he is likely to leave the fire buckets alone after one experience of seeing the bucket he has carried off roll over when he set it down and spill out all the water."

"Perhaps you don't know what stable boys do to keep their buckets where they can find them. The stable boy protects his particular cket by boring a hole in its bottom, so that it won't hold water; nobody wants a bucket that won't hold water. Then he carries in his pocket a cork that will fit the hole in the bucket, and when he has use for it he simply plugs the hole, and there's the bucket ready for use."

"To be sure other boys around a stable may carry corks in their pockets, but the run of people don't; and so the boy who has bored the bottom of his bucket is at least a little more likely to find it when he wants it than he would be if it had no hole in it."

Changed Her Mind.

A young couple had been courting for several years and the young man seemed to be in no hurry to marry. Finally, one day, he said:

"Sal, I canna marry thee."

"How's that?" asked she.

"I've changed my mind," said he.

"Well, I'll tell thee what we'll do," said she. "If folks know that it's thee as has given me up I shanna be able to get another chap; but if they thing 've given thee up I can get all I want. So we'll have banns published and when the wedding day comes the parson will say to thee, 'Will thou have this woman for thy wedded wife?' and thou must say, 'I will.' And when he says to me, 'Will thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?' I shall say, 'I winna.'"

The day came, and when the minister asked the important question the man answered, "I will."

Then the parson said to the woman: "Will thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" and she said:

"I will."

"V'hy," said the young man furiously, "you said you would say 'I winna.'"

"I know that," said the young woman, "but I've changed my mind since"—National Monthly.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

How Mrs. Bethune was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo. — "For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I had cramps, backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband's told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do all my own housework, work in the garden and entertain company and enjoy them, and can walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the week. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl, and tell them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." — Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it?

Blue Devils.

When you find yourself in the possession of sundry blue devils, proceed to out-devil them. If they would have you go a mile go two miles. Put your will into it and see how blue you can be. "Retend" you are a bluer blooded aristocrat than any of those that have come to visit. Be polite to them and let them entertain you. Do anything they bid you do. Sit down and mourn and wall to their heart's content. Be rate everything and everybody. Just try it. Blue devils are such contrary things that they never stay long where they are well treated. Their good mission is to torment. A hearty welcome sends them flying—Elizabeth Towne in Nautilus.

Hoping for the Best.

"Now that we are married," said the pretty chorus girl, "what do you propose to do?"

"Why," replied the son of the millionaire, "I think we had better keep it secret until I can get a good chance to break the news to the governor when he is in a pleasant mood."

"But how long is it likely to be before he gets into that kind of a mood?"

"It's hard to tell. The stock market is bad, but let us hope for the best. He may win a dollar or two at poker some night before the week is ended."

RED CEDAR FOR BULDINGS

Some of This Excellent Material Is Estimated to Be Nearly Four Thousand Years Old.

It will surprise many to know that they have in their homes material estimated to be 4,000 years old. If the shingles or interior finish is red cedar or if you have a red cedar chest it is possible that the wood antedates the history of this country by thousands of years, says the Cleveland Leader.

A Cleveland man is credited with bringing the first red cedar into this section. W. A. Geist, on a western trip several years ago, was attracted by the red cedar forests at Port Angeles, Wash. He established a mill there and began shipping the cedar to the eastern market. Formerly the southern cedar was used in great quantities, but it is the claim of Mr. Geist that the product from the Pacific coast is growing in favor and the demand for it is increasing.

It is a most durable wood and its use in a home guarantees that moths and other troublesome insects will not enter. It is used for wainscoting, mantels, cupboards, cabinets and especially for chests in which to store furs and clothing. Mr. Geist exhibits a quantity of red cedar cut from a tree he estimates to be at least 3,700 years of age. Three large cedars were found growing from a fallen log which was five and one-half feet in diameter. The largest of the three trees growing from the fallen tree was ten and one-half feet in diameter. By counting the rings in both trees indicates that the fallen tree, still sound, is nearing its four thousandth birthday.

Mr. Geist is an expert upon red cedar and goes in for the history of the wonderful trees of Washington and other coast states as a biographer would the data upon the life of some famous man. He surrounds a bolt of shingle cedar with an interesting story, which goes back to the misty ages and something like reverence grows within the listener for this venerable work of nature.

Unquestionably the red cedar is the oldest material used in the construction of the home and few materials will outwear it, it being nearly indestructible except by fire.

PICK ODD NOOKS FOR NESTS

Swallows Are Cunning Builders But Sometimes Select Precarious Sites for Homes.

Swallows are diligent and cunning builders of nests, but they are not always wise in their choice of a locality. In proof of this a couple of birds last year chose a secluded corner among the rafters of my barn and managed to hatch and rear their young successfully.

This year a couple, probably the same, repaired the nest and laid their eggs. But one morning both birds were found lying dead on the floor, the windows having been closed and the door locked by a too careful servant. A favorite place for a swallow to build its nest is the upper corner of a window.

This situation is to say the least precarious, as an energetic housemaid has merely unintentionally or otherwise to draw down the sash and the nest is at once in ruins. I remember once quite unintentionally acting the part of the energetic housemaid. I drew down the sash and managed just in time to save the structure from falling to pieces.

Supporting it with my hands, I told one of my boys to bring his schoolbag, and having fastened it securely to the window, deposited therein the remains of the nest and the young family of birds.

The parents were shy at first, but on closer investigation, having satisfied themselves that their little ones were still alive, they accommodated themselves to the situation and brought up their family in the usual way, sending them at length into the world doubtless all the wiser for their nurture in this abode of learning. A similar misfortune happened this summer to a swallow's nest in the window of a cottage in the Cheviot hills.

This time the nest was almost totally destroyed, but help came from a probably unlooked-for quarter. The dismayed cries of the feathered builders attracted their companions, who flocked around in large number and rendered every assistance in repairing the damage.—The Scotsman.

The Useful Verb "To Get."

There is no word, long or short, in the English language capable of performing so much labor in a clear, intelligible sense as the verb to get; and here is an old-time specimen of its capabilities:

"I got on horseback within ten minutes after after I got your letter. When I got to Canterbury I got a chaise for town; but I got wet through before I got to Canterbury and I have got such a cold as I shall not be able to get rid of in a hurry. I got to the treasury about noon, but first of all I got shaved and dressed. I soon got into the secret of getting a memorial before the board, but I could not get an answer then; however, I got intelligence from the messenger that I should most likely get one the next morning. As soon as I got back to my inn I got my supper. When I got up in the morning I got my breakfast and then got myself dressed that I might get out in time to get an answer to my memorial. As soon as I got it I got into the first chaise and got to Canterbury by 3 o'clock, and about tea time I got home."

Boston Letter.

Work Still Being Pushed — Echo of the Lawrence Strike — Not to Restore Battle Flags — Butler Statue Debate — Civil Service For Counties — Grand Trunk Railway — State — Highway Money.

Boston, Feb. 21, 1912.

Members of the Legislature are patting themselves on the back about their rapid progress. Really, it is in contrast to the many and startling sensations of last year, when the strenuous campaign against Senator Lodge was followed by constant friction between the Republicans in the Legislature who did not miss an opportunity, especially under the lead of Norman H. White, to say what they thought of the governor and when the governor did not hesitate to drive right ahead, regardless of what Norman H. White thought of him. This year they are getting on so well that they propose to take the remainder of this week for a day off. To-morrow being Washington's Birthday and Friday being an off day in between the holiday and Saturday, they have decided that they will go through the forms of sessions in Senate and House and then adjourn to Monday, though the committee hearings assigned for Friday will be held as far as attendance will permit.

Following the custom now two weeks old, the Bulletin standing of the total work is reproduced on the Senate and House calendars for the encouragement and warning of the faithful. The figures are these: Matters referred up to February 19, 1912; matters reported, 546; matters not reported, 1421; hearings closed, 650; hearings not closed, 771; hearings assigned, 645; hearings not assigned, 126. This is a very encouraging showing for this stage in the session, but it remains as true as in previous years that the big business is holding back and the House is just beginning to sit all its afternoon. The Senate still does not get its due proportion of reports and does not sit nearly as long as the House. So reform is still in order.

Yesterday afternoon the House had an unexpected demonstration of either the conservatism of radical Democrats, as well as of Republicans, or else their sense of the ridiculous when sensationalism is carried too far. Mr. Morrill of Haverhill, the only Socialist in the Legislature, made the most of his opportunity to declaim about the Lawrence strike and the circumstances connected with it. The bill under discussion was the appropriation of $150,000 for payment of the troops and other military expenses connected with the strike. Mr. Morrill made the most of the opportunity. With the reddest color he painted the terrible conditions there, asserting that the soldiers were the cause of the bloodshed and rioting, denouncing the state government for sending troops there at all, putting the blame of all troubles upon the government and the employers and taking up the side of the employees in ultra socialist fashion. The consequence was that he alienated completely the sympathy and the respect of the House. When he told of a boy's shirt being pierced and torn by a bayonet the light-minded members laughed and some other points of supposed horror were greeted with derisive laughter, even by the element in the House which would naturally be supposed to sympathize with the strikers. Then came the return blow. Representative McGrath of Boston, a member of a battalion which is on duty in Lawrence, made a ringing defense of the troops, of their loyalty and efficiency, and asserted the duty of the government to enforce law and order at whatever cost. He put the Socialist firebrand in a most unenviable light and he commanded the warm applause of all the House but Morrill. When it came to the vote there was nobody with Morrill and he had the distinction of standing alone as the representative of the element which has had much more favor in some of the Boston papers than the Democratic support in the House indicates that it has on the part of the people generally. When it comes to yielding to disorder and mob rule, the House took its stand most decidedly and it was far more effective coming through a young Irish Democrat than through an old line Yankee Republican capitalist.

Another most interesting outburst of patriotic sentiment occurred in the House over the appropriation of $1000 for the proposed restoration of the battle flags of the Civil war, which are dropping to pieces from age in Memorial Hall downstairs. It had been proposed to appropriate $5000, but the sum was made $1000 for an experiment, as it would cost $30,000 to do the entire work, if the experiment were successful. There was a plea for the preservation and Mr. Edson of Stow, the poetic member and a Grand Army man, read a poetic, bank verse effusion for the appropriation. But Mr. Underhill of Somerville turned the tide and was supported by others effectively. It was not the money, he said, not even if a gift of $100,000 should be made. But no unhalloved hands should be put upon the sacred flags. The blood stains and the rotting threads were their honor. To put in a lot of new material would destroy the significance of these shreds which had actually been in the storm and smoke of battle. It appeared further that the only support of the appropriation, at the committee hearing, was one woman who wanted the job, and that the Grand Army men did not favor it. In the end the appropriation got almost no votes and the flags will remain as they have been.

The House just got a smell of the fire in the debate over the effort to secure a $25,000 statue to Benjamin F. Butler before the adjournment was taken which means the end of debate till next Monday. They will not do anything Friday, beyond some committee meetings and the transaction of formal business in the branches. The debate on the part of Mr. Smith of Gloucester brought out the two points which have rallied two classes of our citizens to the support of Butler. He said that Butler was the first governor of Massachusetts to appoint a Roman Catholic to a judicial position and the first to appoint a negro to public office. He affirmed that if the accounts were true that Butler sent military supplies through the Union lines to the Confederate troops to be used against the Union men, it ought to have cost him his life, but he added, that Butler was honored by a resolution adopted by Congress for his services in the Civil War. The debate promises to be hot, and the vote is quite likely to run on party lines, as it did in the committee on state house and libraries, which reported by six Republicans to five Democrats against the appropriation.

There was put into the Senate today, with the dissent of Senator Denny of Worcester, the first bill which has ever been presented to extend the civil service law to the counties. It is on the petition of the Massachusetts Civil Service Association and is optional upon every county. But, if a county rejects the proposition, then it can be revived again upon petition of 5000 voters. It does not apply to present incumbents of office. With its teeth thus drawn, it is not likely to encounter the opposition which has always proved fatal to every previous effort in this direction.

Quite a large display was made in the reception room of the Senate to-day of the handiwork of inmates of the Gardner colony of the insane. Many articles were shown of wonderfully fine skill and it was evident that these persons, who are classed as chronic insane, have very fine fingers and exquisite taste and are perfectly sane in some directions. But they are, for all that, not to be given their liberty, though the representative of the colony said that they give the inmates more freedom than they are given in other state institutions of this class.

Western Massachusetts members and Worcester county members are working for the different amendments for the trolley bills, but the committee on street railways will not be able to do anything further till next week. House Chairman Hardy of Huntington, who is doing all he can for the hill towns, went home to-night and will not return till Monday. The western men are working with the belief that they will be able to get something tangible out of the bills.

Nothing has developed this week regarding the admission of the Grand Trunk petition for admission to Boston from the north and from Worcester way. It is quite probable that the matter will be pushed forward as far as possible, so as to come in the time when business is congested and members are anxious to go home, and then it can be handled better by the men who make a business of manipulating legislatures.

The state highway commission, with its proposition for $5,000,000 for state highways for the next five years, offers a counterpart to the $50,000,000 scheme for Boston harbor and increases the interest in these great problems for the development of the state. LANDON.

BRIMFIELD.

Grange Holds Valentine Leap Year Dance.

The regular meeting of the Brimfield Grange was held Tuesday evening, when the first and second degrees were conferred on the Misses Helena and Lucinda Lawrence and Russell Skinner. Master Orlo Parker was unable to attend, so Overseer Everett M. Stowell filled the Master's chair and Past Master Fred H. Lawrence conferred the degrees. After the regular meeting there was a valentine leap year dance. Valentines were cut in halves and one half given to the ladies and the corresponding half to the gents. The ladies thus found their partners for the grand march and circle. The hall was appropriately decorated with festoons of red crepe paper and large red hearts. The committee in charge were Everett Stowell, Stanley Parker, Margaret Dunsmore, Ella Parker and Hattie Lombard.

Home-made baskets filled with home-made candies were sold, and the vestry was very prettily decorated with festoons and different colored hearts.

The Marriage of Nora

By Peggy Powers

"It's preposterous! Outrageous! Incredible! Who told you?" asked Mr. Bryce.

"Nora told Sonny and Sonny told me," answered his wife.

"I can't believe that as refined, gentle and pretty a girl as Nora could sink so low as to wish to marry a Chinaman," said Mr. Bryce.

"She has worked for us for six years, and I've never seen as capable a servant."

"Have you remonstrated with her?" asked the husband.

"Just came from the kitchen. I begged, pleaded and implored, but to no avail. Her mind is irrevocably made up."

"I'll speak to her myself," majestically stated the husband.

Entering the kitchen, he said: "Nora, you have always been a good, faithful, sensible girl. You will not take offense if I speak plainly to you, will you?"

"Shure not, sir," promptly answered the girl.

"Tell me then why are you marrying this heathen?"

"He ain't no 'hathen,' sir. He's a nice respectable fellow. He gives me

"You Will Not Take Offense?"

a good home. I love him. He loves me. I marry him."

"What would your poor mother say if she knew it?" asked Bryce, trying to work on her sympathies.

"Ma don't care. She knows it. We wrote to her, Lee and I did," answered Nora.

"But don't you see that it's an infamous shame for a fine, good looking girl like yourself to marry a common, low Chinaman?"

"A Chinaman?" gasped Nora, holding on to the table for support. "Who's going to marry a Chinaman?"

"Sonny said you told him you were engaged to our Chinese laundry man," stated Bryce.

"Oh, Mr. Bryce, I see now. I told your boy that I was going to marry the laundry man. The only laundry man Sonny thinks of is the Chinaman at the corner. But I—I am thinking of another."

"Well, that is a joke," said Mr. Bryce.

"Is your young man the tall, good looking chap who delivers the wash on Thursday mornings?"

"That's him," blushed Nora.

"Bully for you," said Mr. Bryce. "I don't blame you. Let's go and tell the news to Sonny and the Mrs."

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

MEANS ECONOMY IN FOOD.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.
Economy, which is now the cry in all things, from postage to politics, has no more valiant helper than M. Soyer's system of paper bag cooking.

Roasts which have a knack of shrinking horribly in the pan come out of paper bags almost the size which they came from the butcher, and possessed of their full food value. They will have been cooked in vapors of their own essence—the best part of them will not have run out to dry on the pan bottom, and smell most appetizingly, but be in large measure lost to the palate. There will be gravy in the bag, to be sure—gravy fit for a king.

In case of fish, the results are even better. Pan-cooking wastes a fifth, a fourth, sometimes even a third of a fish.

Vegetables also taste better, and are better, for bag cooking. Bag cooking preserves in them their essential salts, which boiling takes away.

Because all manner of seasoning is thus conserved and driven into the food care must be taken to use seasoning lightly.

Here is a way of using up cold dinner meat that hearty children will relish, and even the man of the house not disdain. Cut the meat in slices, neither too thick nor too thin, and as broad as possible, butter them, sprinkle them well with salted flour, and a very little pepper. Lay in a well-greased bag, side by side, hollowed upon each a tomato, peeled, hollowed out, dusted inside with sugar, salt and pepper, then stuffed. Boiled rice is a good stuffing, so is cooked macaroni or spaghetti cut small. Bread crumbs fried brown are likewise tasty. Season the stuffing well and mix through it all the snippets and trimmings of the meat. Use either butter, bacon, or cold boiled pork, well minced, to enrich the stuffing. Scatter between the tomatoes the scooped from their insides. Place in bag, seal it, and cook in a hot oven about twelve minutes.

Quick Potatoes.—Take a large white potato for each person to be fed. Peel, slice thin, drop in cold water for five minutes, then drain, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and pack compactly in a well-greased bag, adding a tablespoonful of stock or milk and water, for each two potatoes. Seal, and cook twenty minutes. Boiled potatoes can be used, and take only half as long.

Baked Apples.—Wash well, but do not peel, cut out specks and bruises, core, fill the bottom of the core space with a lump of butter, over which pile sugar, and add a bit of cinnamon. A clove stuck in the side may take the place of the cinnamon. Seal inside a well greased bag, and bake eighteen to twenty minutes in a fairly hot oven. Serve with sugar and cream or a hard sauce.

A PAPER BAG COOKED BRIDGE LUNCHEON.

By Nicholas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Broiled Chicken. Asparagus. Mushrooms. Celery. Olives. Radishes. Celery. Pudding a la Mayence. Black Coffee. Crackers. Cheese.

Broiled Chicken.—Split the chicken down the middle of the back, spread flat, and put a skewer in each side to prevent it from curling. Beat up a very fresh egg, with a pinch of salt, black pepper to taste, an ounce of melted butter, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce or something similar, and a teaspoonful of made mustard. Mix well. With a brush glaze the chicken with the mixture. Place in a greased bag with bread crumbs around and over it. Be careful that the skewers do not tear the bag. Seal up tight and cook thirty-five to forty minutes in a very hot oven.

Mushrooms.—Peel and wash the mushrooms, brush them lightly over with melted butter, dust with salt and pepper, and put into a buttered bag with a lump of butter, a little water, and a spoonful of lemon juice or port or sherry wine. Seal tight and cook in a hot oven twelve to twenty minutes.

Asparagus.—Trim and scrape as for boiling, wash very clean. Tie in bundles and put into a buttered bag, with a little salt and half a gill of water. Seal and cook thirty-five to forty minutes in a hot oven.

Pudding a la Mayence.—Rub half a pint of breadcrumbs through a fine wire sieve, add to them a tumblerful of wine and water, half an half, the rind of a small lemon, washed, dried and grated, three heaped tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, and an ounce of butter. Mix well, pour into a buttered soufflé dish, and add the beaten yolks of two eggs, and the strained juice of the lemon. Beat the whites of the eggs to a very stiff froth, add powdered sugar to taste, and a pinch of salt. Color with a few drops of green spinach coloring, or pale pink with a little carmine or cochineal, pile on top, place in bag, put in a very moderate oven, and bake till the meringue is firmly set.

DO NOT LEAN UPON OTHERS

Learn to Stand Alone or You Never Will Become Strong or Original.

Power is the goal of every worthy ambition, and only weakness comes from imitation or dependence on others. Says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. Power is self-developed, self-generated. We cannot increase the strength of our muscles by sitting in a museum and letting another exercise for us.

Nothing else so destroys the power to stand alone as the habit of leaning upon others. If you lean, you will never be strong or original. Stand alone or bury your ambition to be somebody in the world.

The man who tries to give his children a start in the world so that they will not have so hard a time as he had, is unknowingly bringing disaster upon them. What he calls giving them a start will probably give them a setback in the world. Young people need all the motive power they can get. They are naturally leaners, imitators, copiers, and it is easy for them to develop into echoes, imitations. They will not walk alone while you furnish crutches; they will lean upon you just as long as you will let them.

FREE IF IT FAILS.

Your Money Back if You Are Not Satisfied With the Medicine We Recommend.

We are so positive that our remedy will permanently relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine at our expense should it fail to produce satisfactory results.

It is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Laxative or cathartics do much harm. They cause a reaction, irritate, and weaken the bowels and tend to make constipation more chronic. Besides, their use becomes a habit that is dangerous.

Constipation is caused by a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or descending colon. To expect permanent relief you must therefore tone up and strengthen these organs and restore them to healthier activity.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our recommendation. They are exceedingly pleasant to take, being eaten like candy, and are ideal for children, delicate persons, and old folks, as well as for the robust. They act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They apparently have a neutral action on other associate organs or glands. They do not purge, cause excessive looseness, nor create any inconvenience whatever. They may be taken at any time, day or night. They will positively relieve chronic or habitual constipation, if not of surgical variety, and the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, if taken with regularity for a reasonable length of time. 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents; 80 tablets, 50 cents. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store.

Fine Chicken-pie Supper.

Big Crowd at W. R. C. Annual Event.
Entertainment and Dancing.

Weather conditions never kept anyone who has ever attended the chicken-pie suppers of the Woman's Relief Corps at home, so there was the usual large attendance—or perhaps a little larger than usual—at the one last evening. All the tables were filled once and numerous of them a second time.
The supper was fully up to the standard of excellence set by that organization, a standard which is seldom equalled and never surpassed.

After the supper there was an entertainment consisting of a flag drill by ten little girls, songs by Mrs. Elizabeth Collis, Mrs. Bessie Grimston, Arthur Morris and Miss Patrice Atkins, recitations by Miss Lillian Kempton and by Fred Davis of Thorndike, and readings
by Mrs. Bertha Raymond of North Wilbraham.

The entertainment was followed by dancing until 12. Orcutt's orchestra of Monson furnished music and Prof.
Comfort of Palmer prompted for the square and contra dances, of which there were a generous number on the program, which seemed to be fully enjoyed by all.

list of diseases considered "dangerous to the public health," as provided in chapter 213 of the Acts of 1902. This does not mean that the diseases are considered any more serious or dangerous than formerly, but it means that cities and towns will hereafter be permitted to collect more than $10—the present maximum—per week from other cities and towns for the care of patients suffering from these diseases which may have settlements in other towns. The 1902 law permits any reasonable compensation to be collected in cases where patients are afflicted with certain maladies specified by the board of health.

HE PLANNED HIS OWN DEATH

How Sir William Hankford 500 Years Ago Evaded Law Against Committing Suicide.

Suicides often adopt ingenious methods, but the art of the felon seems not to have advanced materially during the centuries. The modern case of a heavily insured broker who on a feigned hunting trip stood bare-legged in a quagmire for hours and wilfully contracted a fatal pneumonia is matched in cleverness by one 500 years old.

The following facts are well vouched for, and indeed were never questioned, says the Green Bag. Sir William Hankford, a judge of the king's bench in the reigns of Edward III, Henry IV, Henry V and Henry VI, and at the time of his death chief justice of England, was a man of melancholy temperament.

He seems to have contemplated suicide the greater part of his long life and during his later years the idea became a fixed purpose. The act was of peculiarly serious consequences in those days for the reason that the law treated it as a capital crime. The offender was buried at the cross roads, with a stake driven through his body, and all his goods and property were forfeited to the crown, to the utter ruin of his family. Hankford made good use of his wit and succeeded in accomplishing his purpose without incurring either unpleasant penalty. He gave open instructions to his gamekeeper, who had been troubled with poachers in the deer preserve, to challenge all trespassers in the future and to shoot to kill if they would not stand and give an account.

One dark night he purposely crossed the keeper's path, and upon challenge made motions of resistance and escape. The faithful servant, following instruction to the letter, as was expected of him, and Sir William fell dead in his tracks. The whole truth of the affair was common knowledge, but it was impossible to establish a case of suicide by legal proof. The servant was protected by his instructions. Hankford had honorable burial and his estate passed to those whose interests as heirs he had so wisely considered.

YOUNG BEAVER'S DAY'S WORK

Record Made by One of the Animals in Regent's Park Gardens, London.

A young beaver in Regent's Park gardens, London, was once placed at work upon a tree 12 feet long and 2 feet 6 inches thick just as the town clocks sounded the hour of noon. The beaver began by barking the tree a foot above the ground.

That done he attacked the wood. He worked hard, alternating his labor with dips in his bathing pond. He bathed and labored alternately until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when he ate his supper of bread and carrots and paddled about in his pond until half-past 5 o'clock.

Ten minutes later, when only one inch of the tree's diameter remained intact, he bore upon his work and the tree fell. Before it fell the beaver ran as men run when they have fired a blast. Then as the tree lay on the ground he portioned it out mentally and again began to gnaw.

He worked at intervals all night, cut the log into three parts, rolled two of the portions into the water and reserved the other third for his permanent shelter. The work done, he took a bath.—Harper's Weekly.

U. S. P. C. A. AGENT'S STORY

ED. H. PACKARD GIVES ACCOUNT OF TRIP THROUGH THE STATE.

Many Animals Suffer From Intense Cold. Says Interesting Things. Kind Care of Animals Pays.

Ed. H. Packard, the general field agent of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, has been all through the state on his trip to inspect the state of the Massachusetts Society.

ED. H. PACKARD.

arms as well as the towns and noting the protection given to animals during the cold weather, besides studying conditions at the slaughterhouses. In relation to these subjects he has the following to say:

For a good many years this matter of the winter housing of dumb creatures has been very much on my mind. I have passed the winter on farms once or twice in my career and recently have had my sympathies thoroughly aroused in behalf of the poor dogs and fowl which are compelled by the thoughtless owners to half ures than for a log of wood. They are a class who should be "lined up" by law.

All over Massachusetts are men who have cooped up their hogs and hens in miserable old shacks, open to the weather on all sides besides top and underneath, no bedding, no place to exercise and there they have to stand through these bitter cold nights and days. The way some dumb creatures are made to suffer with the cold is a shame to suffer to make every humane person a worker for animals' rights until a law is passed requiring every owner of captive dumb creatures to provide tight weather-proof winter quarters and warm bedding for them. The state has animal inspectors for every town to watch out for disease and to see that hygienic conditions exist.

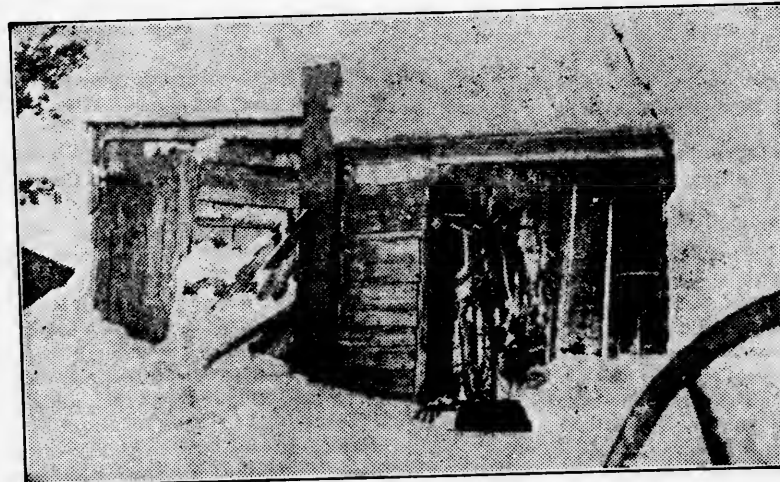

This is a forward step. Let the state now add to the inspectors' duties the matter of the proper winter housing and bedding of all cattle and fowl and a great act of justice and mercy will be done. The responsibility for this suffering is yours. It will never be remedied until the people rise up and demand it. I hope all the granges will get to work and especially the women. It seems to me that something can be done by another winter to forever protect our dumb captives from the cold and guarantee them comfortable housing.

The M. S. P. C. A. has prosecuted many animal owners for neglect this winter; some of them were sentenced two and three months in jail besides a fine. Anyone who knows of dumb creatures exposed to the weather is asked to give the particulars to the M. S. P. C. A., 45 Milk St., Boston, who will investigate at once. There is no need of giving your name should you not care to do so. The revised laws of Massachusetts impose a maximum punishment of $250 and one year's imprisonment for unnecessarily failing to provide food, drink, shelter or protection from the weather for animals.

The Humane society needs funds sadly to cover the entire state with a paid patrol to guard these dumb creatures' rights and ferret out any cruelties or hardships. The matter requires eternal vigilance through a corps of field workers and I hope the people will give money liberally for it. Officers of the society have the dumb animals near to their hearts and are working and planning for them constantly.

The society is working hard to bring about more humane slaughtering of food animals, after the methods employed in government abattoirs abroad and has plans afoot for the erection at Boston of a modern hospital for the care of sick and disabled animals of the poor anywhere throughout the state.

More than once in the history of the nation Massachusetts has blazed out the way for reforms that have been a blessing to the race and in humane endeavor today with over 3-freeze to death during our long winter nights because they are not adequately housed and bedded.

This winter has been one of the hardest on animals ever known and they have suffered intensely from the cold. The winter housing of animals and fowl is left optional with the owner. As far as I have observed, the average well-to-do farmers are considerate of their beasts and give them tight quarters, warm bedding and proper care, but in every community there are shiftless, ignorant or calloused men who seem to have no more feeling for their dumb crea-

C., and many other humane societies.

ALL OVER MASSACHUSETTS THIS WINTER WITH THERMOMETER 10 TO 40 BELOW, CATTLE AND FOWL HAVE BEEN COMPELLED TO STAY AND SUFFER IN APOLCSIES FOR SHELTER LIKE THIS WHILE MANY HOGS AND FOWL ARE LEFT ABSOLUTELY UNPROTECTED. He went to remove the lodged tree by cutting the other away when it crashed downward, striking him on the head. He was picked up unconscious and remains in that condition at this writing. BOY LOSES FINGER.

Accident to Young Son of William C. Moulton Sunday.

William Lloyd, the five-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Moulton, was badly injured Sunday afternoon at his father's machine shop. Mr. Moulton was repairing a broken cylinder-head on one of his gasoline engines, when the boy caught his finger in the thread-cutting gears of the lathe. Mr. Moulton had just started the machine and did not know these gears were in mesh, as he never runs them except when cutting threads. Upon investigation it was found that one of his men, while using the lathe the day previous, had neglected to take off the gears when through using them. Dr. C. W. Jackson was called and took the boy to the Collins emergency hospital in Springfield. It was found necessary to amputate the first finger, which was performed by Dr. D. J. Brown. A total of 104 gifts had been given to the committee by merchants and business men of the town and by parents of the parish. All of these were awarded to the lucky persons Tuesday night. Selling Perfume in Mexico.

All classes in Mexico buy perfumes, even the Yaquis. There is a large mail-order business done from this section of Mexico. Sample packages if very small come in free, but many salable-sized packages, even if marked "sample," would be dutiable. If perfume is sent by mail the duty is collected by the postoffice before delivery of the goods; if sent by express the company advances the duty at the frontier and collects on delivering the goods. If a package is sent by mail, for actual sale, the sender should mark the value thereon; if by express, send the bill along.—United States Consular Reports.

Soap Good for the Teeth.

Soap is beneficial to the teeth; being an alkali, it counteracts acids, which are injurious to the enamel. A simple way to clean the teeth is to have a piece of curd soap kept for the purpose. Wet the toothbrush, rub lightly on the soap, dip in prepared chalk, and brush the teeth well; rinse with tepid water. Two or three times a week put a few drops of myrrh into the rinsing water.

It is worth your while to take a trip down town and see the diamond rings and gold watches that are on display at the jewelry store of E. S. Brooks, 423 Main street.

The thousands of votes brought in by the candidates and their friends this week go to show the wonderful popularity of the $250 cash and prize contest.

The close voting and even balloting which results from one candidate endeavoring to take the leadership from another while the leader tries hard to defend his or her position, has caused an interesting relative position of several of the heaviest voters in all the districts.

The pace set by the leaders in the great race for the $250, diamond rings and gold watches, is by no means a slow one, which indicates that most of the contestants who aspire to come out as winners are heeding wholesome advice that is being given them by friends who are interested in their participation in the friendly competition.

A candidate who makes a steady increase, thereby demonstrating their persistency, attracts more influential and lasting helpers than does one who spasmodically jumps ahead, then remains quiet for a period. Some of the others, because of having started later, or being at first without practical assistance, are at this writing somewhat behind their fellow contestants; but the $250 and prize marathon is young yet, and many who do not now look like possible winners will, later on, prove to be dangerous rivals for the present leaders.

All are ever watchful for the precious ballots that will act as mile-stones on the way to success for the candidates in the Palmer Journal contest. Some days will prove to be more productive than others, but one may never know how much may be gained by remaining constantly "on the job" as it were—ever ready to speak that word that will some day result in a subscription that will credit you with a thousand or more votes. Take it all in all the contestant who tries, who enlists their friends to the best advantage stands in the best position to come out a winner, despite the fact that he or she may be an unknown quantity in their district at this time. And the leaders, what of them? Can they retain their present positions? Time alone will tell.

HOW ROADS ARE BUILT.

Men's League Listens to Interesting Talk.

D. L. BODFISH WAS THE SPEAKER.

Tells How Good Roads Need To Be Built. Suggestions as to Care Of Old.

At a meeting of the Men's League held in the Congregational church Wednesday evening D. L. Bodfish gave a talk on "Highways, their Construction and Maintenance." He said in part:

"We're to define a highway, we should designate it as a pathway for the transportation of passengers and commodities." The speaker alluded to the ancient highways of Egypt, Greece and those constructed by the Romans, their lasting qualities and the marvelous feats of engineering skill shown in their construction. He said: "Modern methods of road building date from the days of Telford and MacAdam, two noted British road builders whose methods are largely employed in road building to-day. The system employed by Telford is largely a revival of the old Roman method. This consists of the construction of a foundation by the use of heavy stones, covering these with smaller rocks and then with a top dressing of finer material. Telford built several highways in Great Britain which are in good shape to-day after a century of wear. This method was discarded in 1816 by MacAdam who prepared a yielding foundation and devised the system which bears his name. This method consists of the use of irregular broken stone of several sizes bound together by the use of finer material and firmly rolled. A combination of these two methods is employed in the construction of modern highways by the highway commissioners in a majority of the states in this country."

The speaker then outlined the growth of highway construction in the United States, and said it was not until the agricultural interests of the country compelled the attention of the United States government and the advent of the automobile made some change necessary that the problem received the attention its solution demanded. The average cost of hauling produce was then mentioned, this being 23 cents over the ordinary road and 8 cents per mile over broken stone roads, a saving of $216,000,000 alone to the farmers on farm products shipped to railroad stations alone. The need of taking this question out of politics was early recognized in Massachusetts and a provisional committee consisting of a lawyer, an engineer and a geologist was appointed, who, after careful research, reported the bill which later became a law and gave us our present commission.

Plans were devised for a system of highway building throughout the state covering the main trunk lines from east to west, the roads between the principal cities and those radiating from these main thoroughfares. This plan has been closely adhered to and a large percentage of the construction completed. The general system as adopted by MacAdam has been largely employed. The roads built in Palmer are typical of those constructed in other sections of the Commonwealth. The first piece of state road built in Palmer was of poor rock. Where the foundation was top rock. Telford was used, where the good rock was put into a depth of about six inches. No. 1 stone was first used and when firmly rolled No. 2 was spread over it and a final surface of dust spread over all, wet and thoroughly rolled. This is known as water-bound macadam and makes a good surface for ordinary traffic with horse-drawn vehicles.

This method, while sufficient 20 years ago, was rendered practically useless by the advent of high-power automobiles which sweep the top dressing from the surface as rapidly as it can be replaced; the rock is soon loosened by being deprived of their binding constituents, and large holes result. New problems demanded new methods, and as a result of research and experiment bituminous surfacing is in vogue at the present time.

Three methods are employed in the application of bituminous products to the highway. The mixing method, the penetration method and the surface application. The penetration method, most used in this state, is the one employed in the construction and resurfacing of the pullman roads. In the resurfacing

Obtrusive Sarah

"My goodness!" said everybody when Sarah Seaneey made her appearance at the summer resort hotel. People had said "My goodness!" at Sarah Seaneey so many times in her eighteen years of existence that she had grown used to the remark. The only real bright spot in the situation was that her parents had not named her Lily or nicknamed her "Tiny" in her helpless infancy.

Sarah was large of bone and nearly six feet tall. It was her amazing length and broadness and massiveness which startled people into alarmed comment. In spite of her prominent cheekbones and expansive mouth, there was an attractiveness about Sarah's face. It may have been its healthy freshness and the brightness of her eyes, which held a perpetual laugh at the world in general. It took the older people to appreciate this, for those of her own age looked at Sarah and, because she was so different from the stock pattern, declared she was impossible.

At the dances the college boys circled widely around Sarah and picked out the girls whose heads came only to their shoulders. Youthful masculinity is strong on the clinging vine idea. Sarah, in her yards and yards of expensive lingerie gown, sat out the waltzes and two-steps beside her mother, beaming pleasantly and apparently enjoying herself hugely. The girls took this as a direct affront. They said Sarah was "so masculine."

Further, she had an irritating habit of going on long walks by herself and returning with armfuls of wild field flowers and a cheerful countenance. Her practical ostracism seemed not to make the remotest impression upon her.

Lancy Cobb, the only young man whose eyes were not on a lower level than Sarah's, tried to break the boycott. When the girls set their faces against asking her to the beach picnic he was indignant and tried to make it up to Sarah by talking to her. She regarded him interestedly, smiled a little and did not seem impressed. But she was very pleasant to Lancy after that.

"I like that girl!" he told the others. "Why don't you drag her in instead of shoving her?"

Agnes Simmons set her rosebud mouth in a straight line at this. Agnes was built on the Dresden china pattern and Lancy had been her special property. She was dainty and fragile enough to allure mightily and this revelation of the unexpected tangents taken by men both surprised and angered her. The anger was all directed at Sarah Seaneey.

Agnes was roused to active defense late one evening when the crowd, wandering out on the end of the pier after the dance, found Sarah Seaneey occupying the best bench alone and gazing appreciatively at the big, full moon shining across the lake. She spoke to the others quite as though they were her dearest friends, instead of persons who had perpetually snubbed her.

"Isn't the water lovely with that shimmer upon it?" she asked.

"Great!" agreed Lancy Cobb, sitting down on the bench beside her.

"If you like it so well," Agnes Simmons said to Sarah, with instant rebellion in her heart, "why don't you take a moonlight swim?"

Agnes could swim a half mile and was proud of it.

Sarah smiled at Agnes silently. She was on her feet by now, for she would not seem to appropriate Lancy. "Oh, I don't know," she answered, meditatively watching the glistening waves.

"Go on!" Agnes taunted sweetly. She might have been lovingly urging Sarah to help herself to chocolate. "I dare you to jump in—now!"

A little silence fell on the rest. Sarah, like those who had danced, was clad in expensive and fragile clothes. She gave Agnes a long look. A little of her happy expression faded as she understood the antagonistic gaze that was fixed upon her.

"Would you do it?" she asked quietly.

Agnes laughed. "Oh, I'm not afraid of the water," she said, with infinite condescension. "I swim, you know. I didn't think you were afraid—you're so big!"

A long arm shot out from Sarah's side and twined about the slender form of Agnes Simmons and then with a great plunge Sarah Seaneey dropped from the end of the pier, taking her tormentor with her. With an inarticulate cry, Lancy Cobb jumped after them.

As he dragged himself and Sarah, dripping and strangling, to shore he pushed the hair back anxiously from her face. She laughed.

"I'm all right!" she gasped. "But I had to sink, for I can't swim a stroke, you know!"

"Then, why—" began Lancy Cobb, in horror.

"She dared me," explained Sarah, placidly wringing out her skirts. "I knew you'd save me!" Then she laughed out loud as she watched Agnes Simmons scrambling up the side of the pier. "I think she was surprised," she added, comfortably.

"You're all right!" broke out Lancy Cobb in heartfelt admiration as he marched her toward the hotel.

The trouble with the harem skirt it will bag at the knees.

LYNDE & GOULD'S UNUSUAL OFFER.

"It isn't often that we have faith enough in the medicine put up by other people to be willing to offer to refund the money if it does not cure," said Lynde & Gould to a Palmer Journal man who dropped into their store, "but we are glad to sell Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia on that basis."

"The Dr. Howard Company, in order to get a quick introductory sale, authorizes us to sell their regular fifty cent bottles at half price, 25 cents, and, although we have sold a lot of it, and have guaranteed every package, not one has been brought back as unsatisfactory."

"We are still selling the specific at half price, although we cannot tell how long we shall be able to do so, and anyone who is subject to constipation, sick headache, dizziness, liver trouble, indigestion or a general played-out condition, ought to take advantage of this chance. You can tell your readers that if they are not satisfied with the specific they can come right back to our store and we will cheerfully refund their money."

Buttermilk as a Valuable Food.
The nutritive value of milk, as compared with buttermilk is not near so great as some appear to think. It is about as 20 to 18. You get about as many energy units out of a pint and a quarter of buttermilk as you do out of one pint of sweet milk. Besides, the bacteria of typhoid tend to die out in buttermilk because of its acidity.

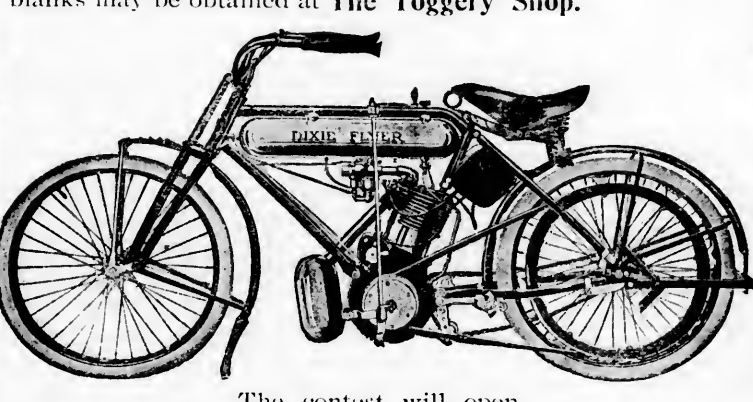

The most common cause of insomnia is disorders of the stomach. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets correct these disorders and enable you to sleep. For sale by all dealers.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

ELIMINATES MANY KITCHEN TROUBLES.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.
William Shakespeare, it may be, had not cooking in mind, when he set his witches chanting:

"Double double toil and trouble!
Fire burn and caldron bubble."

Nevertheless, the fact remains that the burning fire, the bubbling caldron are sources of double trouble to womenkind. Therefore, they should rise up and call blessed M. Soyer's system of paper bag cooking, which has come newly to their help. It saves the babbings of the caldron, and thereby the troubles of the cook. This in many, many ways. Perhaps the most instantly apparent one is—the fact that there is no caldron to be washed or scoured when the flesh is wearied.

So, also, are the roasting pans and those for frying, likewise the broiler. Paper bags can do the work better—and be thrown away when they have served their turn.

But do not make the mistake of taking it for an accomplished cook. It is a help toward helping yourself, nothing more.

Beef or Veal Loaf.—To each pound of raw minced lean meat, add an ounce of finely minced suet, half a small minced onion, a dust of pepper, a pinch of salt mixed through a scant spoonful of flour, and a light sprinkle of powdered herbs. Mix the seasoning well through the meat, shape it into a flat, round cake, rub butter plentifully on the outside, put into a greased paper bag, seal and bake in a hot oven, allowing fifteen minutes to the pound. A few slices of tomato put in the bag helps to make tasty gravy. A spoonful of tomato catsup may be used instead.

Baked Onions.—Parboil for fifteen minutes Spanish or Bermuda onions, chill them in cold water, then cut a Y out of the hearts. Fill the space with butter, after dusting it well with salt and pepper, put the onions in a bag with a lump of butter and a very little water, seal and cook twenty minutes in a hot oven, or thirty minutes in a very moderate one.
(Copyright, 1911, by the Associated Literary Press.)

PAPER BAG COOKED BREAKFAST DISHES.

By Nicholas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Eggs and Tomatoes.—Butter a bag thickly, put into it half a pint of tomato catsup and butter the size of a walnut. Cook in hot oven ten minutes. Cut a square from the center of the bag, break into it, one at a time, four eggs. Cook for three or four minutes. Dish up. Cut away all the top of the bag and serve.

Kipperd Mackerel with Fine Herbs.—Cut salt mackerel into fillets, lay them in a deep earthen dish, and cover with boiling water. Leave in water half a minute. Take out, wipe dry, dust with coarse black pepper, and put on top of each fillet half a teaspoonful of minced parsley, and chives of onion, and a bit of butter the size of a small walnut. Grease a bag well, put in the fillets, seal, and cook for twenty minutes in a hot oven. Serve hot, with brown bread and butter.

Marechal of Lobster and Eggs.—Take the white and claw meat of a lobster, chop it small and set aside. Rub the brown meat smooth in a basin with a bit of butter and a good dust of white pepper. Add gradually half a bottle of tomato catsup. Work all well together. Put into a bag four slices of bacon. Do not seal the bag. Cook the bacon four minutes, then take out, and put in the lobster and tomato mixture, seal and cook for eight minutes. Cut open the bag on top, put in the white meat, and make hot for four or five minutes. Lower the gas very much for this last cooking—the white meat must only get very hot, as cooking toughens it. Serve in a very hot dish, garnished with the slices of bacon.

Eggs a la Tripe.—Rub together an ounce of butter and an ounce of flour, cook smooth in half a pint of milk which has been flavoured lightly with mace. Add to it two large thinly-sliced onions, cooked in a bag with a little butter, and six hard-boiled eggs cut in halves lengthwise. Pour gently into a well-greased double bag, and make very hot in the oven for ten minutes. Serve as quickly as possible, on a very hot dish.

Eggs on Strassburg Crotons.—Cut the crust from four even-sized squares of stale bread, butter them thinly, dust lightly with pepper, and spread with a layer of foie gras. Cook for five minutes inside a well-greased bag, then cut open the bag and break an egg on each square of bread. Dust the eggs on top with pepper and a very little salt and cook for another four minutes. Serve immediately on a very hot dish.

Eggs a la Bechamel.—Cut four hard-boiled eggs in halves lengthwise, put them into a thickly greased bag with a gill of cream, salt and pepper to taste, and a tiny dust of powdered mace. Cook five minutes in a moderate oven, and serve hot on squares of lightly buttered toast.

How Roads Are Built.

ing the macadam is first picked up by a steam roller, then scarified by the use of a half-ton harrow, then by using a one-horse weeder the stones are brought to the top, the road graded and lined up and it is then ready for the oil. The preparation put on is known as Asphalt A—90 per cent asphalt and 10 per cent oil. This is heated to a point of 250 degrees and the application is made by a spraying machine, the oil striking the rock at a velocity of 70 or 80 lbs. pressure to the square inch. A light coating of gravel is then put on and the whole surface rolled. Before putting on the second application the gravel is carefully swept from the surface, care being taken that no pockets remain. Two 1 gallon coats are usually applied and then the top thoroughly covered with gravel and the ingredients allowed to mix. The road is carefully watched and if the oil works to the surface more gravel is applied until the oil has absorbed all it will. The road is then allowed to work itself clear of the gravel and a hard bituminous surface results. Through the heated term and in the fall and spring gravel is occasionally spread on the surface to prevent its picking up under the unusual conditions. The cost of oiling by this method varies from 10 to 60 cents per square yard. On some roads a top dressing of pea stone is used instead of gravel; this gives a harder, though more expensive surface.

It is unsafe to leave an oil road for any length of time without oversight. No one has yet devised a method by which the section of an automobile driven at 70 miles per hour can be measured, or how much cohesive force is required to resist the destructive power of the machine. This cost of maintenance is one of the present day road problems. Several things have been found necessary in successful road construction that apply to town as well as state oversight.

First—"The elimination of politics in the management of public roads."

Second—"The use of skilled supervisors in their management."

Third—"Continuous and systematic repair."

Fourth—"The classification of all roads according to their traffic."

The first has to do with the election of supervisors and the selection of men employed. The second relates to the scarcity of men who are competent to handle large jobs and are abreast of the times. The third is concerned in the general lack of knowledge of the cause and remedy in road maintenance. While the fourth deals with the large problems that confront towns like Palmer with a large mileage of highway, which also embraces many trunk lines. It is possible to get the cost of highway construction too high. Some years ago trap rock was put on to a depth of 6 or 8 inches. To-day this is believed to be a needless waste. The wear comes on the top surface and not on the foundation. Four inches of trap rock on a firm gravel foundation is thought to be sufficient when covered with a bituminous top dressing. Where more foundation is needed use cheaper material. Highway building in this country is but in its infancy. New problems are constantly demanding new solutions and the final result will only be reached when the demand for better roads ceases.

The speaker then alluded to the large appropriations being made through the country for highway construction, which vary from 50 millions in New York and Pennsylvania to one million in New Hampshire. The improvement along the route of the state highway was then touched upon, the improved slopes, planting of trees and general care of the road sides.

For applying highway conditions to the town of Palmer the speaker said, "Palmer has about 150 miles of highway. Of this practically 11 miles has been taken over by the state and is being maintained by the highway commission. We have in addition about five miles of permanent road built by the town. Of the balance, 15 miles may be considered as part of the trunk lines connecting with other towns or the villages. This leaves about 120 miles of country roads and village streets to be cared for. It must be admitted that $40 is not a large amount to be expended upon a mile of roadway annually, unless it be supplemented by more than ordinary skill. From the annual appropriation comes the salary of the highway surveyor, which varies according to his zeal in execution.

To get results several things are necessary. First—Up-to-date methods must be employed. There is no law which compels a man to use a road machine or split-log drag rather than hoe or shovel. Only a determination to get results and save the people's money lead him to do this. Second—Politics must be eliminated. This is a mere difficult matter. The local surveyor suffers in competition with the contractor both in the amount and quality of the work he is able to get done, and is unable to compete in behalf of the town for state work to be done in his own district.

Third—There is usually no definite plan of road construction that is adhered to for any definite period. If the voters are prompted to make a necessary appropriation for highways one year, the next may see this policy abandoned and much of the benefit accruing from the previous good work destroyed. Many towns see this and follow out the general plan of the state authorities and harden their main thoroughfares. In village centers there is a call for paved or oiled macadam roads; on connecting lines this is unnecessary, oiled gravel or oil and sand construction being used according to the availability of the material. Palmer has a section of oiled gravel road which is said to be in excellent condition and entirely satisfactory. There is some opposition to building a road for the use of automobilists that come from other sections. One fact however remains, the automobile has come to stay and the town that recognizes this fact will soonest receive the benefit of the inter-state traffic. Some voters have realized that good roads mean town advancement and have bonded the town to construct permanent roadway. The amount saved annually in repairs pays the interest and before the road needs extraordinary care the bonds have been paid and the town has reaped the benefit.

But someone says, "How shall we treat the country road? Water being an important factor in their destruction, the gutter proposition is one that demands serious consideration. The material of which these roads is formed is light, easily moved and easily rutted. When softened by rain, the wheels sink into the soft earth to the utmost limit.

How shall these roads be treated? When the frost is out of the ground, with the scraper get the gutters down where they belong and crown the road, supplying fresh gravel where needed. After the first rain have a man with a leveller or split-log drag smooth over the surface, continuing this process monthly or oftener if necessary and at the end of 10 months the result will be surprising both in the good results and smallness of cost. This process can be followed to excellent advantage in streets like Squier, Knox, Pleasant and Converse. The crying need in Palmer to-day is for gutters: you cannot drain a road whose gutters are three inches above its crown. With this problem solved we should have a better North Main street, a better Park street, and run less danger of being submerged in Pleasant street. Palmer has expended a large sum for sewers. Why not let the water run in them instead of the middle of the highway?

"I believe a wonderful change would come over our town if for five years we could have an up-to-date system of highway improvement. We are splendidly situated for a system of good roads, the foundation is excellent, material easy to obtain, shipping facilities the best, and we are geographically so situated as to reap every benefit coming from without. Modern highways, however, are not built in a haphazard fashion. Machine work is absolutely necessary. The scraper, the drag, the leveller and steam roller are all essential parts of the highway surveyor's equipment. Rust should never gather upon the highway machinery. A bright road scraper means good roads and good roads mean a live town.

A GREAT DISCOVERY.

Certain Ingredients That Really Promote Hair Growth When Properly Combined.

Resorcin is one of the most effective germ destroyers ever discovered by science, and in connection with Beta Naphthol, which is both germicidal and antiseptic, a combination is formed which destroys the germs which rob the hair of its natural nourishment, and also creates a clean, healthy condition of the scalp, which prevents the development of new germs.

Pilocarpin, although not a coloring matter or dye, is a well-known ingredient for restoring the hair to its natural color, when the loss of hair has been caused by a disease of the scalp. These ingredients in proper combination, with alcohol added as a stimulant and for its well-defined nourishing properties, perfect perhaps the most effective remedy that is known for scalp and hair troubles.

We have a remedy which is chiefly composed of these ingredients, in combination with other extremely valuable medicinal agents. We guarantee it to positively cure dandruff and to grow hair, even though the scalp in spots is bare of hair. If there is any vitality left in the roots, it will positively cure baldness, or we will refund your money. If the scalp has a glazed, shiny appearance, it's an indication that baldness is permanent, but in other instances we believe baldness is curable.

We want every one troubled with scalp disease or loss of hair to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. If it does not cure dandruff and grow hair to the satisfaction of the user, we will without question or quibble return every cent paid for it. We print this guarantee on every bottle. It has effected a positive cure in 93% of cases where put to a practical test.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is entirely unlike, and we think, in every particular, better than anything else we know of for the purpose for which it is prescribed. We urge you to try this preparation at our entire risk. Certainly we know of no better guarantee to give you. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies only at our store—The Rexall Store.

PALMER NEWS.

For Town Officers.

New Names Suggested For Some of the Offices to be Filled.

There seems to be little visible action regarding the selection of town officers at the caucuses next week, although a few names have been heard recently. The principal activity seems to be in the choice of candidates for license commissioners. In addition to the present board, all of whom will probably be in the field, John Fay has decided to again be a candidate and Harry Haley has also decided to run. Harry C. Ellithorpe will be a candidate for the office of selectman, at the request of a number of people. A petition was in circulation yesterday for Henry G. Loomis, but without his knowledge or consent. Two new names are W. E. McDonald and D. L. Bodfish. Both have been and are close students of town affairs, both have served the town in various capacities, and can be depended upon to give the town painstaking service if elected. Neither is seeking the office, but both are understood to be willing to serve the town if desired. C. T. Brainerd will again be a candidate for highway surveyor, but whether there will be others than Mr. McKelligott, the present incumbent, is not known. Patrick Crowley has expressed a wish to succeed himself as overseer of the poor. While it is not to be expected that these are all the new names which will appear on the official ballot as finally made up, the others have not yet been made public.

Caucuses Next Week.

Republican Ticket Closes To-night. Democratic To-morrow Night.

The caucuses for the nomination of town officials are to be held next week, that of the Republicans in the town hall at Four Corners on Monday evening at 7.30, and that of the Democrats in St. Mary's Temperance society's hall in Thorndike on Tuesday evening.

The Democratic committee have adopted the same rules for placing names on the ballots which have been in force for some time. Any name which is endorsed by five voters of the town will be placed on either ballot. The Republican committee has set this evening as the time limit on petitions, and will meet in the office of E. E. Hobson to prepare the ballot, and will receive names up to 8 o'clock. The names for the Democratic ballot must be in the hands of some member of that town committee by 8 o'clock to-morrow night.

Palmer Pool Team Wins.

Ware Aggregation Beaten Last Evening By Sixteen Balls.

The third of the series of pool games between teams representing the Palmer Business and Social club and the Ware Masonic club was played in Ware last evening, and both games were won by Palmer, Walker defeating Tucker by one ball and Holden winning over Wood with a margin of 15. This makes four out of six games won by Palmer, but as the count is by balls there are still five behind. A number of Palmer club members accompanied the team.

Are Still Champions.

Barslow and Shearer Still Hold Palmer Bowling Supremacy.

Barslow and Shearer, who last week issued a challenge to any Palmer bowlers for a ten-string match, were taken on Tuesday evening by Mitchell and Loring. The match was close and exciting, but the challengers maintained their claims and won by a total score of 1861 to 1798. Barslow was high single with 109, and he was also high total with 550.

Can We Talk With You Concerning a New Kitchen Range?

We are making a special drive on

Crawford Ranges

We are showing six different styles.

A splendid and unique feature of the Fortress Crawford, is the ash hod in place of an ash pan, resulting in less dirt and dust than with the old style ash pan. The ashes are shaken directly into the hod which is just below the fire pot.

The Crawford Heat Indicator is a wonderful help in cooking. It tells the oven heat exactly; guessing is not necessary.

The single damper does the work of two ordinary dampers and does it better.

A simmering cover is used for slow cooking.

If you do not need one to-day we will be pleased to have you tell us what sort of a range you now have, and it will cost nothing but your time to inspect the Crawford line. We are glad to show the Crawford and its good points.

The Spirit of Dawn

By Martha McCulloch-Williams

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

Blood lines are far-flung. The pull of them had brought Sara from the western range, Elizabeth from remote Texas, back to a little New England village, the home town of their joint great-grandfather. The charm of it laid instant hold on them—they loved the staunch white houses, green-shuttered and set about with immemorial elms, the broad streets, the orderly elegance, the quiet of everything.

Most of all they loved Great-Aunt Martha, mistress of the old homestead. She made them welcome with a certain prim tenderness that went straight to their bubbling hearts. Notwithstanding, upon the third morning after arrival, Elizabeth, who was irrepresible, woke Sara with an impatient shake, saying:

"Think! Hard! What shall we, what can we do? We simply must do something."

"What thing needs doing?" Sara grumbled sleepily.

Elizabeth shook her again. "Bringing this place to life," she said. "It died at least a hundred years ago—don't you think it has waited long enough for resurrection?"

"I'll tell you—after I've dreamed about it," Sara mumbled, sinking back on her pillow.

Elizabeth shook her fist at her, but did not further disturb her. Instead, she hurried on her foot, tiptoed downstairs, and the back door cautiously slid into the garden, the loveliest garden, in full late June bloom, overrun with spice pinks, honeysuckle, sweet Betsys and hundred-leaf roses.

Elizabeth's roses matched exactly the pink of the roses—her hair, black and silky, was braided tightly behind each ear. It was her only head-covering, so as she stood slim and virginal among the flowers at sunrise she looked the very incarnation of youth.

It was a sight to make any man's heart beat, let alone that of a young fellow, and an artist, intoxicated with the joy of the morning. Since the earliest dawn Phil Craig had been sauntering through the least frequented ways, peering into gardens, noting the creeping light, the melting shadows, now and again sketching roughly some bit that appealed especially. He had come to the village, from years of study abroad, to rest, he had told himself, not to work—yet here was work laying hold on him in the very outset.

He stood ambushed in the shade of a thick hawthorn. Elizabeth did not see him until she turned half about, he called hushedly: "Be still! Please! Just a minute more!" his fingers flying as he spoke. As he caught her startled look, he explained: "You are the Soul of Dawn! I want to make you immortal."

That was the beginning. Elizabeth did not tell it, even to Sara. Instead, she was gracefully, and graciously distant, when the next afternoon Phil managed to have himself fetched to the house and be properly presented. His eyes twinkled—otherwise he was as proper as she. But when they walked out in company with Sara and young Mason, his social sponsor, to view the garden beauties, he half-whispered: "You are the Soul of Dawn—and something more."

After that, Old Town village came to life with a vengeance. Phil did the most of it, fetching in autos, other young men, indeed all manner of worldly things. He refused to set up a studio, but now and again felt furiously to work under shade of a white umbrella. He made studies of all the old gardens round about, of orchard nooks, of lichened stone walls, with a dapple of shine and shadow playing upon them.

Never by any chance did Elizabeth figure in the studies. Yet she knew he made pictures of her. After a little the knowledge fretted her. Her father would not like it—of that she was sure. Neither would Billy Van. It was all settled that she was to marry Billy, after they were both grown up. Her father thought her hardly more than a baby at nineteen—and Billy's parent had the same opinion regarding a lad of two-and-twenty.

Sara knew all about Billy, save and except his name. Sara paused her lips comically over Craig's evident enrapture—and once said, shutting one eye: "If there was a wireless station handy I'd sent a flash to that young man down in Texas."

But she was a good fellow—much too good to spoil sport. Elizabeth meant it all for no more than sport until, all at once, with no word of warning, Billy came to Old Town.

"Couldn't help it—with home so hot, and all the things you told of going on up here," he explained. "Hay rides and boat rides, and auto rides and everything. Gee! I felt I must get into the game."

"You'll have no trouble whatever, honey," Sara said, coming up behind Billy and Elizabeth. "I'm nobody but Sara," she went on. "Let me recommend myself, though, as the latest improved variety of gooseberry. I can look 'bless you, my children,' in three languages, and seven ways at once. And you'll need to bless me—but for my vigilance Elizabeth would have been run away with long ago."

"I'd say it—even without that," Billy answered gallantly, holding both Sara's hands and looking down into her eyes. They were blue eyes, but snappy for all that. They returned his gaze steadily until Sara felt moved to say:

"You don't look Texas—not the least bit—but, then, neither does Elizabeth."

"Do not forgive us! Nobody can quite look Texas—it's the finest state anywhere," Billy answered, loyally. "But we do the best we can."

A week showed that Billy could, and did, fit in beautifully. Craig, even, could not resist him after the first two hours. Billy had a way with him, as insinuating as his gentle, slurring drawl; moreover, he was gallant, also a beautiful spender, and plentifully supplied with wherewithal to spend. His spending was without ostentation, yet he managed somehow to pay always a little more than his share.

Craig swore at him inwardly over the fact. Aloud it was quite impossible.

Elizabeth exulted in Billy—as a comrade, though, not a possession. She had been too happy to think beyond the moment—she was happy still, but with underneath a sense of disquiet. Something surprised now and then, in Craig's eyes, some inflection of his voice when he was off guard, formed the roots of the disquiet. Dimly she understood what she had come to mean to him—as him she felt that he ought to know the truth—yet she would rather die than tell him.

Thus, uneasy and perplexed, she turned instinctively to the thought of Sara. Perhaps, if Sara tried, she could make Craig forget—Elizabeth had a faith simply boundless in her cousin. A level head had Sara—with her, to will was to do. Elizabeth hoped she might will to captivate Craig—if it were put upon the ground of cousinly succor.

When woman disposes man sometimes proposes. At the end of a fortnight Billy's mind was made up. He chuckled a bit over the final making up, saying to his cigar: "We'll go home to get married—all of us—only thing to do—it'll pacify the judge and Marse Willyum."

Marse Willyum was his father, the judge, Elizabeth's. After his disrespectful comment upon them, Billy strolled over to the Howland place, smiling his most innocent smile.

He found things taking place there—things unusual. In the wide dim parlor rarely opened, Craig had set up a picture nearly complete. The Spirit of Dawn—Elizabeth to the life, but Elizabeth transfigured by love and the morning. Billy looked at the picture, his eyes dimming the least bit. Then he laid a hand on Craig's arm, saying: "I must have that."

Craig shook his head—he dared not speak. Billy went on: "I'll pay you a price for it. You can't deny I have the right to it."

"I won't sell it," Craig said curtly. "Even if it were finished, nobody could buy it."

"Then give it to me," Billy persisted.

Craig glared at him—Billy smiled infantinely. "As a wedding present, you know," he went on. You oughtn't to grudge it to me and—Sara," striding to that young woman, and slipping his arm about her waist. "I mean to say I'd give you the original," he added. "But I really reckon she isn't mine to give."

"Shut up! And come out on the porch," Sara interrupted, shaking her head at Billy. "Don't you see those two can't speak until they catch breath?"

"Just as you say, boss," Billy answered meekly, but chuckling hard. Over his shoulder he saw Craig and Elizabeth locked tight in each other's arms.

Films of New York.

With fifteen manufacturers of motion pictures actively engaged in business in New York, it remained for a Philadelphia concern to send a troupe to the city to photograph bits of New York scenes in response to the demand from the out-of-town exhibitors. New York sights are so familiar to New Yorkers that they fail to realize that the man in Grand Island, Neb., never has seen the famous skyline or the East River bridges, so the troupe from Philadelphia is just now adding comedy to the sights, to the huge delight of the small boys, who are quick to recognize their friends from the "movies" in flesh and blood.

Naturally.

"Is there any uplift about this new writer?"

"You bet there is! He writes aviation stories."

A Hair's Breadth.

A "hair's breadth" is 17-10,000 of an inch. For the purpose of such fine and delicate measurement tool makers use what is called a micrometer caliper. The hair's breadth is something that has to be taken into consideration in the manufacture of a thousand and one things in the machine maker's art. Close calculation of this sort must be done on the doors of bank vaults, for example, where every part must fit to the nicest degree.—Harper's Weekly.

AVOID HARSH DRUGS.

Many Cathartics Tend to Cause Injury to the Bowels.

If you are subject to constipation, you should avoid strong drugs and cathartics. They only give temporary relief and their reaction is harmful and sometimes more annoying than constipation. They in no way effect a cure and their tendency is to weaken the already weak organs with which they come in contact.

We honestly believe that we have the best constipation treatment ever devised. Our faith in it is so strong that we sell it on the positive guarantee that it shall not cost the user a cent if it does not give entire satisfaction and completely remedy constipation. This preparation is called Rexall.

Orderlies. These are prompt, soothing, and most effective in action. They are made of a recent chemical discovery. Their principal ingredient is odorless, tasteless, and colorless. Combined with other well-known ingredients, long established for their usefulness in the treatment of constipation, it forms a tablet which is eaten just like candy. They may be taken at any time, either day or night, without fear of their causing any inconvenience whatever. They do not gripe, purge, nor cause nausea. They act without causing any pain or excessive looseness of the bowels. They are ideal for children, weak, delicate persons, and aged people, as well as for the most hearty person.

They come in three size packages, 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents; 80 tablets, 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain them only at our store—The Rexall Store.

THREE RIVERS. WANT FIRE PROTECTION.

Mill Will Furnish Water If Pipes Are Laid.

The inhabitants of Three Rivers who are property holders on the east side of the village are making an earnest effort to obtain better fire protection. A committee has been appointed who are at work on the matter with good success thus far. They are looking up the valuation of the property in order to decide how much per thousand it will be necessary to subscribe in order to raise the estimated $3500 necessary to lay a line of pipes and set a number of hydrants along Main street. These would give protection to the side streets as they are short and most of the buildings on them could easily be reached by a line of hose from the Main street hydrants.

The streets west of the river are well protected, being piped for fire protection and a necessary amount of hydrants having been placed. These are served by the pump in the Palmer Mill in case of fire, and furnish ample protection for the property holders. The mill company is understood to be willing to furnish this power when necessary in any part of the village.

The people in Three Rivers do not intend to ask the town to help in this matter, but will try to raise the necessary amount by subscription among the property owners. In the past there was some talk of making Three Rivers a fire district, but it was found impossible to do it. Whether it would be possible now or not is unknown, but evidently there is no intention of trying to do so. Frequent meetings are being held among those interested, and a statement of results will be made as soon as possible.

Girls

Read About These Three Girls. How Sick They Were and How Their Health Was Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Appleton, Wis.—"I take pleasure in writing you an account of my sickness. I told a friend of mine how I felt and she said I had female trouble and advised me to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as she had taken it herself for the same trouble with wonderful results. I had been sick for two years and overworked myself, and had such bad feelings every month that I could hardly walk for pain. I was very nervous and easily tired out and could not sleep nights. I had dizzy spells, and pimples came on my face. But I have taken your Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has restored my health. I think it is the best medicine in existence."—Miss CECILIA M. BAUER, 1161 Laverne St., Appleton, Wis.

A SCHOOL TEACHER'S GRATITUDE:

Geneva, Iowa.—"I have been teaching school for some years and I have neglected my health because I was too busy with my work to attend to myself properly. I suffered greatly every month and was on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

"I wrote to you about my condition and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the Blood Purifier as you recommended. These remedies have done wonders for me and I can highly and widely recommend them to every suffering woman."—Miss MINNIE SHAVER, R. F. D. No. 1, Geneva, Iowa, c/o Sam Erickson.

A COLORADO GIRL'S CASE:

Montrose, Col.—"I was troubled very much with irregular periods. Sometimes two months would elapse. I suffered severe headache, was weak and nervous, could eat scarcely anything.

"I took both Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier and the result was wonderful. I feel like another person.

"I think your remedies are the best on earth and cannot express my thankfulness to you for what they have done to me. I help my neighbors when they are sick, and I shall always recommend your medicines."—Miss ELLA McCANDLESS, Montrose, Col.

Is it not reasonable to suppose that a medicine that did so much for these girls will benefit any other girl who is suffering with the same troubles?

Does it not seem the only sensible thing to give such a medicine at least a trial? You may be sure that it can do you no harm, and there are lots of proof that it will do you much good.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine, made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health. All these testimonials are guaranteed genuine and truthful. The original of each came to us entirely unsolicited. They are sincere expressions of gratitude for actual benefits received from the medicine.

THE BUNGALOW SHOP.

Is Meeting With Increased Favor and Patronage Daily.

The restaurant connected with Miss Holmes' "Bungalow Shop" will be opened tomorrow with a dinner at noon, and will be in charge of a competent chef thereafter. The regular dinner will be at noon, but arrangements may be made for banquets and more modest entertainment at any hour. The dining and serving rooms are on the second floor, and the kitchen is in the basement.

The shop, which was opened two weeks ago, is meeting with marked success and fills a long-felt want, the class of goods being somewhat different from that in other stores in town. The building is well situated for the accommodation of home and out-of-town patrons, and is fine and roomy. Excellent taste is displayed in all its appointments. The furnishings are on the arts and crafts line, the chairs and small round tables being of dark oak; the dishes are of English hotel ware and very pretty; those used for serving hot chocolate are particularly artistic. Homemade bread, cake, pies, etc., are on sale, and arrangements have been made with St. Clair of Boston for the supply of French candies, which will be strictly fresh always. Lower-priced, but pure candy from Kibbe's, is also sold. Already molasses candy, coconut cakes and corn-balls have become very popular with young and old. Ice cream will soon be on sale.

The circulating library is another feature which people are taking advantage of. There are now about 100 volumes, and as new books are published they will be added and there will be more than one copy of each book for which there is a demand. The library system is the same as at Johnson's bookstore, Springfield.

A line of novelties in leather appeals to those who desire useful as well as beautiful things, and a choice selection of post-cards includes the Murillo Madonnas.

There will be special decorations for special days. This week cabins, Continental hats, hatches and cherries are displayed in honor of Washington's Birthday. Among other things, small pots of shamrock will help to celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

Serious Accident Narrowly Averted.

What might have been a serious accident was narrowly averted last Saturday at 12:45, when the electric car due in Monson came very near colliding with a team owned by George Colburn and his daughter, Greta, were driving up Academy hill when the horse became frightened and started to run and ran down the hill, throwing itself directly on the track. The motorman stopped the car in sufficient time to prevent a collision and he and the conductor jumped and held the horse down until he could be unhitched from the buggy. The only damage was the breaking of the harness although both Mr. Colburn and his daughter were badly frightened but were uninjured.

BETTER THAN BOOK LEARNING

Kentucky Mountaineer Preferred as Teacher Because He Could Lick Biggest Boy in School.

The colonel had gone up into the Kentucky mountains from the blue grass in command of a sawmill, and as soon as he had mobilized his forces in that field he began to maneuver in the matter of improving the people about his camp. What they needed most were better schools and he determined to take a hand in the selection of a proper teacher. To this end he called in one from his own section who had a college education, but no mountain experience. When he proposed this blue grass nurtured young man to the mountaineer trustees there was unanimous opposition in favor of one of their own kind, who had been teaching the school for some time, though his education was of the most limited kind.

"But," argued the colonel, "your man doesn't have the first rudiments of an education and the pupils might as well have no teacher at all."

"He's done better than anybody else ever done, colonel," replied the chairman of the board.

"That may be, but none of them has been educated properly to teach. My man has been through college and is superior to any teacher in the county."

The chairman didn't want any trouble with the colonel, nor did he want to yield his point.

"Mebbe he's jist what you say he is, colonel," he said persuasively, "and it ain't fer us to doubt that he has a powerful sight of book larnin', but, colonel, we have saw him and we have saw our man, and I wanter say fer this board of trustees that your man can't lick the biggest boy in school and our'n kin, and that counts for a heap sight more in this neck uv woods than book larnin'."

The colonel's candidate retired to the blue grass whence he came.

Smoke or Ride, Which?

In the early days of the London, Brighton & South Coast Railway the regulations against smoking were strictly enforced. The Mechanics' Magazine of September, 1842, records that "a foreign gentleman was recently smoking a cigar in a train coming from Brighton to London. The guard warned him the practice was not allowed. Nevertheless, he continued to smoke, and finished his cigar. At the next station he was asked for his ticket and ordered out of the coupe; and the guard, addressing one of the officers on the platform, warned him that that person was not to be allowed to proceed to London by any train that night. So there he was left."—London Chronicle.

FEMALE DIVERS OF JAPAN

Women Who Begin at 13 to Search for Pearls in the Coast Waters.

The pearl divers of Japan are women. Along the coast of the Bay of Ago and the Bay of Kokasho the thirteen and fourteen-year-old girls, after they have finished their primary school work, go to sea and learn to dive.

They are in the water and learn to swim almost from babyhood and spend most of their time in the water except in the coldest season, from the end of December to the beginning of February. Even during the most inclement of seasons they sometimes dive for pearls.

They wear a special dress, white underwear and the hair twisted up into a hard knot. The eyes are protected by glasses to prevent the entrance of water. Tubs are suspended from the waist. A boat in command of a man is assigned to every five or ten women divers to carry them to and from the fishing grounds.

When the divers arrive on the grounds they leap into the water at once and begin to gather oysters at the bottom. The oysters are dropped into tubs suspended from their waists. When the vessels are filled the divers are raised to the surface and jump into the boats. They dive to a depth of from five to thirty fathoms without any special apparatus and retain their breath from one to three minutes.

Their ages vary from thirteen to forty years and between twenty-five and thirty-five they are at their prime.

Mrs. Joseph Fisher, 88 South Main St., Palmer, Mass., says: "I was subject to dizzy and nervous spells and often my back and head ached intensely, showing that my kidneys were disordered. I also had difficulty with the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills, which I obtained at Lynde and Gould's Drug Store, soon restored me to good health and at that time I publicly endorsed them. I take pleasure at the present time in confirming my former statement."

WHEN CARVING WAS AN ART

In Old Days the Slicing Was Suited to the Importance of the Guest.

Carving was once a serious thing. The sixteenth century carver was a professional. He had to make the joint fit the guest. The size of his slices was the thing. Then he had to know his guests and cut accordingly.

A lord, for instance, at the table, and a pike was dished up whole. Smaller fry, and the pike came on in slices. The same procedure with pig. The rank of the diners decided whether it should appear at table in gold leaf or naked, whole or sliced. With bread, too, there was a difference.

New or three days old baked was at the discretion of the carver as he sized up the visitors. And as for the apportioning of the tidbits according to precedence there was no end. The old-time carver in fact was born and then made.

The eighteenth century was the day of the carving master. He taught hostesses the art. Lady Mary Montagu, for instance, took three lessons a week "that she might be perfect on her father's public days, when, in order to perform her functions without interruptions, she was forced to eat her own dinner alone an hour or two beforehand."

The hostess carved while the host "pushed the bottle." She did more. She urged the guests to eat more and more, and woe to her if she neglected a guest. The diner who was forced to help himself to a slice of anything nearly choked. These diners of the eighteenth century liked being pressed. And the hostess welcomed the end of the feast.—London Chronicle.

In the Days of the Flowing Bowl.

In the eighteenth century it was regarded as a qualification for a clergyman if he could drink abundantly without showing the effects. The leader of the moderate party of the Church of Scotland in 1751 was Dr. Patrick Cumming, of whom it was admirably written: "He had both learning and sagacity, and a very agreeable conversation, with a constitution able to bear the conviviality of the times."

The special period cash prize offer announced last week for the largest amount of money turned in on subscriptions to the Palmer Journal between the dates of Saturday, March 2, 8 a. m., and Wednesday, March 13, at 8 o'clock in the evening is most liberal, and those who were thinking of subscribing, but have not as yet, will find that the opportunity has arrived to do more for their favorite now than ever before. It may be the votes issued on your subscription that will decide the prize winner. If you have not as yet called at the jewelry store of E. S. Brooks, 425 Main street to inspect these rings and watches, do so at once, and satisfy yourself that they are worth the effort.

"Strike while the iron is hot" is a time-worn adage, containing more truth than poetry, which should be observed by the contestants in the Palmer Journal's $250 Cash and Prize Contest.

The interest in this big contest is becoming more intense every day. Each week many readers of the Palmer Journal discover they have a favorite candidate in the contest. Each week more and more friends are becoming interested in the race being made by the various contestants.

Iron Hot.

The time is "ripe" for results now. The iron is hot. The contestants should lose no time "striking" their friends and acquaintances for subscriptions and votes. Everybody in Palmer and outside towns is willing to help the candidates secure one of the beautiful prizes that will be given away at the close of the contest. But in order to get this assistance, which is there for the talking, the candidates must let their friends know they want it. People are glad to help those who help themselves. If a candidate wants the "golden apple" he or she must go to the garden to get it.

Your Friends Should Help Now.

There is no reason why everyone should not take a subscription in your favor. In the first place it saves them the annoyance of being called upon by a collector. In the second place, by paying in advance they do not interfere with a carrier boy on most papers. Third, even if already paid in advance a subscriber can help you in the contest, for whatever he pays in your favor will be credited to his account at the expiration of his present payment.

Best of All.

Best of all the subscriber is able, at no cost to himself, to do a really kind and pleasant deed—one that will materially advance the prospects of a friend. No subscriber should imagine for a moment that the candidate will get on just as well without him. This is far from true. Sometimes the votes run so close at the finish that even one year's subscription turns the scale between success and failure.

CAUCUS NOMINATIONS.

Both Parties Name List of Candidates For Office.

REPUBLICANS SOMEWHAT APATHETIC.

Ballot Blank in Numerous Places. Principal Contest For License Commissioners.

The caucuses for the nomination of town officers were held this week, that of the Republicans Monday evening and that of the Democrats Tuesday. While there was some interest in the nominations for selectmen, the principal contest in each caucus was over the selection of names for the position of license commissioners. Four names were presented at each caucus, and all succeeded in securing a place on the official ballot. Apparently little interest was taken by the Republicans in the caucus, as there were numerous blanks on the ticket. The Republican town committee has ruled that it is the servant of the people and will place on the caucus ballot any names endorsed by five voters of the town, regardless of political affiliation; it declines, however, to attempt to make selection of candidates if the voters do not care enough about it themselves to make a suggestion.

At the Republican caucus Ernest E. Hobson was chairman and James Wilson secretary. These nominations were made: Selectmen, H. W. Brainerd, C. D. Holden, John Wilson; license commissioners, John W. Fay, Harry Haley, Horace R. Paine; town clerk for three years, John F. Foley; treasurer, George E. Clough; tax collector, J. Austin Hawkes; overseer of poor for three years, Charles H. Collis; cemetery commissioner, Samuel H. Phillips; assessor for three years, John O. Hamilton; board of health for three years, Dr. Harry C. Cheney; school committee for three years, Dr. John F. Roche, W. B. Kerigan; highway surveyor, Charles T. Brainerd; auditors, E. W. Carpenter, W. E. Stone; constables, G. A. Bills, Michael Collins, E. P. McKelligott, David Ritchie, J. J. Manning; fence viewers, R. L. Bond, C. H. Collis, G. H. Damon. Only 121 votes were cast.

At the Democratic caucus 230 votes were cast. John P. O'Connor was chairman and M. J. Farrelly secretary. These nominations were made: License commissioners, Daniel J. Dunn, John W. Fay, Horace R. Paine; selectmen, Harold W. Brainerd, Charles L. Holden, William E. McDonald; town clerk, John F. Foley; treasurer, George E. Clough; overseer of the poor, Patrick Crowley; assessor, John O. Hamilton; school committee, William B. Kerigan, Dr. John F. Roche; auditors, Charles K. Gamwell, Walter E. Stone; tax collector, J. Austin Hawkes; highway surveyor, Michael McKelligott; constables, George A. Bills, Michael Collins, James J. Manning, John J. Mansfield, Edward P. McKelligott; board of health, Dr. Harry C. Cheney; cemetery commissioner, Fred M. Dalton; fence viewers, Edward J. Fuller, Dennis Mahoney, Purlin M. Shearer.

Warren Goes No-License.

Votes No By Majority of 12 After Five Years of License.

Warren held its annual town meeting Monday and the town went no-license after five years of license. The town went no-license by a vote of 265 to 253, giving a "no" majority of 12. Last year it went "yes" by 59. There were 12 blank votes on the liquor question. Precinct A went "no" by 20, and precinct B "yes" by only eight. The change was largely in precinct B, or West Warren, where there was great dissatisfaction that the selectmen did not grant any wholesale license last year, and as no pony express license was granted it was necessary to drive to Ware or other license towns if one wished to buy a case or keg of beer. The following officers were elected: Town clerk, William P. Duane; town treasurer, Charles B. Blair; selectmen, Charles L. Combs, J. Edward Lombard, John E. Dalton; overseers of poor, Herbert N. Shepard, Albert B. Patrick and Joseph D. Vigneaux; assessor for three years, Charles L. Combs; school committee for three years, John E. Dalton, Florence M. Spencer and Alexander A. Gendron; board of health for three years, Joseph St. George; cemetery commissioner for three years, J. Edward Lombard; collector of taxes, Frank E. Gleason; auditors, Joseph O. Faneuf, Ralph B. Patrick and M. William Sheehan; tree warden, John Sweeney; constables, Walter A. Putnam, John Collins, William F. Haley, Joseph St. George, Clarence L. Thompson. A recount of the license vote has been asked for.

HIGH SCHOOL DEBATE.

Under Auspices Palmer Historical Society Tuesday.

LARGE AUDIENCE IN MEMORIAL HALL.

Intensely Interesting Program. Debate Showed Thought and Care in Preparation.

The meeting of the Palmer Historical society in Memorial Hall Tuesday evening was a most successful affair from every point of view. The entertainment consisted of a debate by pupils of the high school, and singing by the school chorus and by the German classes. The hall was filled with an enthusiastic audience which gave all the participants nuptial and well-merited applause.

David L. Bodfish, president of the Historical society, called the assembly to order and outlined the object of the gathering, then presented Superintendent of Schools Clifton H. Hobson as the presiding officer of the evening. He announced the program, which began with a piano solo most pleasingly rendered by Miss Mary E. Dolbear of the high school teaching force; this was followed by a song, "The beautiful blue Danube," by the full school chorus, under the direction of Miss Cantwell, the musical instructor, after which the German classes sang "Lorelei." Both were received with hearty applause. The subject of the debate was announced as "Resolved, that the inter-oceanic canal should be subject to the exclusive military and political control of the United States," the affirmative being taken by William C. McDonald and Allen F. Davis, and the negative by Robert V. Bodfish and Raymond L. Wilder.

In opening for the affirmative McDonald argued that without strong fortifications at either end of the canal our vast outlay of about $400,000,000 would be at the mercy of any attacking force in time of war, especially from Japan, and suggested that neutrality treaties are often broken in times of national differences. For the negative Robert Bodfish brought a startling array of quotations from treaties made by the United States providing again and again for the perpetual neutralization of the canal zone during both peace and war, hence for our national honor we should make good its repeated assertions to that end. For the affirmative again Allen Davis contended that as the United States was the builder of the canal at such great expense after all others had disastrously failed, it seemed only natural and legally right for the country to protect its work. For the negative side Raymond Wilder presented a strong argument in support of the neutrality of the canal zone for all time, thus eliminating a vast and continual outlay of money and the employment of a large force to police the canal, which might possibly result in friction with other countries in time to come.

The foregoing gives but a feeble idea of the arguments presented. The audience was favorably impressed by the manner in which the subject was handled, as each debater gave full proof that the question had been carefully studied in all its aspects, and many strong points were grasped with the insight of older minds. Each speaker was applauded with enthusiasm, showing that their efforts were appreciated. The judges, David F. Dillon of Palmer, Hon. Arthur D. Norcross of Monson and George D. Storrs of Ware gave a unanimous decision in favor of the negative side. After more songs by the school chorus and the German classes the audience was dismissed with the statement by Superintendent Hobson that a prize debate might be expected in the near future.

WOOD ALCOHOL DEATHS.

Two Men Die in North Wilbraham Last Saturday.

DRANK ABOUT PINT OF THE POISON.

Evidently Did Not Know Its Effect. Not Sick Until Saturday, Then Beyond Help.

Wood alcohol, taken apparently without knowledge of its deadly effect when taken internally, was responsible for the death of two men at North Wilbraham Saturday. The dead men are Moses Monette, 49, and Charles Vient, 68, of Palmer.

The men had been staying at the home of Jacob Bellville on the William Whitney place, on the Mountain road about half a mile from North Wilbraham. Monette had been there for some time, but Vient was a visitor. The men were alone in the house last Friday, and after searching for something to drink discovered the wood alcohol in a bottle in the pantry. They drank most of the contents of the bottle, but they had just eaten a hearty meal and the poison did not affect them as quickly as it otherwise would. Their condition was not discovered until Saturday noon, when Dr. H. G. Webber of Wilbraham was called. He did everything possible for the men, but it was too late, Vient dying about 5 in the afternoon and Monette at 9 in the evening. Medical Examiner S. H. Russell of Springfield viewed the bodies.

Monette formerly lived in Ludlow. He leaves a brother, G. L. Monette of Springfield, and a brother in Indian Orchard. Vient, or Come, as he was known by many, was a resident of Thorndike, and the body was taken to the home of his daughter there. He leaves seven children, Mrs. Arthur Boldue of Montreal, P. Q., Mrs. Genelle of Three Rivers, Mrs. Joseph Cadieux and Mrs. Archie Dechard of Thorndike, and two sons, Tilles Come of Forest Lake and Alphonse Come of Indian Orchard.

Pomona Grange Meets.

Large Gathering Held in Palmer Wednesday—Two Sessions.

Springfield Pomona Grange met with Palmer Grange Wednesday, with about 150 members present. The morning session opened for discussion at 10.30. The subject for discussion was "The reclaiming of the apple orchard, and the production of high-grade fruit." F. D. Rogers of Monson opened the discussion, and C. B. Bennett, F. A. Forward, Mrs. E. C. Powell and C. W. Carpenter were the other participants. State Deputy W. T. Moore of Huntington officially inspected Pomona. Dinner was served at 12.30 by the members of Palmer Grange.

At the afternoon session C. W. Carpenter, who was unable to be present at the morning session, spoke on the best and most profitable varieties of apples to raise. A solo by J. F. Knight followed. "Where is the dividing line between honesty and dishonesty?" was the subject to be treated by C. B. Bliss. Bliss prevented Mr. Bliss's attendance, and his paper was read by Rev. E. S. Brewer, who supplemented the paper with remarks along the same line. Mrs. Effie G. Freeman gave an interesting sketch of current events, treated from a ludicrous standpoint. A discussion of the question, "Does the average farmer encounter greater discouragements than the trades and professions?" This subject was opened by E. S. Shaw of Chicopee and W. T. Moore and others followed. It was, however, treated from a one-sided standpoint, that of the farmer, the discussion bringing out nothing on the other side. "The American Indian and has he been abused?" was the next topic with Mrs. Kirk Jones of Suffield as speaker. A reading "How the deacon drove the calf," followed. F. D. Rogers of Monson then described the best method of storing vegetables in the winter, advocating cool, damp cellars as the most desirable place. A vocal solo by Mrs. Francis L. Jones and a piano solo by Miss Johnson were well rendered.

Pool Game Next Week.

The next in the series of pool games between the Palmer Business and Social club and the Ware Masonic club teams will be played in the Palmer rooms next Tuesday evening. The Palmer players will be Moore and Moran, against Besser and Bill. A special feature will be a game between David Woolley, the president of the Ware club, and L. J. Brainerd, president of the Palmer club.

FISH HATCHERY SURE.

Work on Buildings at Palmer Center Already Begun.

LAND LEASED, OPTION OF PURCHASE.

Will Be Bought if Conditions Prove to Be Right. Hatching to Begin at Once.

The fish hatchery which it was suggested might be started in Palmer by the State Fish and Game Commission is an assured fact, work having already been begun on a temporary building at Palmer Center, where 225 acres have been leased with an option of purchase. In the building it is expected that 200,000 brook and brown trout eggs will be hatched within the next month, as well as white and pike perch. Hatching troughs and jars are being installed in the building, and pools will be built outside later to hold the fry as soon as hatched.

Before purchasing the land it is the intention of the commission to thoroughly test the water supply and the quality, to be sure that it is wholly desirable for rearing the fish to the fingerling stage before going into the larger expenditure which the purchase would necessitate. It is believed however that the location and water are of the best.

If the water proves to be what is expected it is the intention of the commissions to build a large hatching house on the Gates farm, where brook and rainbow trout, salmon, pickerel, perch and pike can be hatched. Below the hatching house a series of cement pools will be built to rear the fish to fingerling stages before planting them in the brooks and lakes; also large pools for maintaining the brood fish. In this connection it may be said the commission will have a number of exhibition pools built by the side of the brook, where the water can be easily diverted through them, in order to show the farmers and others who have brooks running through their land how easy it will be for them to get brook trout in the fry stage and rear them to fingerlings during the spring and summer. The idea is to interest a large number of people in raising fingerling fish to restock our depleted ponds and streams. Brook trout and rainbow trout can be bought as fry in April for $1.75 per thousand, and by feeding them during the spring and summer they will be from three to five inches long in the fall, at which time there will be a ready market for them at from $15 to $20 per thousand. It can be readily seen that a little enterprise along this line will yield a great source of pleasure and profit.

The commission will also raise black bass and ponds are to be constructed below the trout pools for the breeding and rearing of this magnificent game fish. The ponds will be about 100 feet square and should be capable of rearing 1,000,000 fingerlings. At the present time there is more of a demand for such fish as the bass, perch, pike, pickerel and bullheads with which to stock the rivers and ponds than for trout and salmon, so the commission feel that they should raise these fish by the million, none having been previously raised by the state. If the water proves to be what is expected, without a doubt the Forest Lake hatchery will be the finest hatchery in the state.

Belchertown Town Meeting.

Surprise Visit.

A party of about 25 of the young friends of Ray W. Buffington paid him a surprise visit at his home on Converse street Saturday evening, making merry with games, music, etc.; light refreshments were served.

On Not Telling the Truth

"Never again as long as I live will I tell an untruth," declared Marjory, emphatically, throwing herself in a heap on the couch. "Not even the whitest of white lies. That's positive."

"And the reason for this beautiful resolution?" inquired her married sister, in whose house Marjory had taken refuge.

"It's not from any moral scruples that I have registered this vow," sighed Marjory, revealing in the wickedness of her confession, "but simply because I have come to the conclusion that lies don't pay."

"Tell me what happened when you forsook the truth," said the interested sister.

"This morning the thermometer read 101 degrees in the shade, and there wasn't any shade," related Marjory. "I had just returned home from a strenuous house party at Dorothy's bungalow, much the worse for wear. Simply exhausted and hating everybody, I flung the contents of my suitcase into their respective places, jumped into my kimono, pulled down the shades, locked my door, threw myself on the bed and sighed a sigh of contentment."

"Then the telephone rang. Such a long, vicious ring, too. As I went out into the hall to answer it I said to myself: 'If that is King George, and if he asks me to go riding in an aeroplane with him, I shall refuse. I wouldn't accept an invitation even from Bob himself, today.'"

"Yes, this is Marjory," I told the telephone. "Oh, I'm dreadfully, dreadfully sorry, Puss, but I won't be home this afternoon. You were coming to spend the afternoon with me? What a shame that I can't be here! I am just going downtown this minute. I have some important shopping. That's what I shamelessly told her."

"Going downtown?" Puss said over the phone. "How perfectly grand! You dear, sweet thing, I know you will match some Irish crochet lace for me. We have the dressmaker here. I'll bring the sample right over."

"Then before I could say 'Peter Pepper' that awful girl had hung up the receiver!"

"Mildred Morton Morse, maybe I wasn't angry! I was furious. Here was a whole afternoon spoiled by having to rush downtown in the broiling sun to match a sample of lace, for a girl whom I see only about twice a year, and whom I don't care two straws for!"

"As there was no one to open the door for Puss and her sample, I had to dress in a perfect whirlwind rush—and I looked it, too. When I got downtown my hat was over one ear, my veil was over the other, my sailor collar had worked its front view to the rear, my white buckskin shoes begged for a shine, my gloves sympathized with the mistreated shoes, and my hair was done in a wad on the top of my head in a most original and unbecoming manner. The perspiration rolled in rivulets off my face. I looked hideous, that's all. My one and only fervent wish was that I might meet no one I knew."

"Well, as I stepped off the car I ran straight into Bob, Bob's mother, Bob's father, Bob's two sisters and Bob's grandmother. They were all coming from their Michigan home for some sort of family reunion, or something. Bob has been so anxious for me to meet his family, and I wanted to make a good impression on them because—well, Bob is Bob, you know."

"There I stood like a scarecrow. Bob looked at me wonderingly as he introduced me to his tribe. It seemed to me that there were hundreds of them. Though they all said, 'We're pleased to meet you, for we've heard so much about you,' I know they were thinking, 'What under the sun can Bob see in that awful girl?'"

"I said good-by as quickly as I could and rushed away, disgusted with Bob, his family, Puss, myself and the whole wide world in general. Hurrying to the lace counter, I discovered that I had lost the miserable sample, so I couldn't get the lace. Then I jumped on the cab, and here I am a wreck. I come to you for any comfort you may have in stock."

"Please phone to Puss for me. Tell her that I didn't get the lace because I lost the sample, and that I am glad of it. Tell her that I didn't have any downtown shopping of my own this afternoon. Tell her that if she had a molecule of sense she wouldn't want to inflict herself on innocent people in such hot weather. Tell her that if Bob breaks our engagement it will be on her conscience, and that I hate her, anyway."

"The truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth for me! I can see already that I'm going to be unpopular."

Value of Knowledge.

Officer (at distance judging practice)—Well, have you learned anything new today?

Private—Yes, sir: if you take the bolt out of the barrel and a man just fits inside, he's 300 yards away.

Officer—And what is there remarkable about that?

Private (after consideration)—Nothin', 'cept that I didn't know it before.—Punch.

REAL MADAME "SANS-GENE"

Story of Adventurous Career of Marie Therese Figueur in the French Army.

Everyone knows the washerwoman who was so familiar with Napoleon in Victorien Sardou's play, "Madame Sans-Gené," but the real "Sans-Gené" who lived at that time was a dragoon in one of the great Corsican's armies and spent twenty years in camps and barracks, in campaigns and battles over Europe. In the Musée de l'Armée in Paris a special case has just been installed inside which stands her equestrian statue.

Her real name was Marie Therese Figueur and she was born in Burgundy in 1774. When nineteen, at the end of the reign of terror, she enrolled in a cavalry regiment commanded by one of her uncles and soon acquired the nickname of "Sans-Gené."

Mme. Sans-Gené fought in Germany with the French and Batavian armies, charged at Hohenlinden, took part in the siege of Toulon, was in the Italian, Spanish and Austrian campaigns and fought at Austerlitz and in Russia. During the Hundred Days the emperor conferred the Legion of Honor upon her and she charged at Waterloo for the last time.

With the Restoration she left the army to get married. She was then thirty-nine. In the course of her marital career Sans-Gené had five horses shot under her and was wounded eight times in different engagements. She died in hospital in 1861.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

GETS THE GOOD OUT OF FOOD.

By Maria McCulloch Williams.

Eating serves a double purpose—the giving of pleasure, the keeping up of strength. Ill-cooked food reduces both to a minimum—hence the proverb: "God sends meat and the devil sends cooks." Possibly his satanic majesty now and again nods. It must have been in such a somnolent interval that he let M. Soyer's system of paper bag cooking get by him. For unquestionably it is in the way of reducing ill-cooking at least one-half. Thereby it will help to feed fat all the nations of the earth.

The use of cooking is to change the nature of food substances, making them at once better tasting and more digestible. Heat works by developing flavors and transforming substances. Its most important office is, however, to break down fiber, animal and vegetable, to such a degree as to render it easily digestible. If it is to do this it must be properly applied. That is to say, gently, regularly.

Simple food, well cooked, is the foundation of happiness—and paper bag cooking means good cooking.

It follows naturally that the paper bag is especially useful in preparing food for delicate persons, and growing children. Here follow some dishes that have helped build up weak and wasted people. That they will be likewise good for children, especially delicate ones, admits of no doubt.

Pigeon Roast.—Take a squab, a squab-chicken as small as possible, or a quail, dress it whole, stuff lightly with toasted bread crumbs, adding a raisin or two, or shreds of tart apple. Season very lightly inside before stuffing. Rub a little more salt outside, but only a little. Rub also with soft butter, not melted, and dredge very lightly with flour. Then wrap in bacon, sliced as thin as possible, and put into a buttered bag with a half teaspoonful of water. Seal and cook in a hot oven twenty to thirty minutes, depending on the size. The squab-chicken may require thirty-five minutes.

Shredded Wheat and Tomatoes.—Pour upon each shredded wheat biscuit required a teaspoonful of melted butter. Lay the buttered biscuit in a well-buttered bag and pile upon them thick slices of peeled tomatoes, well seasoned with sugar, salt, black and red pepper. Seal and cook for ten minutes. Serve on hot plates. A pleasing variant for children is to use instead of tomatoes, bananas peeled, cut in cubes, covered with sugar and lemon juice, and cooked for eight minutes. This can be served with cream.

PAPER BAG COOKED DISHES FOR INVALIDS AND CHILDREN.

By Nicholas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Sweetbread Mackenzie.—Blanch and trim a good-sized sweetbread, make a little mirepoir of vegetables, paying attention to the color of the vegetables, and seeing that they do not brown. Cut the sweetbread across the center, but do not halve it. Pound one ounce of pistachios and lay them in the slit of the sweetbread. Cover the sweetbread with the prepared vegetables and place in a well-buttered bag. Cook in a slow oven for thirty minutes. Dish the sweetbread, place the other ingredients in a fine sieve and lightly press the gravy through, on to the sweetbread.

Chicken Quenelles.—Take the breast of one fowl, add a pint of white sauce, and a piece of butter the size of a walnut. Pound well, mix in one egg, pass through a hair sieve. Place in a basin, add a quarter pint of cream and stir well. Form into small quenelles with a spoon, place in a buttered bag, lay carefully on the broiler, and cook for six minutes in a hot oven.

Chicken and Rice Tea.—Chop up half a raw chicken, wash a tablespoonful of rice in cold water, and mix with the chicken. Wash a teaspoonful of pearl barley, and add with a quarter-pint of cold water. Put all together into a small paper bag, and cook forty to forty-five minutes in a slow oven.

Filletted Poultry for Invalids.—Mince fine a carrot, turnip and onion, add a little minced ham, a pinch of sugar and salt, and lay at the bottom of a small well-buttered bag. Slice the breast of a fowl—cooked—lay the slices upon the prepared vegetables, which were cooked before mincing, sprinkle with oiled butter, seal and cook six minutes in a slow oven. Dish the fillets, put the vegetables in a sieve and press the gravy from them over the fillets.

Beef Tea.—Put one pound of beef steak in a paper bag, seal it, and cook for twelve minutes in a moderate oven. Open the bag on a dish and you will find natural gravy about the meat. Cut up the steak, press out all juice from it, strain, season to taste, and serve at once in a hot cup. For chicken tea, cut up half a fresh fowl, break the bones with a chopper, put in bag with two tablespoonfuls cold water, seal and cook forty-five minutes in a slow oven. Strain into a hot cup, season and serve.

H. G. Gilbert, Mrs. James E. Allen and Mrs. O. N. Moore.

HAMPDEN.

Announcement Party.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. McCray gave an announcement party in the town hall Saturday afternoon from 2 to 5, when the engagement of their daughter, Lena Elizabeth, to Hawley Smith Kenney of Monson was announced. There were 15 of her girl friends present, including five of her Monson schoolmates, Maud Reese, Bessie and Ruth Duncanson, Helen Fagan and Helen Needham. After a social hour a five course luncheon was served in the dining room below by her mother, assisted by Mrs. O. C. McCray of Monson, Mrs. T. T. Woodworth of East Longmeadow and Mrs. C. S. Shute of Hampden. Both rooms were prettily decorated in pink and white. At the table the place cards were pink euphonia tied to pink ribbons, running into a pink and white bag at the center. After the guests were seated at a given signal each pulled her ribbon and 16 black cats were out of the bag. Miss McCray found a diamond engagement ring tied to hers.

Democratic and Citizens' Caucus.

The Democratic and Citizens' caucus was held in the town hall Tuesday evening. Matthias Casey, chairman of the Democratic town committee, called the meeting to order. Cornelius J. Flynn was chosen chairman and Walter S. Beebe clerk. The nominations were made as follows: Town clerk and treasurer, Charles S. Shute; selectmen and overseers of the poor, Patrick E. Wall, Leroy O. PALMER NEWS.

Bridge Opened Wednesday.

Cars Over It at 2.30 a. m. Teams and Foot Passengers Not Yet.

The new bridge which the street railway company is building on Main street over the tracks of the Boston and Albany railroad, was completed Tuesday night to an extent which allowed the cars which had been stored on Main street for four days to cross and go to the car barn. Since then the workmen have been busy finishing up the riveting and getting the timbers and flooring into place. It is not yet ready for teams and foot passengers, but will be by to-morrow night, it is expected.

The new structure is radically different from the old, being of the low solid truss variety, with a passageway for pedestrians on the east side outside of the girder. The construction of the new bridge makes it necessary to raise the grade of the highway slightly at either end, four and a half inches at the north end and three inches at the south end. The clearance between the bridge and the railroad is as low as is permitted by law. The new bridge is a marked improvement over the old in appearance, and a greater protection to pedestrians who use it at the same time with teams.

Surprised On Her Birthday.

The Woman's Improvement Club of Palmer Center and the Auld Lang Syne Club of Bondsville celebrated the 73d birthday of Mrs. Mary Jane Miller of Palmer Center by giving her a surprise visit at her home Wednesday evening; Mrs. Miller is the efficient president of the Woman's Improvement Club and also a member of the Auld Lang Syne Club. The ladies furnished abundant refreshments, and on their departure left numerous gifts as souvenirs of the occasion. The refreshment committee was composed of Vice President Annie M. Bacon, Mrs. Ella
King Ogle, Mrs. Ella Lamb and Miss
Alice M. Gates. The Auld Lang Syne Club furnished the table decorations of pussy willows and lilies. One out-of-town guest was present, Fannie M.
Barnes of South Hadley Falls.

Challenge the Champions.

The claim of Barslow and Shearer to the title of the champion bowlers of Palmer has attracted the attention of Charles Lawton, until recently of Palmer, now in Worcester, and he has sent to the Journal a challenge to roll them a 10-string match for $50, which he offers to deposit with the Journal, or for a turkey supper for 10 plates a side, Lawton's partner to be Herbert Moon.
If this is not agreeable he is willing to make it a match for a five-man team for the same stakes, one game to be rolled in Palmer, one in Worcester, and the third—if necessary in some place mutually agreeable; the Palmer team to be composed of men from the Depot village and the Worcester team of men employed in the Whittall carpet mill in that place.

Shooting Cost Him $50.

Angelli DeCarlo of Three Rivers became imbued with a desire to celebrate something or other on Sunday, and taking his revolver proceeded to the public streets and started to give an exhibition of burning gunpowder. No harm was done other than to the nerves of timid ones, but as an example to others he was brought into court Monday and charged with carrying a loaded revolver without a permit.
A fine of $50 was imposed and he was sentenced to 30 days in the house of correction. Because of a lack of funds he will work out the fine.

Library Association Officers.

At the annual meeting of the Young Men's Library association Monday evening these officers were chosen for the coming year: President, Charles L. Waid; vice president, Everett W.
Carpenter; secretary, Arthur H.
Parker; treasurer, Louis E. Chandler; librarian, Clifton Hobson; directors,
Freeman A. Smith, Harrie M. Howe,
Walter E. Stone and C. H. Hobson.
A considerable number of new names were favorably balloted on for membership.

New Store on Main Street.

Announcement is made that Edwin C. Gould, who recently disposed of his interest in the drug store of Lynde & Gould to his partner, will open as soon as possible, probably by April 1, a store in the Caryl block on the corner of Main and Bridge streets, in the room now occupied by O'Connor's barber shop and pool room. Mr. O'Connor is to move to the other store in the block, recently occupied by the Elite moving picture palace. Mr. Gould will carry a full line of periodicals, stationery, and other similar lines of goods, exclusive of drugs.

Wants $10,000 From Street Railway.

William H. Cavanaugh of Monson has brought suit against the Springfield Street Railway company for injuries received in an accident at Forest
Lake junction on the afternoon of Aug.
26 last. It will be remembered that on that day a brake-rod on a car broke, letting the car slide down the hill and collide with a car at the foot, a number of persons being hurt. Mr. Cavanaugh, seeing the accident unavoidable, jumped and was hurt.

Committee of Fifteen.

The committee of fifteen, which is to consider the articles in the town warrant previous to the appropriation meeting, has been named by the selectmen as follows: David L. Bodfish, Charles L. Waid, Walter E. Stone,
Charles F. Smith, George Ezekiel, John
Hamilton, John Loftus, H. E. W.
Clark, Charles A. Tabor, John J. Conway, Samuel Stewart, John F. Shea, R. C. Newell, John Wilson, Homer A.
Shaw.

High School Boy Secures Position.

Francis Smith of the high school commercial course has taken a position as stenographer in the office of Division Superintendent Taylor of the Boston and Albany railroad at Palmer. The offer came unsolicited after a number of graduates from various business colleges had been tried out and found wanting, and is highly complimentary of the success of the high school's course.

Additional Car to and From Ware.

Commencing next Monday the street railway company will put on an additional car on the Ware line, leaving Palmer at 6.40 in the morning and connecting with the car from Bondsville at the Lake junction, and leaving Ware for Palmer at 7.30. The first car now leaves Ware at 6.30 and the next at 8.30, and there is a demand for a car in between, so the company will try the experiment for a time.

Woman's Club Will Observe Anniversary.

The tenth anniversary of the organization of the Palmer Woman's club will be observed next Friday at the home of Mrs. J. C. Wing on Central street.
It will be "President's day," and the founder of the Palmer club, Mrs. Ada Wing Mead of Providence, R. I., will be present. The president of the state federation will visit the Palmer organization on the 22d.

Slipped On Ice—Leg Broken.

Mrs. Michael St. John of Thorndike street, while crossing the yard with a basket of clothes Monday morning, slipped on a small bit of ice and fell, breaking both bones of the left leg above the ankle. Her husband, with the assistance of a passerby, carried her into the house, where her injuries were attended by Drs. Schneider and Miller.

Last Chance to Register.

The last opportunity to register for the annual town meeting will be tomorrow, when the registrars of voters will be in session in the selectmen's room in Palmer from noon until 10 o'clock at night.

The telephone company is making extensive repairs on its lines on South Main street.

The meeting of the Woman's Tuesday club next week will be with Mrs.
G. A. Rice on Pleasant street.

grades on primary reading in the high school Thursday.

held in the opera house next Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

den-Hampshire association.

Converse on Thorndike street, next the Hamilton coal office, and will move his automobile garage from Main street to that place.

is holding food and candy sales at the school this week, the proceeds to be used toward defraying the expenses of the trip to Washington.

street, which has been in progress today, will continue to-morrow.

galow Shop in Monson next Wednesday evening. The team match supper will be served at the same time.

The wet wash business conducted at Tenneyville by the Merrimack Laundry Co. has been sold to W. B. Whittemore of Monson, who will conduct it in connection with his present laundry route.

The senior class of the high school plan to leave here April 26th for Washington, returning May 3d. Any one wishing to take the trip can make arrangements with Superintendent C.
H. Hobson.

In the district court Monday Valenty Bohanek of Thorndike was fined $5 for an assault on his wife, and paid. From the appearance of the defendant's face it was evident that the attack had not been entirely one-sided. Thomas F.
Flanders was adjudged a wayward child and sent to the Lyman school.

On the eighth page of this evening's paper will be found the announcement of the spring opening of Samuel Brooks, ladies' and gent's tailor. In order to accommodate his rapidly increasing patronage in ladies' garments, Mr.
Brooks visited New York the first of the week and engaged an experienced cutter and fitter for this line of work, Mr. R. A. Snape. Mr. Snape holds a diploma for proficiency in his line, and Mr. Brooks feels sanguine that he can guarantee satisfaction to all.

Can We Talk With You Concerning a New Kitchen Range?

We are making a special drive on

Crawford Ranges

We are showing six different styles.

A splendid and unique feature of the Fortress Crawford, is the ash hod in place of an ash pan, resulting in less dirt and dust than with the old style ash pan. The ashes are shaken directly into the hod which is just below the fire pot.

The Crawford Heat Indicator is a wonderful help in cooking. It tells the oven heat exactly; guessing is not necessary.

The single damper does the work of two ordinary dampers and does it better.

A simmering cover is used for slow cooking.

If you do not need one to-day we will be pleased to have you tell us what sort of a range you now have, and it will cost nothing but your time to inspect the Crawford line. We are glad to show the Crawford and its good points.

Why Vivien Was Jealous

By Peggy Powers

"Vivien, at all events it can't be true that you've accepted Winston Lewis' invitation to the dance?"

"How dramatic! Is there any state law about who my escort should be?"

"No, but if you wear Richard's fraternity pin and ring, it seems that it's an unwritten code that he should be your partner."

"Even when he's the sort who meets another woman every afternoon in the most secretive clandestine manner?"

"You must have a vivid imagination," returned Richard's cousin Alice.

"Richard is not a fickle fellow, but absolutely reliable and trustworthy. He hasn't eyes for any other girl but you."

"Little Buddy Beasley saw him go down the river," declared Vivien.

"Jump ashore, whistle some tune until a woman appeared, address her as 'Pearl,' present her with a roll of bills and call as he jumped into his canoe. 'See you tomorrow.'"

"Don't be too previous in jumping at conclusions," advised Alice. "There may be some extenuating circumstances."

Richard appeared just as Alice was leaving.

"Hello, dearest," he said, grasping Vivien's hand.

"Don't touch me!" she exclaimed.

"Do you think I care to share your saunders with some red-headed person whom you meet every afternoon?"

"What are you talking about? I've always had an antipathy for that shade of hair."

"Indeed!" answered Vivien, satirically. "How you must hate Pearl, whom you spend all your afternoons in her society. Never will I marry any man whom I can't implicitly trust."

"Honor bright! Vivien, the reason I went down the river was to hunt clams."

"Then why were you as close as a clam about it?"

"Because an old woman made me swear to secrecy if she informed me of the place where the pearls were most abundant. In return for the secret I disposed of her pearls for her."

"Forgive me for doubting your constancy," said Vivien, as she extended her hand.

"Take a peep at this lavender stone," continued Richard, as he opened his wallet. "It is a superb specimen and its value will help to furnish our little home. Here's another pearl that is nearly perfect," he whispered.

"and its price will purchase a diamond ring for the only girl I love."

"No," answered Vivien emphatically. "I'd prefer the pearl; its luster and purity will remind me of your honesty and faithfulness and how foolish I was to be so suspicious and jealous."

FREE IF IT FAILS.

Your Money Back if You Are Not Satisfied With the Medicine We Recommend.

We are so positive that our remedy will permanently relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine at our expense should it fail to produce satisfactory results.

It is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Laxative or cathartics do much harm. They cause a reaction, irritate, and weaken the bowels and tend to make constipation more chronic. Besides, their use becomes a habit that is dangerous.

Constipation is caused by a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or descending colon. To expect permanent relief you must therefore tone up and strengthen these organs and restore them to healthier activity.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our recommendation. They are exceedingly pleasant to take, being eaten like candy, and are ideal for children, delicate persons, and old folks, as well as for the robust. They act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They apparently have a neutral action on other associate organs or glands. "Aeropotomanie."

Some months ago a learned professor at the Sorbonne wrote to the Parisian papers proposing that the word "petomanie" be used as a term to designate the aviator, the word petomanie being based, he explained, on the Greek root "pet" to fly. Another learned person says that the word harks back to the earliest days of aerostation, and quotes from Der Deutsche Merkur (the German Mercury), published by Wieland at Weimar, in October, 1783, which speaks of "Aeropotomanie," or the latest progress in flying.

TOO REMARKABLE TO FALL

Ruined Old Barn Set Mose an Example and He Proceeded to Get Well.

In their first walk of the season at Wobrook-in-the-Hills the judge and his wife stopped at the Bartons' to inquire for Mose, who was reported to have been "more'n common allin' long back." They found Mrs. Barton in the garden, weeding.

"Yes, he was awful bad all last winter," she said, gradually rising, and straightening up. "First he had gripe, an' that left his heart weak, an' long toward March his liver kind o' got out o' whack. Then Mose sent for doctor, an' he called it 'complication o' diseases'."

"You're a sick man," says doctor. "I know that," says Mose. "You're tellin' me! You know his way? But this complication, 's you call it, is what stumps me. I guess I'd better get well—an' he did!"

"Suthin' in that, eh, squire?" said Mose, suddenly appearing from behind the house.

"Much!" asserted the judge.

"Didn't find my argument in a book, same as you would, squire," Mose continued. "Got it up on the hills, from the old Collin's barn—member it?"

"I should say I did!" said the judge, smiling reminiscently; "roofless, practically and open on all sides!"

"But kep' a-standin' for nigh thirty year 'cause it was so ramshackle it didn't know which way to fall. My case exactly!" declared Mose Marton, with a twinkle.—Youth's Companion.

Circus vs. Funeral.

Aunt Mary Barker, a prominent resident of a Virginia town, like many of her race, "jest" dotes on funerals.

On one occasion a circus had come to the next town, and Aunt Mary, who had never seen an elephant, had been telling for some weeks how she longed to go to the show. Her son agreed to drive her over on the eventful day.

"Well, now," exclaimed Aunt Mary, with unexpected hesitation, "I don't know much 'bout dat, I wants to see dat show awful bad, but, yo' see, Deacon Botts' funeral comes off today, and I don't know jest which I'd enjoy de most. There'll be a lot o' folks dere, and besides I mought live till de circus comes again, but dis is de only funeral Deacon Botts will ever have I guess I'll have a better time at de funeral."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Poor Day for Theater.

A Paris newspaper has been diverting itself with speculations as to the smallest receipts ever taken in at a theater box office. The record at the Comedie Francaise is thought to have been made on May 21, 1871, when the fight against the Commune was under way. On that day the receipts were 54 francs, or $10.80.

LIKE FINDING MONEY.

James P. Lynde Offers Popular Medicine at Half-Price.

James P. Lynde, the popular druggist, is making an offer that is just like finding money for he is selling a regular 50 cent bottle of Dr. Howard's celebrated specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half price. In addition to this large discount he agrees to return the money to any purchaser whom the specific does not cure.

It is quite unusual to be able to buy fifty-cent pieces for a quarter, but that is what this offer really means, for it is only recently through the solicitation of Druggist James P. Lynde that this medicine could be bought for less than fifty cents. He urged the proprietors to allow him to sell it at this reduced price for a little while, agreeing to sell a certain amount. The result has justified his good judgment for the sale has been something remarkable.

Anyone who suffers with headache, dyspepsia, dizziness, sour stomach, specks before the eyes, or any liver trouble, should take advantage of this opportunity, for Dr. Howard's specific will cure all these troubles. But if by any chance it should not, James P. Lynde will return your money.

'BLUFF' AMONG THE NEGROES

Little Story of a Quarrel That Illustrates Their Love of Flourish and Pose.

Love of bluff is a curious characteristic of the negro. Sometimes the deadly razor becomes active with a vengeance, but countless other times it is merely flourished with frightful threats and boasts of its slashing qualities. These are vanity poses.

One night recently I saw a striking living picture of this kind. I was one of a crowd which got off an early morning elevated train. A negro quarrel was in progress in front of a house on the opposite side of the street and all stopped to watch it. One husky black was about to apply an axe to the cranium of a smaller negro, when an ally of the lesser one threatened the husky individual with a blackjack from behind. Thus it stood—if the axe fell on one skull the blackjack would descend on another. Neither participant seemed willing to "start anything." There was the tableau and it simply died away like a moving picture climax on the screen.

Evidently this scene of inaction overtaxed the patience of the dusky spectators, for they broke the lull by tossing beer bottles at one another. This, too, was without ginger. Just as I stepped behind a telegraph pole to avoid the flying glass, an excited old darkey appeared at the door and fired a shotgun over the heads of the disputants.

A peaceful citizen next to me was taken to the hospital and I limped home with bird shot in my legs. The old man's bluff was effective and the careful blacks dispersed, seeking their beds to dream of flocks of chickens and trainloads of watermelons.

Few Cures Hint.

Stomach and bowels, and especially biliousness, are among the most obstinate of removal and frequently tax our knowledge to the utmost. Iodine marks may, however, be successfully removed by means of liquid ammonia, a little of the spirit being poured into the saucer and the stained garment laid across it and the spot dabbed repeatedly with the fingers until it disappears. It should then be rinsed in tepid water and washed with strong soapsuds in the usual manner.

CAUSE FOR ALARM.

Loss of Appetite or Distress After Eating a Symptom That Should Not Be Disregarded.

Appetite is just a natural desire for food. Loss of appetite or stomach distress after eating indicate indigestion or dyspepsia. Over-eating is a habit very dangerous to a person's good general health.

It is not what you eat, but what you digest and assimilate that does you good. Some of the strongest, heaviest, and healthiest persons are moderate eaters.

There is nothing that will cause more trouble than a disordered stomach, and many people daily contract serious maladies simply through disregard or abuse of the stomach.

We urge all who suffer from any stomach derangement, indigestion, or dyspepsia, whether acute or chronic, to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, with the distinct understanding that we will refund their money without question or formality, if after reasonable use of this medicine, they are not perfectly satisfied with the results. We recommend them to our customers every day, and have yet to hear of any one who has not been benefited by them. We honestly believe them to be without equal. They give very prompt relief, aiding to neutralize the gastric juices, strengthen the digestive organs, to regulate the bowels, and thus to promote perfect nutrition, and eradicate all unhealthy symptoms.

We urge you to try a 25c. box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, which gives 15 days' treatment. At the end of that time, your money will be returned to you if you are not satisfied. Of course, in chronic cases length of treatment varies. For such cases, we have two larger sizes, which sell for 50c. and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store. Lynde & Gould, 385 Main St., Palmer.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Mrs. Reed of Peoria, Ill., Escaped The Surgeon's Knife.

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. Forty-two years I suffered. The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a well and healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. Jessup, Pa.—"After the birth of my fourth child, I had severe organic inflammation. I would have such terrible pains that it did not seem as though I could stand it. This kept up for three long months, until two doctors decided that an operation was needed.

"Then one of my friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after taking it for two months I was a well woman."—MRS. JOSEPH A. LYNCH, Jessup, Pa.

Monson News.

DEATH OF WILLIAM SUTCLIFFE.

One of the Town's Best Known and Most Respected Citizens.

William Sutcliffe, 85, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Monson, died at his home in the east part of the town on the Brimfield road Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, his death being the result of injuries caused by a fall on the ice near his house about three weeks ago. His head was badly hurt and he never entirely regained consciousness.

Although the past few years of his life had been spent in a quiet manner on his farm, he had been a very popular and successful business man of the town, conducting a general store here for a number of years. He was a member of the school committee for twenty years, retiring from that office because of his own insistence a few years ago.

Mr. Sutcliffe was born in Manchester, England, Sept. 5, 1826, and came to this country when he was but 16 years of age, and coming in 1842 to Monson, where he had since resided. He was well educated, being a student in Monson academy during the time of Dr. Hammond. He was a teacher in the public schools here for several years. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church several years. In 1862, 49 years ago, he was married in Thorndike to Miss Sophia K. Pratt of Belchertown by Rev. Mr. Tuck. He is survived by his widow and four children, eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild. The children are H. M. Sutcliffe of Palmer, Mrs. R. F. Shumway and Mrs. F. C. Letter of Monson, and Mrs. W. S. Fitz of Springfield. He also leaves three sisters and one brother, Mrs. Asher Green of Wales, Miss Jane, Miss Kate, and Thomas Sutcliffe of Monson. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock, Rev. F. W. McConnell officiating; burial was in the No. 1 cemetery.

COUNCIL OF BOY SCOUTS.

Plan to Organize Branch of This World-Wide Movement in Monson.

Andrews, pastor of the Congregational church, was appointed chairman of the council; G. W. French, physical instructor at Monson Academy, was appointed master of boys; W. L. Ricketts was appointed secretary. All public-spirited citizens are asked to join the council and assist as much as possible in the organization of this non-sectarian society, which has proved to be such a success in this country. The council will meet in the near future for election of officers.

TOWN'S OLDEST RESIDENT.

Death Last Saturday of Mrs. Susan Frye at Age of 90.

Y., and spent much of her younger life in that town, going from there to Greenwich and coming to Monson from that town about six years ago. She is survived by one brother and one sister in Sharon, Ct. The funeral services were held at her late home Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. F. W. McConnell of the Methodist church officiating. The body was taken to Greenwich, Ct., for burial.

For the protection of the contestants the name of the winners of the Cash Special Period Prizes will not be published until the close of the contest.

Now that the Cash Prize competition is over the race to acquire the $250 and other prizes will grow exciting.

Candidates may put in many days of good work. Less than two weeks remains—candidates are learning how to put their friends to work—Their united efforts tell.

Look for the Big Special Vote Offer on another page, this is the offer that will close the contest. This is positively the last offer of any kind during the contest, so you can figure now what it will mean to you.

The Cash Prize competition which closed Wednesday night at 8 o'clock was certainly full of excitement, as a number of the contestants came down the home stretch almost neck and neck, and a little extra effort on the part of any of these contestants would have meant victory for them.

On with the contest is the cry that grows louder and as the contest continues every effort is being exerted even to the "previous tension" to secure the much-coveted ballots. As soon as the morning sun rises the enthusiastic vote-getter "gets busy," and does things in dead earnest, and the Journal contestants are "early risers" too. Each day brings encouragement and renewed energy to some candidate whom "yesterday" thought her fellow contestant had some advantage or perhaps felt somewhat indifferent to the proposition, while some good Samaritan that "hobbed up serenely" gave her hope, and started her off on the road to success once more. This game of vote-getting is an art—a study—practice means much to the inexperienced; but after all the fundamental principle upon which the whole thing is based, is effort. A "trip" to see who would win. "Hustle and get there," and before you know what has happened you will have reached the much-coveted position on the list which all the contestants are striving for. All of the candidates are yearning for one of the Journal's prizes. As much has been said about the beauty and value of them all that it is veritable day and night dream with the daily stream of contestants that each day go out among the "dear people" and explain their mission and why they are striving to get to the goal. The proposition as placed by this paper before the public seems to completely overwhelm them in its immensity, liberality and scope. You have seen contests and heard of other contests, but nothing so broad and of such high order as the present offer of the Journal to give $250 four Genuine Diamond Rings, four Gold Watches. All of these things this paper proposes to do, and will do to the very letter. To the contestant that is thinking of entering the greatest contest ever launched in this section, we say now is the time to enter. Get in and win. All who will be in the race will have equal chances

ELECTRIC COMPANY SOLD.

Central Mass. Electric Company Changes Hands.

PRIVATE CAPITAL NOW IN CONTROL.

Many Improvements in the Service Are Promised. New Managers to Push For Business.

Announcement was made Saturday morning that the Central Massachusetts Electric company of Palmer, which has been owned by the New England Investment and Securities company of Boston, the holding company of the Consolidated road, had changed hands, passing into the ownership and control of private individuals, with complete divorcement from its former associations. The new officers and directors are as follows: President, E. P. Rowell, who is also treasurer of the Plymouth Electric Light company of Plymouth; treasurer, Charles R. Adams of Boston, member of C. D. Parker & Co., bankers; directors, E. P. Rowell, Charles R. Adams, Fred T. Ley of Springfield—past president of the board of trade of that city—Paul B. Webber of Boston, treasurer and general manager of the Athol Gas and Electric company and the Marlboro-Hudson Gas company, Bowen Tufts, member of C. D. Parker & Co., E. C. Mason of Boston, general counsel of the Dorchester Mutual Fire Insurance company and various lighting companies in the state, Morton E. Grush of Boston, associated with the firm of C. D. Parker & Co., and C. D. Parker of that firm.

Things started in with a rush on the very day the announcement appeared in the papers, for the new management had printed and distributed throughout the territory several thousand circulars expressing their desire to co-operate with the householders in lighting their houses, with the manufacturers and business interests in lighting their factories and stores and in furnishing them power for their various needs, and with the towns themselves in the matter of lighting the streets. The conclusion of the article stated that the management is here "for the good of the community at large, not any one special interest."

In other words, the management evidently believes in "the public pleasure" policy of William McAdoo, the Hudson tube man, and not in "the public be damned" policy so often followed out by many public service companies.

In order to make sure that the public should know of the change that had taken place in the management as soon as possible, the circulars were taken hot off the press Saturday noon, the ink hardly dry, and distributed as thoroughly as time allowed by two men in a flying automobile that covered about 70 miles of muddy road in the afternoon, reaching—besides Palmer—Monson, West Warren, Warren, West Brookfield, Three Rivers, Belchertown and North Wilbraham. Such was the strenuous effort made by the new management upon the first day of their possession to inform the public of just what had happened and let them know that improvements were coming.

H. M. Parsons, the new manager, who is now in charge at Palmer, states that "Co-operation" will be the great aim of the company from now on, and that the first move on the company's part will be to improve the lines and the station. More light, better light, and "then some" will be forthcoming just as fast as improvements can be made. Mr. Parsons was formerly with Stone & Webster of Boston, but just before coming to Palmer was in charge of construction work for the Union Electric Light Company of Franklin. He is a young and progressive man with a determination to please. He is a graduate of the engineer school of the University of Pennsylvania.

The new accountant of the company is Leigh F. Moore, who has been transferred from Franklin to Palmer.

The company has secured the room in the Commercial block on Main street occupied by the Maguire barber shop, and is fitting it up for an office and sales room, where the latest things in electrical supplies and utensils will be shown. The company requests that if for any reason the lights in houses or stores go out, the office of the company be immediately communicated with, as a "trouble" man will be ready at all times to care for such matters. The company has provided three autos for use in the various departments—a touring car, runabout and a truck, and has secured the Holbrook barn on North Main street for a garage, where it will also have its stock room.

Wilbraham Academy Changes.

Trustees to Spend $50,000 Before Opening School in Fall.

The trustees of Wesleyan academy at Wilbraham held a meeting at the Cooley Hotel in Springfield, Tuesday, and formulated plans for the reorganization of the academy and changes in the building so as to effect the change from a coeducational school to a school for boys alone. It is planned to expend $50,000, and it is expected that the work will be completed so that the school will be reopened next fall.

The building committee, under the chairmanship of Frank C. Dunn of Gardner, reported on plans for improving and remodeling the buildings. These plans were drawn by Kendall, Taylor & Co. of Boston, and the work will be carried on under the supervision of the building committee, which is composed of Mr. Dunn, E. S. Ela of Manchester, Conn., and Charles McKernon of Housatonic. In general it is planned to improve the buildings and school so that they will stand among the foremost institutions of the kind in the country. The standing of the school will be raised and more attention given to quality than to quantity. Not more than 70 students will be entered next fall.

Members of the trustees present included Prof. Caleb T. Winchester, Wesleyan university, Rev. Dr. William Rice Newhall of Somerville, Elwood S. Ela, editor of the Manchester Herald, H. Willis Cutler of North Wilbraham, Rev. William J. Haven of New York, corresponding secretary of the American Bible society, George S. Goddard of Hartford, Ct., state librarian, Attorney George S. Coleman and Attorney George W. Davidson, both of New York.

Must Go To Church Sundays.

Probation Condition Imposed on Youngsters by District Court.

A portion of the session of the district court Saturday morning was given to consideration of the cases of nine young men from Springfield, ranging in age from 14 to 18 years, charged with track walking. They came to Palmer on various trains on the Boston and Albany railroad on the last Sunday in February, and proceeded to do pretty much as they pleased on railroad premises. The windows in the car inspector's office were broken, the office entered and papers and records destroyed, and from a "buggy" in the yard several fuses and torpedoes were stolen. By the use of torpedoes a freight train was stopped a short distance west of the village and the gang secured a return trip to Springfield. In the yard there more of the torpedoes were used. The cases were continued until July 6, the youngsters being given, as a part of their probation, obligations to attend church regularly and behave themselves properly.

The cases of five boys from Monson, charged with malicious mischief in breaking into a summer cottage and committing various depredations, were considered at the same time, and they were probated to the same time—July 6—on the same terms.

Palmer Wins At Pool.

Business Club's Team Victorious Over Ware Masonic Team.

The fourth and last of the pool games between teams from the Palmer Business and Social club and the Ware Masonic club was played in the Palmer club's rooms Tuesday night. Palmer won both games, and by margins which gave that team the match. The first game was between Moran of Palmer and Bill of Ware, Moran winning by one ball, 50 to 49; the second game, between Moore of Palmer and Besser of Ware, went to Moore, 50 to 42. This gave Palmer a lead of four balls in the series, the final count to be balls. Palmer had won four of the previous games, but by such narrow margins that the lead lay with their opponents. Edmonds furnished a lunch after the games. A large delegation was present from Ware, as well as many of the local club members.

Jail Breaker Caught.

James W. Abbey, who broke jail at Tolland, Ct., January 1, was arrested by Officer C. B. Thomas Wednesday night. The man asked the officer for a place to spend the night. When told that he would be obliged to appear in court next morning if his request was granted, he decided he did not care to lodge in the lockup. Later the man was found loitering around the street and the officer put him under arrest. When questioned by the officer he confessed to breaking jail. He was brought into the district court yesterday morning charged with vagrancy and pleaded guilty. The officials of the Tolland jail were notified and they came for their man yesterday.

BRISK BLAZE MONDAY.

Trolley Express Office Makes Spectacular Fire.

STOVE STOOD TOO NEAR PARTITION.

Office All Ablaze When Discovered. No Other Damage. Firemen Make Quick Run.

The building which the trolley express people built about a year ago on Depot street for a freight house was destroyed by fire a little after 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. In the building at the time was a quantity of freight for shipment and some which had just come, and none of it was saved. The loss is estimated at about $1000, covered by insurance.

The clerk employed in the office—C. C. Leonard—was in the freight room at the rear checking freight which was being unloaded from a car which had just come in, and the first intimation of fire was when he and the car crew discovered flames bursting from the office room in front. They made an attempt to secure the books in the office, but the interior was a solid mass of flames, so fierce that it was impossible even to reach and close the door of the safe which stood near the entrance of the building and had been left open. The structure was a mere shell of wood and it did not take the flames long to spread through it and lick up about everything burnable. The car which stood on the siding was quickly run out of danger.

An alarm was pulled from box 66, near the scene of the blaze, and the first stroke of the bell sounded at 2.11. The auto truck again demonstrated the wisdom of its purchase by making quick time to the fire; a line of hose was dropped from the corner of Main and Church streets as the truck passed, and water was on the flames at exactly 2.16, only five minutes from the first sound of the alarm. When it is remembered that no men are kept at the engine house, reliance being placed on their being within call when an alarm sounds, the time comes close to being a record. Chief Summers ran the truck and ordered a second line of hose laid from the hydrant in front of the Weeks House. Although the apartment house of R. L. Bond was close to the fire on one side, it was not damaged; the Weeks House on the other side and the barns in the rear were far enough away to be out of any particular danger.

There is no doubt but that the fire originated from the stove in the office. This was set close to a pine partition, with no protection for the wood, which undoubtedly became overheated and sprang into a blaze after those employed about the place had gone to the other part of the building.

Warren's Business Meeting.

A Total of $40,000 Appropriated For Town Expenses.

The annual business meeting of the town of Warren was held Saturday, with about 100 voters present. Joseph G. Lincoln was elected moderator. It was voted to leave the appropriation for roads in the hands of the selectmen without any restriction. It was voted to appropriate $1000 for the suppression of crime and the money was left in the hands of the selectmen, who shall act as agents or shall appoint an agent or agents to expend the same and enforce the law. It was voted to contract with the Central Massachusetts electric company for street lighting for one year. The free use of the town hall and Memorial hall was granted, as asked by the various organizations, including Clara Barton post, Clara Barton relief corps, King's Daughters, rural improvement association and hook and ladder company No. 1.

Summs aggregating $716 were accepted for the care of various lots in Pine Grove cemetery. The sum of $1500 was appropriated to buy a machine for spraying trees for the elm-tree beetle and necessary supplies and labor necessary for one season's work. It was voted as usual that the town buy surety bonds for the town clerk, treasurer and tax collector. The following appropriations were then made: Town officers, $1950; schools, $16,800; election expenses, $250; soldiers' and sailors' relief, $750; suppression of crime, $1000; library, dog tax and $400; paupers, income of farm and $2200; highways and bridges, $3200; sidewalks, $1000; fire department, $2500; care of cemetery, $370; street lights, $2700; suppression of elm-tree beetle, $1500; town hall, income and $400; board of health, $1200; interest, $800; Memorial Day, $100; contingent account, $1600; miscellaneous, $15.80; total, $40,300.

Seem to Be Most Proliferous Along Lines Followed By Autos.

Tree Warden Charles H. Keith has been making a scout this week for brown-tail moth nests, and finds them more abundant than a year ago. The greatest number he finds along the roads and streets followed by the autos. Only one nest was found in Thorndike and none in Three Rivers, though he has not finished there. In Bondsville few were discovered. A few were found in scattered places in this village, but near the Point of Rocks and Shearer's Corner a large number were found, some on very small trees. The record find was yesterday morning, where, on a small pear tree in the garden of O. P. Allen on Pleasant street 18 nests were discovered; they contained enough eggs to supply the entire village with the moth pests. It is a peculiarity of this moth that the greater number of nests are found on pear trees.

The O. P. Allen tree held the record only a short time, however, for in the afternoon, after scouting along South Main street with little success, Mr. Keith found 42 nests on two small trees—a pear and a plum—in the yard of John H. Shaw on Chestnut street, neither of the trees being larger than a man's arm. They were so thick they resembled leaves. Mr. Keith finds that many of the nests have been opened and the contents removed, the work being apparently that of some bird, and he suggests the English sparrow. If this is true, all the bird's faults will be forgiven him.

Roads Washed By Rain.

Heavy Fall of Water Tuesday Night Does Much Damage.

A rainfall of 24 hours' duration which began Tuesday afternoon caused a good deal of damage to the highways in some places and proved particularly annoying to the street railway company by washing sand on the tracks. The rain began late Tuesday afternoon, but continued with increased force until in the early hours of Wednesday morning it fell in torrents at times. As the ground was frozen hard the water had to run off on the surface, and wherever it gained a hold through or under the frost it made bad work. The worst washout in Palmer was on the hill from North Main street to the railroad tracks, where deep gullies were washed and the street railway tracks covered to a depth of two feet at the foot of the hill. Thorndike street was also washed somewhat, and the north side of the new macadam road on North Main street just west of Thorndike. A gang of men worked from 3 o'clock Wednesday morning until the middle of the forenoon to clear the tracks in the several localities. All the lines were more or less affected, and it was well into the day before the cars were running on the regular schedule.

Mill Workers Get Raise.

Notice of Readjustment of Wages for Mills in Palmer.

The operatives in the mills in Three Rivers, Thorndike and Bondsville are to have an increase in wages, according to an announcement posted Monday. The change will affect about 2200 employees. No figures were given, but it is believed that the increase will be similar to that recently granted by the other mills in Massachusetts.

Warren Mill Operatives Get Raise.

The operatives of the Sayles & Jenks mill at Warren were surprised yesterday afternoon when a notice of an increase in wages was posted in the mill. They had made no request for a raise, which is on the basis of that recently granted by the American company. All piece work receives a flat increase of 5 per cent, and the time workers receive advances ranging from 1-1/4 to two cents per hour, according to the pay now received.

HAMPDEN.

Ernest Wendler, 22, nephew of John Kaiser, died in the latter's home Monday morning of tuberculosis. The funeral was held Wednesday, Rev. C. B. Bliss officiating. Burial was in the cemetery at Pease's corner.

E. Norton Davis of Three Rivers has a number of men at work renovating the orchard of C. H. Burleigh. Mr. Davis is living in one of Mr. Burleigh's houses south of Scantic and hopes to make his home in Hampden. Mr. Burleigh will set out another peach and apple orchard this spring.

The new bridge of the street railway company over the steam railroad tracks at Main street was completed Tuesday noon with the exception of painting, which was partially completed when the rain stopped the work.

BRIMFIELD.

Men's League Meeting.

The Men's League of the Congregational church held an open meeting Tuesday evening in the church vestry, and a large number of guests were present, both men and women. The subject of the evening was "Good Citizenship" and the speakers, Mr. John Sherman of Worcester and Prof. Robson of the Baneroff School of Worcester. Mr. Sherman spoke first, showing what a help good citizenship is to the community. Mr. Sherman is a descendant of John Sherman, who was the first schoolmaster, town clerk and physician of Brimfield. Mr. Sherman, who spent his boyhood here and graduated from the Hitchcock Free Academy, is now in business in Worcester. He was the founder of the Sherman envelope company. He is also a great religious worker in and around Worcester. In opening Mr. Robson spoke on the years of close friendship between himself and Mr. Sherman and said that the citizens of Brimfield should be proud of such a man. Mr. Robson spoke of the part which the church should take in making better citizens and as an example used the church in Brimfield. "As the church overlooks the town, school-houses, library and town hall, so should its influence through the Bible help all civic work and institutions. At the close of the meeting refreshments of rolls, doughnuts and coffee were served and a social time enjoyed by all.

Citizens' Caucus.

The Citizens' caucus was held in the Town Hall Tuesday evening. Orrin Hicks was chosen moderator and William Jennings clerk. These nominations were made: Town clerk and treasurer, Miner H. Corbin; selectmen, Orrin Hicks, John Shanly, Merrick Dunham; assessor for three years, Charles C. Brown; overseers of the poor, one year, Dr. Robert V. Sawin; two years, Samuel Adams; three years, Charles C. Brown; constables, Orrin Hicks, Harry Lombard, Patrick McIntyre, Charles Filer and George E. Hitchcock; school committee, three years, John H. Noyes; tax collector, Charles S. Tarbell; library trustees, three years, Rebecca M. Lincoln and George F. Kenney.

Miss Emma A. Chapin of Springfield is the guest of Miss Margaret Dunsmore.

The Ladies' Afternoon Whist Club met at the home of Mrs. S. A. Fisk on Prospect Hill Monday afternoon.

The annual play given by the senior class of the Academy will be presented in the town hall Friday, March 22. The name of the play is "She Stoops to Conquer." The tickets, which are being sold rapidly, may be purchased by mail from Roscoe W. Nichols, East Brimfield, or through any member of the class.

THE BEST PROOF.

Palmer Citizens Cannot Doubt It.

Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they cured. The story was told to Palmer residents. Time has strengthened the evidence. Has proven the cure permanent. The testimony is from this locality. The proof convincing.

W. C. Sheldon of 84 W. Main St., Ware, Mass., says: "Weak and disordered kidneys caused me misery for years. I tried remedy after remedy, but relief did not follow. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage and always attended with a burning sensation. My back ached constantly and was weak. On a friend's advice, I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills and began their use. The first few doses relieved the pain and before long my kidneys were restored to a normal condition." (Statement given August 15, 1908.)

A LATER ENDORSEMENT.

On June 15, 1911, Mr. Sheldon was interviewed and he added to the above: "All I have previously said regarding Doan's Kidney Pills was correct and I am glad to confirm my former statement. This remedy is certainly an effective one."

Electrid Company Sold.

It is the intention of the company to pay particular attention to house and street lighting, and to that end important changes are to be made in the plant, the full nature of which have not been decided as yet. Until the changes are made, where the street light current is not as strong as it should be, "boosters" will be installed outside the village to push the current up to the proper force. In its advertisement on the eighth page the company has an attractive wiring proposition to new patrons.

Destruction of Rats.

An East Africa publication contains a description of a method of destroying rats, followed in Java, in which carbon bisulphide in employed. In carrying out the method a small quantity, usually about half a teaspoonful of the carbon bisulphide is poured into the rat hole and after waiting a few moments to let the liquid evaporate, the mixture of air and vapor is lighted, a small explosion resulting and filling the hole with poisonous gas, killing the rats instantly. Such a process practiced openly might be objectionable under some circumstances because of danger from fire resulting from the explosion and a field for invention appears to offer itself to provide some form of fire-proof gun or explosion chamber suitably formed to be inserted in the mouth of the rat hole and adapted to enclose the explosion and discharge the resulting noxious gas into the hole.—Scientific American Milton's Foresight Good.

John Milton wrote (prophetically, we grant) as follows regarding the teaching of the classics in some modern institutions: "And though a linguist should pride himself to have all the tongues that Babel cleft the world into, yet if he have not studied the solid things in them, as well as the words and lexicons, he were nothing so much to be esteemed a learned man as any yeoman or tradesman competently wise in his mother dialect only."

And Mispronounced at First.

Brevity is not so much a characteristic of American speech as might be supposed. Let me quote one example. In England we choose the short, but I will not plagiarize and say uglier, word "motor," whereas in America the word "motor" is never used, but the longer and more difficult one "automobile" is.—Rev. Dr. John Clifford of London.

Valuable Literary Find.

Some time ago an interesting literary find was made in the archives of the Bible house in London. It consisted of George Borrow's correspondence with the officials of the society during the time that he served as its agent, and comprises more than a hundred autograph letters, which are said to betray Borrow's characteristic style.

Mrs. Green's Health—
Her Own Statement.

Covington, Mo.—“Your medicine has done me more good than all the doctor's medicines. I have been taking it every month for four years because of hemorrhages, and my back was so weak I could hardly walk. I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I can stay up and do my work. I think it is the best medicine on earth for women.”

How Mrs. Cline Avoided Operation.

Brownsville, Ind.—“I can say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me more good than anything else. One doctor said I must be operated upon for a serious female trouble and that nothing could help me but an operation.”

“I had hemorrhages and at times could not get any medicine to stop them. I got in such a weak condition that I would have died if I had not got relief soon.”

“Several women who had taken your Compound, told me to try it and I did and found it to be the right medicine to build up the system and overcome female troubles.”

“I am now in great deal better health than I ever expected to be, so I think I ought to thank you for it.”—Mrs. C. L. Cline, Brownsville, Ind.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M.
Soyer, Famous London Chef.

INSURES ECONOMY OF FUEL.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

Paper bag cooking economizes fuel—the fact is demonstrable, beyond a doubt. Particularly if the fuel is gas. The figures to follow are given for gas, but are easy of translation into coal heat or even oil.

The oven of a gas range turned on full, burns twenty feet of gas an hour for each flame-bar. Commonly there are two bars—thus, the hourly consumption at full heat is forty feet. The giant burner on top likewise, at full heat, consumes twenty feet an hour, the small burners, each ten feet. Thus a stove in full commission for pot and pan cooking consumes ninety feet an hour.

Now, for paper bag cooking the oven must be lighted and turned on full for eight minutes before anything goes into it; it must also burn full strength for seven minutes longer. Thus, it consumes ten feet of gas at the outset. Turning on one burner to reduce the heat one-half at the end of the seven minute period reduces consumption to fifteen feet for the rest of the hour, making a total of twenty-five feet against forty. But roasting does not demand that a burner goes full—turning it down might save five feet in the hour. Thus the net hour-saving of gas on the oven account is ten feet.

But there are other accounts. By help of paper bags, you can not merely roast in the oven, but cook at the same time a couple of vegetables and bake a pie or pudding. With a small roast you may even cook three vegetables, thereby leaving unlighted three upper jets, which would mean a saving of thirty feet of gas an hour.

Cooking thus solely in the oven means a saving of fifty feet of gas an hour.

Nor is this even all the story. Mysteriously, things cook more quickly in bags than out of them. The saving in time is one-fifth to one-sixth. Putting this at the lowest, and estimating the whole range consumption at ninety feet, there is a saving of fifteen feet. Add them to the fifty feet already in credit, and the sum is flattering, indeed, to the paper bag.

A Little Story of Pie Baking.

I had baked a pie a la Soyer and found it good. Notwithstanding, I resolved to show myself exactly the worth of the bag-cooking.

I made up puff paste enough for three pies, rolled out the crusts and filled a pan, using cooked fresh peaches for a filling. I put it on to cook, in its naked majesty, noting the time accurately. It took ten minutes to roll crusts, fill, and put in a greased bag the second pie. The oven was so hot by that time that I slacked the heat a minute after putting in pie number two. After twenty minutes—thirty minutes from putting in the first pie—I looked in the oven. The naked pie was cooking creditably enough, yet was pale-faced, and the crust still dentable to the touch. Further, there were bubbles of syrup along sundry spaces of the edge.

I turned on a little more heat and left the two pies to cook fifteen minutes longer. The naked one was then a pale, delicate brown on top, with rather a hard undercrust. The bag was brown all over and so crisp the corners crumbled at the touch. But from it came a pie beautiful to behold—light, not pale brown, crisp and flaky as to crust, ready to leave the pan at the first tilt, for a plate.

SAVORIES FOR SUPPER.

By Nicholas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Fish Roe a la Soyer.—Place half the roe on top of a piece of buttered toast, put peeled mushroom on top, add salt and pepper to taste, and a little piece of butter. Place the other half of the roe on top of the mushroom, add a little cayenne pepper, a pinch of grated cheese (Parmesan, or any other kind), a few bread crumbs and another piece of butter. Place in buttered bag, seal up and place on broiler. Allow ten minutes in a hot oven.

Savory of Lobster.—Cut a small lobster from head to tail. Cut the flesh into small dice. Put in small stewpan with one tablespoonful of white sauce, one tablespoonful of cream; add salt and cayenne or other pepper to taste, and one teaspoonful of grated Parmesan. Mix up well, and place in the cavity of the shells. Put a little grated Parmesan on top, and a little bread crumb and butter. Put in a paper bag. Place on broiler. Allow ten minutes in hot oven.

Savory Oysters.—Take two tablespoonfuls of white sauce, one teaspoonful of grated cheese, one tablespoonful of cream, the liquor from the oysters and seasoning to taste. Take half a dozen deep oyster shells. Put a little of the above mixture at the bottom; then put the raw breaded oyster in the middle. Add a little more of the sauce on top, with a little bread crumb and a small piece of butter. Place your buttered bag on the broiler, put your oysters carefully inside, seal up and allow eight minutes in a very hot oven.

The Age of Romance

Nellie had closed the book she was reading and sat looking with unwonted seriousness at her sister, across the lawn.

Lucy, who had been engaged in coaxing the kitten into one of her doll's dresses, suddenly became aware of Nellie's studied gaze. "I worried her. Though only two years younger than her sister, Lucy had a deep-rooted respect for Nellie's opinion. Perhaps Nellie thought it very silly to dress the kitten. She held its paw through one sleeve and called out bravely: "Won't it look funny, Nell?"

Nellie continued to gaze as if lost in thought. Lucy tucked the half-dressed kitten under her arm and hurried over to Nellie's rocker.

"Are you mad, Nellie?" she asked, apprehensively.

"Why, no, dear." Nellie's superior tone implied that she had never known such a state of mind.

"Well, you're something," insisted the puzzled Lucy.

"I was just wondering whether I ought to tell you or not."

Nellie spoke in a dreamy way, still looking into the distance.

"Tell me what? Have you a secret?" breathlessly.

"Yes, a secret. I really shouldn't tell you. Sit down on the grass."

Lucy followed directions. "I'll never tell. What is it?"

Nellie began very slowly. "I've been wondering for a long time whether I ought to tell you or not—"

"Go on! Honest, I won't tell."

"Let me see. You're nine now. You'll know in a few years, anyhow. But it may make you feel bad if I tell you."

"I don't care how I feel. Go on and tell me."

Nellie clasped her hands over her knees and glanced down pensively at Lucy.

"It is all so strange," she murmured. "But you may as well know. I am not your sister! I'm an adopted child."

"You mean like Jessie out in the country?" The words came in a spasm.

"Yes. Only not like Jessie. Shall I tell you about my own parents?"

"Yes. Go on!"

"My parents were both very wealthy. I was born in Paris, France. Paris, France, is across the ocean. I lived there with them in a grand house, but they both died when I was a mere babe. The person who had charge of my wealth knew your father and mother and brought me over here for them to take care of. Do you see? I'm living just like you now, but, of course, when I'm eighteen I'll get everything I own—the grand house with the park around it and—millions of dollars, Lucy. I may go over to Paris, France, to live."

The little sister regarded her in a nervous, frightened way. Nellie's look of abstraction quite awed Lucy.

"Of course I intend to divide with you. You see, I have no relatives of my own." Nellie sighed.

"What's your real name?" Lucy asked.

"My real name isn't Nellie Smith, of course. It's Elinor De Maupret."

"Oh!"

"They'd tell you some day, anyhow. But now you know what I mean when I say, 'Some day you'll be sorry.' Would you mind seeing if I dropped my hair ribbon on the front porch? And if it isn't on the front porch run over and ask Bess Johnson if I dropped it in her yard. It's my Sunday ribbon."

For the next two days Lucy waited on Nellie hand and foot. She carried messages across the street and down the block without a word of protest. She expressed glasses of water and cookies from the kitchen to the lawn, hardly knowing what power forced her. She felt strangely inferior and awkward. She addressed Nellie stiffly and followed her at a distance with wide, frightened blue eyes. The knowledge that her father and mother "knew not that she knew" weighed upon her fearfully.

The third night after the revelation, Lucy was sitting on the veranda with her father, watching her sister play tennis with the girls across the street. For some time she sat counting her fingers with perfect self-control. But she had never been so bottled up in her life before, and when her father asked her what made her so quiet, she burst into tears. Once in his comforting arms she could not restrain herself, then—oh, treachery!—before she knew it she had given him all her share of the secret!

As she lay there quietly awaiting further light on the mystery of Nellie, she felt him shake. Looking up to see what emotion this might express, she detected a wide, satisfying grin.

"You're easy, 'cy," he told her tenderly.

Nellie rushed up the stairs a little later and kissed her father with her usual unrestrained heartiness.

"Elinor De Maupret," he said, "I wonder what your wealthy father would think of such a demonstration!" She smiled most engagingly.

"I was only fooling," she answered lightly. But at poor Lucy she cast a look of withering disdain, which was punishment enough without her scornful assurance. "Anyhow, I knew you couldn't keep it."

While looking through the house with a neighbor they discovered that the barn was on fire. The department was immediately called, but the barn was burning fiercely at the time of their arrival and it was impossible to control it. PALMER NEWS.

Election Next Monday.

License Commissioners and Selectmen
the Only Contests.

The annual election of town officers will be held next Monday. The voting will be in precincts as usual, and the polls will be opened at 6 in the morning. The principal contest will be over the election of license commissioners, and there are four candidates, Daniel J. Dunn and Horace H. Paine, present incumbents, and John W.
Fay and Harry Haley. Mr. Fay ran last year and came within a few votes of election. There are four candidates for selectmen, Harold W. Brainerd, who has served two years, and Charles D. Holden, who is finishing his first year. The other candidates are W. E.
McDonald, treasurer of the Flynt Building and Construction company of Palmer, whose friends think his business experience a valuable asset of his candidacy, and John Wilson of Three Rivers. There are only two other real contests, there being two candidates for the office of overseer of the poor—Patrick Crowley, who has served several years, and Charles Collis of Bondsville. Michael Mc-Kelligott, the present highway surveyor, will have an opponent, Charles T. Brainerd, who has held the position several times in the past. Town Clerk Foley, Town Treasurer Clough and Tax Collector Hawkes are unopposed, and there are only two candidates for the two positions on the school committee, William B. Kerigan and Dr. J. F. Roche. Samuel Phillips and F. M. Ralton are the candidates for cemetery commissioners.

The Annual Town Report.

They Will Be Distributed to Voters at the Polls Monday.

The annual report of the town officers makes an unusually bulky volume this year, comprising 198 pages,
the largest in the history of the town.
Because of a delay in getting the copy to the printer, and the size of the volume, they will not be ready for distribution until next Monday, when they will be given to voters at the polls; others will probably be mailed later to those who do not call for them at that time. One reason for the decision not to mail the reports as usual is the cost, the postage being five cents each. It has also been found that many of the voters never receive the mailed reports, as they are mailed to the post office in the precinct in which the voter votes, while he may receive his mail at another office. By the method adopted by the selectmen the reports will be received much earlier than if they were mailed.

Another Fire Last Night.

Barn and Contents on South Main Street
Go Up in Flames.

The firemen were called out about 10.50 last evening for a fire in the barn occupied by Louis Green, junk dealer, on South Main street at Tenneyville.
The structure was a mass of flames when the alarm was sounded, and but little could be done but protect the surrounding property. The building was an unusually large one and was totally destroyed, together with the contents, including a horse which had been purchased only the day before at $300, several tons of hay, a quantity of junk, harness, wagons, etc. The loss is estimated at about $3000. There is no theory as to the origin of the fire. The alarm came in rather mixed, due, it is said, to the pulling of two boxes at the same time.

The Challenge Accepted.

Ten String Bowling Match Will Be Rolled Next Wednesday.

The challenge printed in last week's Journal from Lawton and Moon of Worcester to roll Barsalow and Shearer, the champion bowling team of Palmer,
a 10-string match for a purse of $50 a side, has been accepted by the latter, and the match will be rolled on the Palmer alleys next Wednesday evening. The money will be posted before the match. The contest will be a spirited one, and a large crowd is sure to attend.

Main Street Real Estate Deal.

Arrangements were completed Tuesday whereby the Cross block on Main street passed into the hands of Whitcomb & Faulkner, who occupy a portion of it with their hardware business.
The block is one of the oldest in Palmer, and was bought by W. W.
Cross in 1865, remaining in the family since. It is a three-story brick structure, with wood additions in the rear.
The present occupants of the ground floor are Whitcomb & Faulkner, E. S.
Brooks, jeweler, the Bay State Drug Store, and Miss E. Leonard, ladies' furnishings. The Knights of Columbus have quarters in a part of the second floor, and the rest of the building is devoted to tenements.

Committee of 15 Meets Next Tuesday.

The committee of 15, appointed to consider the articles in the town warrant previous to the holding of the appropriation meeting, held a meeting Tuesday evening and appointed subcommittees to take up various matters in detail. Some of the committees—such as sewers, highways and lighting —have a considerable amount of work before them, as requests have been made for appropriations under these heads in every village of the town.
The committee will meet again next Tuesday evening in the selectmen's room in the library building in Palmer, when persons who have special bound for Springfield, where he wished to go. It was later stated that his name was William Clark, and that he lives in Springfield.

King Corn.

Corn, the gift of the new world to the old, is the king of grains. Each year some new use is found for it.
Even after everything, seemingly, has been extracted from it there is left a valuable residuum known as corn oil cake, which is sold here and abroad and is used in the fattening of sheep and other animals. Nearly 50-000,000 pounds of this material are annually shipped to Great Britain and Germany and there used by farmers, who find it cheaper than materials of a similar nature which they can grow at home.

JAMES P. LYNDE'S UNUSUAL OFFER.

Sell Dr. Howard's Specific at Half Price,
And Guarantee a Cure.

"It isn't often that we have faith enough in the medicine put up by other people to be willing to offer to refund the money if it does not cure," said James P. Lynde to a Palmer Journal man who dropped into their store, "but we are glad to sell Dr.
Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia on that basis."
The Dr. Howard Company, in order to get a quick introductory sale, authorizes us to sell their regular fifty cent bottles at half price, 25 cents, and, although we have sold a lot of it, and have guaranteed every package, not one has been brought back as unsatisfactory.

"We are still selling the specific at half price, although we cannot tell how long we shall be able to do so, and anyone who is subject to constipation, sick headache, dizziness, liver trouble, indigestion or a general played-out condition, ought to take advantage of this chance. You can tell your readers that if they are not satisfied with the specific they can come right back to my store and I will cheerfully refund their money."

Use of Checks in France.

The governor of the Banque de France has just sent to the director of the departmental branch offices a circular instructing them about the use of crossed checks. The Temps in publishing these instructions points out the advantage of the English method of employing checks and then shows how the French system of making payments immobilizes capital unproductively in purse, drawer or bank, where as these sums converted into checks would be profitable not only to their owner but also for the bank which employs them.

While the Bank of France has to face a bank note circulation of 5,000,000,000 francs and the monetary stock is 211 francs 75 centimes per head of the contributions. England, with a greater amount of business has a bank note circulation of 695,000,000 francs and a monetary stock of 84 francs 58 centimes.

Death of James Sullivan.

James Sullivan, 50, died suddenly Tuesday evening about 6:30 at his home on Church street from a shock. Mr. Sullivan, who had been employed as a section boss on the Ware River branch of the Boston and Albany for years, left his home in apparently good health at noon and when the day's work was completed, together with his section men, boarded the hand-car at Whipple's Crossing to return home. He had proceeded but a short distance when he complained to his brother Daniel, who was with the party, of not feeling well and asked that the car be stopped. His request was granted and he alighted from the car for awhile but was unable to assist himself. He was taken aboard the car by the section hands who proceeded with all possible speed to the crossing near No. 1 Mill, where he was taken to his home and where he passed away shortly. The affair was a sad blow to the family of the deceased and the community in general. Mr. Sullivan was an upright and honest citizen. He was born in Ireland, but had lived in the town since early childhood. The funeral was held from St. Mary's church Thursday morning at 9 a. m., the mass of requiem being celebrated by the pastor, Rev. P. J. Griffin. Burial was in St. Thomas' cemetery Thorndike. The deceased leaves a widow and three children, Theresa, James and Henry, besides five brothers, Jeremiah, Timothy of Palmer, Daniel, Patrick of Thorndike, Michael of Worcester; also two sisters, Mrs. Katherine Abbott of Holyoke and Mary of Palmer.

West Steadily Advancing.
Beersheba is still an outpost of civilization against Bedouin tribes. Its commercial importance is increasing rapidly, owing to waterworks which draw their supply from seven wells mentioned in Genesis. That the historic East is gradually succumbing, however, to the progressive spirit of the West is indicated by the fact that a pumping plant has been erected over Abraham's well. When the railway system now under way has been completed, it will be possible to run trains from Paris to Damascus, Jerusalem, and Mecca itself.

The Shamrock.

Three little leaves of emerald-green United on one stem
Spring forth to grow, long time ago
From out an Irish bed.

One little leaf the Thistle claimed,
The Red Rose chose one other,
And with the pure love of the third
All three were bound together.

Thus was born the Shamrock,
Sacred emblem of Faith and Love
A mystic flower, with gracious power

Shifting Ministers.

One of Wesley's reasons for shifting his preachers every three years was avowedly that they might be able to preach the same sermon over again to different congregations. He knew by experience the difficulty of sermon making. After a few weeks, he said, a preacher cannot find matter for preaching every morning and evening. "He will the people come to hear him, whereas if he never stays more than a fortnight in one place he will find plenty of matter, and the people will hear him gladly. I know that were I to preach one whole year in one place I should preach both myself and my congregation to sleep."

A BALD-HEADED WOMAN.

Shorn of Her Crown of Beauty, Loses In Love and Marriage.

Hair is certainly most necessary to woman. Who could love and marry a bald-headed woman? What charms could one array to offset such a disfigurement?

A woman's goal is usually love and marriage. Her crowning glory is her hair. The loss of her hair mars her beauty, happiness, and success. Yet there are thousands of women who are neglecting or injuring their hair to such an extent that it is only a matter of time when it will be utterly ruined.

Many women destroy the beauty of their hair through thoughtlessness or ignorance of certain facts. They use curling irons over-heated, or to excess, which destroys the natural oil of the hair, causing it to split, break, and come out. They do not shampoo their hair often enough, or too often. They use soaps or preparations which contain ingredients positively harmful to the scalp and hair.

As a result of such treatment, dandruff is created, the hair loosens, loses color, falls out, and baldness commences, unless proper and prompt precautions are taken in time. Then again, microbes and certain diseases bring about unhealthy scalp and hair conditions.

Almost any woman may rid herself of dandruff and diseased scalp and hair if she will but use the right remedy. We have that remedy, and we will positively guarantee that it will either relieve dandruff and baldness or it will not cost the user anything.

That's a pretty broad statement, but we will back it and prove it with our own money. We will return your money if you do not find that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is an entirely satisfactory remedy that will promote hair growth and overcome scalp and hair troubles; that it will grow hair even on bald heads, unless all life in the hair roots has been extinguished, the follicles closed, and the scalp is glazed and shiny. It gets its name from the fact that it grew hair in 93 out of 100 cases, where it received a thoroughly hard, impartial, and practical test.

We want you to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic at our risk. You surely cannot lose anything by doing so, while you have everything to gain. You had better think this over, and then come in and see us about this offer. You will be well repaid for your visit to our store. Remember, you can get Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store.

From the Plain Tailored to the Exclusive Adaptations of Foreign Born Models == Are Here in Most Comprehensive Array

It's safe to say that at no other time of the year can suit purchases be made to better advantage than right now. This is due to two reasons. One, you have for selection the very cream of the season's new models, and secondly, if alterations are to be made, their execution is more carefully carried out than in the haste and confusion of an over-crowded workroom. So with Easter but a few weeks away, we make an appeal for early purchase. Our stocks are wonderfully complete and present for your selection a breadth of assortment rarely excelled.

Splendidly Tailored Suits at $17.50 and $18.75

Our Great Sale of Art Embroideries

And Their Requisites Continues with Value Giving That's Rarely Excelled.

The sacrifice of our Art Department and the offering of its wares at away-down prices is a premium to pay for added room of no little importance. But our Millinery Section, to accomplish the task we've laid out for it the coming season—makes this move imperative. It necessitates quick and decisive action. The price lever is the only alternative in either case. To what extent we've used it is best expressed in this brief quotation:—

Fancy Linen Hand Bags in tans, stamped with handsome designs of 25c and 39c the conventional type, 50c and 75c values, 25c and 39c

27-inch Linen Centerpieces, stamped in designs of the most beautiful floral and conventional effects. Regular 75c values, at 49c

The beginning of the end.
And, what an end!

A glorious finish to the greatest weekly newspaper contest ever begun and carried to completion in this section. The big field of candidates is working to-day with double efforts and from now until Wednesday night their efforts will be tripled, quadrupled, manifold in fact a hundredfold by friends also at work.

Just to illustrate: This morning a woman stopped one of the Journal's men on the street and handed him one dollar and seventy-five cents to pay for a year's subscription to the Palmer Journal. She said they had already subscribed two years in advance, but made it three straight to help a candidate. The Palmer Journal has been a regular visitor to this family for years and they will take it in the future from generation to generation.

It is this firm hold the Palmer Journal has upon the affections of their readers that inspires to greater efforts to be worthy of such confidence.

The $250 Cash, Diamond Rings and Gold Watches to be given the winners has resulted in the most stupendous subscription contest in the history of this section. At the half-way stage it has broken the record contest in this part. Now, it surpasses by far any contest and the end is not yet.

Not yet, but soon. For the hour has almost struck. Wednesday night at eight it will be all over. Work for the night is coming. Candidates themselves will determine the winners by their work. It's a working contest.
The grandest prizes ever offered are the rewards, but they are the rewards of hard work. The hardest workers will win $250 Cash, Diamond Rings and Gold Watches. If any candidate has fallen short and not worked as hard as he or she should in the past they can yet win out by hard work between now and Wednesday night.

Nobody wants to be a good loser unless they find it impossible to be a good winner, therefore, don't waste one single minute thinking what you would do if you lose, but take every precaution to assure yourself a place among the winners. We want everyone to come in with a big bunch of subscriptions. Those who do are almost sure to win the prize of their choice.

All Over at Eight O'clock.

It will be all over Wednesday night at eight o'clock but the shouting,
That can't come until the last vote is counted and recorded, for then only a decision can be reached and without that what use is there in shouting.

There is no telling who will do the shouting. The contest department doesn't know, neither does any one else. Rumors of what such a candidate has in the way of votes will be rife but they should be treated as rumors.

which could only be reached by climbing a dingy flight of stairs. The new store is easily accessible for everyone, and will be made one of the most

10TH ANNIVERSARY OF ORGANIZATION.

The tenth anniversary of the formaobserved with an appropriate program last Friday afternoon at the home of Street Railway Troubles.

Five Cars Derailed as Result of Last Friday's Storm.

The street railway company had its full share of troubles with the storm of last Friday, which for a time in the latter part of the afternoon resembled a miniature cloud-burst. Five cars were off the track at one time, owing to sand on the rails, and the service was considerably demoralized for a time, through no fault of the railroad officials.

The first car to start on an overland trip was the 5.45 out of Palmer for Springfield. As it left the private land at Green's the forward truck left the rails, shot across the road and dropped down the bank; the end of the car tipped somewhat, but the slope was not steep enough for it to be dangerous.
This was at 6.05 and at 6.15 a car left the rails opposite the railroad station at North Wilbraham. There was no car between the two and traffic on that line was at a standstill. Orders were at once given to send passengers from North Wilbraham to Palmer by steam, and from Palmer west by steam, until the road was clear again. This was not until late in the night, a wrecking car and crew coming from Springfield to the aid of the car at Green's; the end of the car was lifted and placed on a temporary truck, and reached the barn in Palmer the next morning about 8 o'clock.

The Bondsboro car was reported off about 6.10 at the Yellow block in Thorndike, and 6.33 another took to the highway at the high school building on Thorndike street in Palmer.
At 7 one left the rails at the Gibbs crossing on the Ware line. This settled down into the soft sand and had to be shoveled out later. On the Thorndike and Ware lines there were trolley express cars back of the derailed passenger cars and they were used to transport passengers until the regular cars were running again. All the lines were cleared during the night except that at Green's, although the positions of the cars rendered it impossible to work more than two wrecking crews. In all the derailments no one was hurt with the exception of one man, whose leg was slightly wrenched.

Slight Blaze Monday.

Started By Spark From Locomotive.
Quick Time By Truck.

The firemen were called out again about 3 o'clock Monday afternoon for a blaze on the roof of the former bakery building on Church street, now owned by Lewis Conant. The building is unoccupied at present, but Mr. Conant was at work on it at the time; he knew nothing of the fire until told by persons on the street.
The blaze had started from a spark from a locomotive probably, and a small hole was burned through the shingles and boarding underneath.
The fire was extinguished with small chemical extinguishers carried on the auto truck; the firemen took a line of hose into the building with a shut-off nozzle attached, but as no water was needed there it was not used and no damage was done from it. The auto truck again demonstrated the wisdom of its purchase. In spite of the mud on the streets the truck was at the fire in five minutes after the first stroke of the fire alarm. It reached the fire before the horses which were to haul the combination hose and ladder wagon left the barn, and it was 10 minutes from the alarm before they reached the fire with that piece of apparatus. The steamer came a little later but fortunately was not needed.

Strike at West Warren.

Weavers Want More Pay Than the Increase Already Granted.

About 50 weavers in the No. 3 mill of the Thorndike Company at West Warren went on a strike Monday, and were joined Tuesday by 200 weavers from No. 1 mill. In the afternoon they were joined by many in other departments of the mills, and the authorities at once proceeded to shut down all the power in mills No. 1, 2 and 3, and in No. 4 mill, east of the village.

The strike is the result of dissatisfaction over the increase in wages, the trouble being over one style of work only. They demanded three-quarters of a cent a cut more than was given in the general raise. The mill authorities state that the increases were made after careful study of the conditions and that, as in other mills, the prices offered were as equitable to all the operatives as could be determined.

A short meeting of the operatives was held Tuesday afternoon and they decided to hold together. In order to be prepared for any possible outbreak, 25 special police were sworn in yesterday morning.

member of the school committee, but this is his first experience as one of the "Town fathers." The fourth candidate, John Wilson, was only 46 votes behind. The contest for the position of highway surveyor was close, Michael McKelligott retaining the position by the narrow lead of eight votes. Patrick Crowley succeeds himself as overseer of the poor by a lead of 49 over his opponent, Charles Collis. Daniel J.
Dunn, a member of the license commission for the past two years, falls by the wayside and there are two new members, John W. Fay and Harry Haley. Samuel Phillips wins a place on the board of cemetery commissioners, replacing F. M. Ralston. The town remains in the license column, the majority being 441, an increase of 31 over last year.

About the usual vote was cast, a total of 1130. B was the first precinct to bring last at 6.16.

The selectmen held a meeting Monday evening and organized with H. W.
Brainerd as chairman and C. D. Holden as clerk. They made the following appointments: Night police, T.
J. Crimmins, J. F. Mansfield, M. J.
Sullivan; special officers, C. B.
Thomas, J. F. Luman, M. Roehle, A.
P. Bennett; burial agent, H. S. Hobson; forest warden, James Summers; moth inspector, C. H. Keith. The meetings of the board will be held on Thursday evenings, as during the past year, and the next meeting will be on Thursday evening next week.

Manager Parsons has completed equipping it with fixtures, lights, signs, etc.
His aim is to make it the most inviting spot in the centre of the town—where people can drop in and enjoy the display, whether they are customers or not. This is the kind of place the company thinks an electric store should be.
Another visible proof of the new management's advent is in the presence of three new automobiles in Palmer, a touring car, a runabout, and an auto truck. The touring car and the runabout are for the use of the manager and his men who will be enabled, by means of the machines, to give prompt and thorough attention to all the business of the company and all the needs of the customers wherever and whenever occasion may demand.
The motor truck has been purchased to facilitate the carrying of supplies and gangs of men from point to point, so that no time may be lost in improving the lines and building new constructions.

The new truck has even now become very useful, for the company has already begun the work of changing its entire distribution system. Manager Parsons has a large force of linemen at work changing transformer locations and putting in heavier secondaries so that a higher voltage may be obtained and the service thereby vastly improved.

To insure the same and quick accomplishment of this end Mr. Parsons has recruited a large number of skilled linemen from Springfield and Worcester, who have materially reinforced the local gang and made it possible to undertake this enormous job with assurance of a rapid and successful accomplishment.

Mr. Parsons has also created a complaint department which will have at its disposal all necessary supplies for repairing unsatisfactory services at a moment's notice. The stock room for this department is located in Holbrook's barn on Main street, which has also been turned into a garage for the company's cars. Thus the repair men have their supplies and their transportation at hand so that they can care for any trouble immediately, no matter how distant it may be.

The management has installed a new business department under the charge of an experienced solicitor, T. J. Collins of Boston. Mr. Collins has several men working with him who will take care of all orders for service and "rush" them with all possible speed.

Hampden Town Meeting.

The town meeting in Hampden Monday resulted in the election of the following officers: Moderator, A.
F. Ballard; town clerk, C. I. Burleigh; treasurer, C. I. Burleigh; tax collector, Walter S. Beebe; selectmen and overseers of poor, N. M.
Carew, L. O. Howlett, Patrick E. Wall; assessor, John Bartlett; school committee, Marcus S. Beebe; constables, Matthias Casey, E. P. Lyons, A. H.

Mrs. J. C. Wing on Central street, a generous proportion of the members being present. A pleasing feature was the presence of all the former presidents of the club but three, one of whom is deceased.

Mrs. J. T. Tipper, president of the club, called the assemblage to order, after which there was a piano duet by Mrs. Frank S. Keith and Mrs. Vernon C. Faunce. As first president of the club, Mrs. Mary E. Hobbs of Brookline congratulated the club members on the success of the organization and expressed best wishes for continued prosperity. Mrs. Minnie F. McGregory of Hamilton, N. Y., the second president, was unable to be present, but sent a letter containing congratulations and best wishes. The third president, Miss Helen L. Robinson, read numerous clippings from the Journal giving a history of the organization of the club which proved extremely interesting; they showed that 32 were present at the formation, and that 79 were admitted as charter members. Mrs.
Blanche H. Rathbone, who followed Miss Robinson, spoke entertainingly of the work and incidents under her regime. The next president, Mrs.
Rachel B. Holbrook, was unable to be present. The next presiding officer was Mrs. Margaret L. Bard, the only one to have died, and her work was touchingly alluded to by Mrs. Katherine C.
Holden, the next president; Mrs.
Holden also alluded to the society for district nursing, which the club stood sponsor for and which took place during her term of office. The last of the speakers was Mrs. Katherine B. Holbrook, the president of last year.

After a vocal solo by Miss Doris Paine, Mrs. Ada Wing Mead of Providence, R. I., under whose inspiration the club was founded, gave a most interesting talk of nearly an hour on the life and work of Mrs. Ellen H. Richards, for 40 years instructor in chemistry in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and pioneer in the science of household economy. A social hour followed, during which refreshments were served.

The Girl in Yellow

By Louise Merrifield

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

It was dark and fragrant in the garden. Nevin left the crowded rooms with a quick sense of relief. He hated dancing with a lot of other girls when the only one he wanted avoided him. But he had caught her at last. And he was sure that no one would miss either of them.

Down through the shadowy alleys of shrubbery he strolled keeping in view the faint gleam of her gown. It was a pale yellow one. Mightily few girls wore yellow. It suited Irma's dark, piquant face perfectly. And she wore no jewels. He had noticed that also.

Nevin knew that she must have seen him. His cadet suit would have betrayed him if nothing else in the moonlight. But even the moon barely gave any light here under the pines. He set his teeth and followed the trail desperately.

For four weeks the cadets had encamped at Point of Pines and had owned the place, but none of the boys had received a worse wound in the lists of love than Ted Nevin.

"You've got about as much show as Puffy Blake," the boys told him. Puffy was the homeliest and happiest boy in the troop, and absolutely impervious to love. "You pick out your colonel's niece and you're only a year out of the Point."

"The old man's got five nieces and three daughters."

"As if that lessened their value. Ted, lad. Go to child; go to."

But Ted had met her eyes and he was not afraid. Diligently he attached himself to the entourage of the colonel's wife. Valiantly he became tame cat, and fetched and carried for all of her three grown-up daughters, and some of the other nieces, all to get a quick, flashing smile and a shy, sidelong glance of amused understanding from Irma's eyes. Understand? Of course, she did. Who could help it, when his hungry, pleading gaze haunted her day after day?—and the touch of his hand was different from all other hands, when they happened to dance together. They did not talk while they danced, and Irma smiled when she thought of those dances. Even Aunt Frances could not guess the possibilities of a dance for getting better acquainted, even when one did not talk.

Nevin Knew That She Must Have Seen Him.

But this was positively the only opportunity he had had of seeing her alone, and Ted seized it. Yet when he finally caught up with her he was speechless. She had stopped, too, at sound of his hurrying footsteps in the narrow, hedge-bordered walk. It was so dark he could not see her face, and even that she turned from him before he knew or thought of what he would do next, he had reached out and taken her hands. She dropped her head and Ted bent quickly and kissed her—not on the lips. She gave him no chance, but on the cheek, her dear, soft cheek, with the fluffy, fragrant hair curling around it.

And then, just as he was about to speak, there came the sound of laughter and merry, girlish voices in the garden close by.

"Where are you?" they called. "We're going down to the shore. It's too warm to dance."

The next instant Ted found himself alone. The yellow dress had vanished precipitately down the dark pathway, and he went back to the hotel, glowing, triumphant and full of such assurance that when he saw the colonel's wife he went over and fanned her as if he already called her aunt.

It was only after their next waltz that he found a chance of speaking to Irma. She seemed so self-possessed and gentle that he envied her. He almost trembled as he asked her if she would go into the garden with him. He wondered how she could help hearing his heart beat as they passed away from the crowd together.

There was a Roman seat out on the terraces that overlooked the sea, and Ted led her there.

"I am afraid Aunt Frances will miss me," Irma said, doubtfully. "We should have asked her first, I think."

"Nonsense. I left her talking to four subs. She's good for an hour. Irma, you darling, isn't it great to be alone for half a minute. Great Scott, but I've worked for this."

Boysishly, he threw his hat on the ground and turned to her.

"I never was sure until tonight, you know."

"Sure of what?"

"Of you, just you," he said softly, under his breath.

"I think you are almost too sure, don't you, Mr. Nevin?" Irma asked demurely.

"Don't scold. I'll be humble and good. But you and I know, don't we, dear? We've known all the while, every time we met, and every time we danced together, every time you looked at me. You did care, didn't you? Look at me now. I can see your eyes in the moonlight, and tell, Irma."

The girl caught her breath, and leaned back from his reaching, eager arms, but they caught her and drew her close to him. When he raised his head from hers his voice sounded husky and with a new ring of manliness.

"I'm going to the colonel in the morning. I'm twenty-four, and will have my commission this year, and, by Jove, we'll be married as soon as he'll let you. Will you take this world-wide trail with me, love?"

She pushed him back from her laughingly, her eyes full of tears.

"That's the nearest approach you've made to a real proposal of marriage sir, do you realize it?" she asked. "You take a great deal for granted, sir, after one kiss."

"Two," he corrected.

"One. Of course—it was—it was—long enough for two, but it was only one, really."

Ted hesitated, and thought hard.

"Did I only kiss you once tonight, Irma?" he asked.

"You should know."

"Oh, of course, of course, I should know. Guess I do know, you sweet-heart," he added fervently.

"There comes the girls," whispered Irma, suddenly. "They've been down to the beach for a stroll. I think you know them all excepting Phyllis, my other cousin; the girl in yellow."

Very dignified Ted looked as he stood up to face the ordeal when the flock of girls came up to them. Much he trusted to the discretion of Phyllis, much to the memory of Phyllis, but even he was not prepared for the frank, cheery greeting he got from this new cousin of his love's.

"I'm ever so pleased to meet Mr. Nevin; but you won't mind if I forget you, will you? I shall only keep track of you boys all in gray uniform. Why, I was just telling the girl. A gray uniform followed me out into the garden and kissed me without a blessed word and then vanished. How can I find out who wore it? Isn't it a mystery and a romance, all in one?"

"It's a tragedy," said Ted fervently, but Irma's hand closed on his arm.

"I wouldn't look too closely, Phyllis," she said, shyly. "You know love is blind."

NEW KINK FOR THE DRUMMER

Moving Picture Machines to Help Them Sell Goods Is the Latest Brought Out.

To bring a machine to the buyer's office and to show it in action without the noise and grime of the factory is virtually what is suggested by an Indianapolis company. The company manufactures a motion picture machine of a size fitting into a salesman's traveling case.

In addition to enabling the salesman to enter a prospect's office and give a demonstration of the machine in operation, says the Iron Age, films may be shipped to prospective buyers when it may not be necessary to send the entire machine. Then the film can be shown at the regular motion picture institution of the neighborhood at little cost.

The picture machine is equipped with an attachment for showing single slides, which of course may be colored or may be reproductions of drawings to elucidate features of the design not conveniently explained with the motion picture. Of course with a motion picture machine the reels may be stopped at any point and a definite operation studied with care.

The possibilities of the application of the motion picture machine are of course great and it is interesting to add that the company has had such a degree of success in introducing the machine that on October 1 it expects to have a plant of double present capacity for turning out films, slides and picture machines.

Lost on Steamship.

A new plot for the writers of sea tales became public property the other day when the Olympic, the largest ocean liner in the world, arrived at New York and reported that two stowaways found aboard soon after the liner left Southampton, England, broke out of the ship's jail and managed so successfully to hide themselves in the vessel's vast interior that they had not been discovered up to the time the passengers landed. The two stowaways after their discovery were locked in a third-class stateroom. They escaped and disappeared somewhere within the ten miles hiding space which the Olympic's myriad passages and places of concealment present. Every exit was closely guarded as the passengers disembarked, but no trace was found of the wily stowaways. If they escape altogether their adventure will become an epic in sea tales.

As there were three of the men they proved too much for Mr. Hubbard, but his call for help was heard by Roy Needham, who went to his assistance. The men disappeared when they heard the latter coming and Mr. Hubbard escaped with a few bruises.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

COOKING THE LORDLY TURKEY.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

The lord of the winter party or wedding anniversary feast is, of course, the turkey—and know ye, good housewives, one and all, that he can be cooked to a delicious turn by M. Soyer's method of paper bag cooking! In fact, the entire dinner can be prepared and cooked to perfection in paper bags, and after it has been eaten to the last turkey bone and last slice of pumpkin pie, the good housewife will not be confronted by a great pile of pots and pans to be cleaned—a task that has taken the edge off the happiness of many a housewife who has served one of her old-time famous meals for her guests, or her children back home to help the old folks celebrate their anniversary.

Grape fruit, with rum, is, to my mind, the ideal appetizer, but if oysters are insisted upon, put three small raw ones in the middle of the prepared fruit and season with salt, pepper, Worcester sauce and tobacco.

Keep the oysters very cold, and add them to the fruit very shortly before serving, thus the two flavors remain distinct to accent rather than to muddle each other.

Salted Nuts—I made two bags—almonds and pecans—and hereafter shall never buy them ready prepared. The almonds were blanched and dried, the pecans, bought ready hulled, picked over, scalded by pouring boiling water through them in a colander, and instantly dried. Then both were put in thickly-buttered bags, set in a very hot oven for half a minute, then the heat was reduced three-quarters, and the nuts left to brown for ten minutes. They came out crisp and beautiful, needing only a sprinkling of salt.

The Toasted Crackers I prepared were tiny oyster crackers, as fresh as possible. They were put in buttered bag, lightly sprinkled after they were in, with melted butter skimmed clean of froth, then given a tablespoonful of grated Parmesan, which was shaken well through them before sealing the bag. Sealed, it went into a very hot oven, which after two minutes had the heat turned as low as possible. Eight minutes of it made them not quite brown enough—a peep-hole in the bag top assured me of that—so I left them in three minutes longer. A few of them stuck together, but in the main, they looked as good as they tasted.

The Turkey—Choose him as young, as tender, as fresh as you can. But if by ill chance you must take an old bird, therefore a tough one, then, indeed, you will find in paper bag cooking, surcease from the sorrow of toughness. A tough bird will require a lot of grease in the bag with it, also long and slow cooking. But the end will crown the means—he will come forth tender and delicious, also well browned, but not too brown, and simply bursting with juice. Extra care must be taken in trussing him—tie down legs and wings beyond any possibility of springing. Tough fowls have a way of stretching out their joints under the influence of heat, that, without this precaution, may make the legs and wings dangerous to the integrity of the bag.

Get the bird in hand early—the night before if possible. If he comes drawn, so much the better; if in a state of nature, pick, draw and singe at once, taking pains to get off all pinfeathers, and cutting out the oil-bag upon the "parson's nose"—otherwise known as the root of the tail feathers. Wash the bird thoroughly in very cold water. If there is the least sour smell, scald out by pouring through boiling soda water, followed by a cold rinse water. Drain well, wipe dry, inside and out, salt very lightly, and hang up in a cold place until morning—outside, unless the temperature is below freezing, or there is danger of thieves, four of two-footed. A city housewife will do well to cover the turkey while thus hanging out with either a loose-fitting grocery paper bag or a square crash or cheese cloth. This keeps away soot and dust, which, once settled on the skin, defy washing off. Get the stuffing ready before taking in the bird. Dash cold water over and through it before putting in the stuffing, wipe inside and out with a soft, damp cloth, then resalt but very lightly outside and in.

Since the turkey is apt to require the whole oven and long, slow cooking, better put him on early, and take him up before beginning the other things.

At The Nickel Show

Little Girl—Mamma, is it going to begin now? Is it?

Mamma—Yes, dear. Hush!

Little Girl—Mamma, what makes that lady wear her hair like that? Oh, what are those men doing in the picture?

Mamma—It's in Africa. He's reading a letter.

Little Girl—Who's it from? His mamma?

Mamma—No, it's to his sister. He's telling her to come down to see him.

A friend of his, named Joe, will see that she gets there safely.

Girl in front—Oh, ain't that swell? Gee, I'd like to go on that boat! Some class!

Little Girl—Mamma, is that his sister? And, mamma, where did that man come from?

Mamma—'Sh! One of the men named Joe and the other's a new friend she has just met.

Little Girl—Ooh, mamma, does she like him? Does she, mamma?

Mamma—I guess so. 'Sh! Evidently that other fellow wants her to talk to him, Sally. How silly he acts!

Little Girl—Was he silly, mamma? Was he?

Mamma—I was speaking of your Aunt Sally. Be quiet, child.

Girl at the Back—What do they bring such little kids for, anyhow?

Little Girl—What is it? Oh, mamma, what is it? Lookit! Lookit!

Mamma—Hush! They're just getting shipwrecked, that's all. It's nothing.

Little Girl—Oh, what is shipwrecked? What is it, mamma? Does it mean getting spilled out like that?

There goes the silly man! Ooh! Look at the water? Where'd that man go?

Mamma—He fell in, that's all. Now, see, they'll be saved. They've been three days on the life raft.

Little Girl—Oh, mamma, where'll they get anything to eat?

Girl in front—Gee, ain't this swell? I hope that fresh kid gets drowned.

Little Girl—What's the matter with Joe? What makes the new man act so?

Mamma—Joe hasn't been nice and the new man makes him behave by hitting him. See, now, they come safe to shore.

Little Girl—Will they have something to eat now, mamma? Will they?

Mamma—Yes, they will. See, they're building a fire.

Little Girl—O-ooh, mamma! Are those real lions? Oh, where did they get 'em?

Mamma—Out of some show, I guess. Say, Sally, that certainly is a fine stockade. Pretty, ain't it?

Little Girl—What makes the man take his ax?

Mamma—He's the new man. He's going to chop trees. They'll build a bonfire on the shore so that ships can see they are there and pick them up.

Little Girl—I guess he's gone to chop now and left Joe, ain't he? Oh, Joe's going to sleep. Why doesn't the girl tell him to look out? Oh, here comes a lion! Oh, mamma, why doesn't the chopper chop the lions?

Oh, mamma, what are the lions doing? What are they doing?

Mamma—Don't say anything, Sally. I can't explain that they're eating him, can I?

Little Girl—Oh, eating who? Oh, mercy, why doesn't the chopper come? Mamma—Here he comes. It's all right.

Little Girl—What's the chopper carrying away? What's he taking Joe off for? Is he all dead from the lions? Oh, dear, why didn't he chop 'em? How long have they got to stay there, just the girl and the new man?

Mamma—Two years, it says.

Little Girl—Ain't they going to have anything to eat for two years?

Girl in front—Oh, see, her brother hears that their signals have been seen! I was getting scared for fear they weren't ever going to find them.

Little Girl—Oh, look at the man and the elephant! Are they good men, mamma?

Mamma—Yes, yes, it's her brother come to look for her.

Little Girl—Oh, goody, goody! Why do they bring the elephant? Why do they?

Mamma—To ride on, of course. Don't be foolish.

Little Girl—Oh, see the lions coming after 'em! O-ooh, lookit! Lookit! Why doesn't the chopper chop 'em? Why doesn't he?

Mamma—It does look like a tight place, doesn't it, Sally? He can't shoot both those lions with one arrow.

Little Girl—Oh, why hasn't he got more? When they get eaten all up will they go to heaven? Will they?

Mamma—Here comes her brother. My, but that was a close call! Look at those lions fall over! Good shots, weren't they?

Little Girl—Oh, mamma, why does she kiss him? Why does she? Does she like him better'n the chopper? Oh, does she?

Mamma—It's her brother, child. Hush!

Little Girl—Oh, that's all. Oh, what became of it?

Girl at the Back—Oh, shucks! What ever did they shut it off so fast for? I wanted to see the brother and sister glad to see each other. I wonder if she married the other man.

The man who despises true things seldom gets rich.

WARE.

Death of Mrs. Margaret Bell.

Mrs. Margaret Bell, 71, wife of Joseph Bell, died suddenly Tuesday at her home on Clifford avenue. She had been in ill health for some time, but was about as usual and attended church Sunday. She complained of feeling ill Tuesday morning after she arose. She ate a light breakfast and a few minutes later a convulsive attack caused unconsciousness, from which she never recovered. Dr. W. W. Miner, medical examiner, was called and pronounced death due to heart disease. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon from the home.

William and Clifford Bebeault have sold their farm on the road to the old poor farm to Wilfred Chicoine of North street.

The body of Samuel E. Sprague, who died in Orange Friday, was brought to Ware Monday for burial in Aspen Grove cemetery. Mr. Sprague was an old and well-known resident of Ware for many years, leaving about 12 years ago to make his home with his daughter.

WARREN.

Barrett-Creswell.

The marriage of Miss Annie Barrett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barrett of West Brookfield, and A. C. Creswell of West Brookfield took place Wednesday evening at the home of Rev. Olney I. Darling of Richardson street. George W. Creswell acted as best man and Miss Ruby Gilbert was maid of honor. Rev. Mr. Darling performed the ceremony. After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Creswell will live in West Brookfield.

At a regular meeting of King Solomon chapter of Masons Tuesday evening, the Mark degree was conferred.

A grass fire near the bridge just west of the Warren station Tuesday evening caused some excitement but little damage.

William F. Duncan attended the banquet of the Irish charitable society at Hotel Somerset in Boston Monday evening.

Lewis Mason and Everett P. Sheridan have been chosen delegates from Court Warren, F. of A., to attend the annual convention in North Adams in May. The alternates are Henry Forant and John Ryan.

The Warren, Brookfield and Spencer street railway have been having a hard time this week to maintain their schedule, owing to the frost coming out of the ground, the cars being derailed by the spreading of the rails and uneven rails. The cars missed one or two trips Monday and several trips were lost Tuesday afternoon and evening.

Freight engine No. 3635, in charge of Conductor Sands, ran off the track at Sayles & Jenks' mill Tuesday morning about 11.30, and as the cars of the east-bound local freight had been left upon the main line the noon passenger train, No. 6, east bound, was delayed a half hour until the engine was replaced upon the rails and was able to draw its train out of the way.

Light of the Firefly.

The statement that the light of fireflies and other phosphorescent animals is produced without any sensible degree of heat has often been repeated without any information as to the quantity of heat that would be required to produce a similar amount of light by artificial methods. This information is supplied by Professor McIntosh. He says that a temperature approaching 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit would be necessary to make a light equivalent to that emitted by an ordinary firefly. The enormous waste in all industrial methods of producing light is a matter of common knowledge, and the example of the firefly remains unutilized by man. The very simplicity of the mechanism employed by nature in phosphorescent animals is baffling. Harper's Weekly.

Prize Speaking Contest.

To Be Held in Memorial Hall the Last Week in April.

Much interest is being shown in the high school prize speaking contest that will be held the last week of this term, the week of April 22d, in Memorial hall. This contest is open to the members of the sophomore class of the Palmer high school. The reason for limiting it to this class is that the work of rhetoricals is begun in this year. Twenty members of the class have volunteered to participate and are now being trained by Miss Jennie M. Linton of the English department of the high school. A little later a preliminary speaking contest will be held in the high school and five boys and five girls will be selected for the final contest. There will be two parts to the program, a contest for the boys and a contest for the girls, with musical selections between the two. Two firsts and two second prizes will be offered, a first and second prize for the two boys who make the best showing, and a first and second prize to be awarded two girls upon the same basis. The first prizes will be five-dollar gold pieces; the second prizes two and one-half dollars in gold. The fifteen dollars in gold was placed in the hands of the school officials to be used for some such purpose, by Dr. G. A. Moore of Palmer, who was prompted to such action by his interest in the schools in general and particularly in work of this character. Announcement as to judges, exact date, and other matters pertaining to the contest will be made later.

Will Finish Work To-Night.

Committee of 15 Still Has Some Knotty Problems to Solve.

The committee of 15 appointed to consider and recommend on the articles in the town warrant calling for appropriations, held a second meeting Tuesday evening. They were unable to finish the work however, and another meeting will be held to-night.

There is naturally much interest and speculation as to what the committee will recommend, especially in cases where several sections of the town desire much the same thing, such as macadam roads and sewers, and it is a foregone conclusion that some of them will be reported adversely upon. There are those who believe that the committee should make a report—or make the results of their findings public—before the town meeting; they say that it is not possible for the committee to secure all the information on some subjects, and that a knowledge of what they are to recommend will tend to bring out a larger attendance of voters and a more thorough discussion along many lines. Because of the declaration to give any advance information, the committee is looked on with distrust as a star-chamber body by numerous of the voters. While following the usual custom this year, reports which have come from the meetings make it certain that some of the recommendations to be made are pretty sure to stir up a good deal of discussion next Monday.

Fire Hydrants Frozen.

Palmer Water Company Finds Two Which Needed Thawing Out.

An attempt to use the fire hydrants at the corner of Main and Thorndike streets last Friday morning to flush a sewer revealed the fact that it was frozen and useless. The Palmer Water company set at work at once to remedy the difficulty, and had it thawed out by the use of hot water some time Saturday. One on North Main street near the A. T. Wing house was also found frozen, and this was put in condition for use as quickly as possible.

For National Republican Convention.

The Taft managers in the second congressional district, in looking about for delegates to send to the national convention, have picked David F. Dillon of Palmer as one of the alternates.

Brook Trout Fry Placed.

Only About 25 Per Cent of Them Expected to Survive.

Last Saturday the fish and game commissioners liberated 165,000 brook trout fry in streams in this vicinity, and it is expected that about 25 per cent of them will make a live of it. While the commission intends to raise the trout to fingerling size before planting them just as soon as possible, they are unable to do so just now, and the young fry have to be liberated and allowed to take their chances.

Failed to Show Up.

Worcester Bowling Challengers Fail to Keep Engagement.

Lawton and Moon, the Worcester challengers of Barsalow and Shearer, the champions of Palmer, to a ten-string match, which was supposedly arranged for Tuesday evening, failed to put in an appearance, consequently the Palmer men still retain the honors they secured some time since.

High School Baseball Team.

A meeting of the boys of the high school was held Monday to discuss the baseball situation. It was decided to have a team, and Principal Lee T. Gray was elected manager and George Summers assistant manager. It is proposed to have a try-out as early in April as the ground will permit. It is also hoped that a coach may be secured for the team. Thomas Cole was elected vice president of the athletic association in place of Isaac Cole, who has left school.

Interesting Lecture Next Week.

The Men's League has arranged with W. S. C. Russell of Springfield to give his illustrated lecture on Iceland in the Congregational church next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. The ladies will be welcome to this lecture, which is said by those who have heard it to be intensely interesting. On account of the expense connected with the lecture a silver offering will be taken during the evening.

Woman's Club Will Entertain.

The Palmer Woman's club will entertain the members of the Warren and Ludlow clubs in the parlors of the Congregational church next Tuesday afternoon at a special meeting, when there will be an address by Mrs. Henry Coolidge Mulligan, president of the Massachusetts State Federation of women's clubs. Refreshments will be served.

The Palmer friends of Irving R. Shaw, who is now studying at the Boston Law school, will be interested to learn that he has been elected president of the Republican club of the law school. Mr. Shaw is a graduate of Palmer high school and Taft's college.

The fire department was called out Wednesday noon to extinguish a grass fire on North Main street, on the E. Brown property, east of the residence of Charles F. Grosvenor. It was extinguished with no damage. The blaze was started by a spark from a passing locomotive.

James Du Fresnois was sentenced to three months in the house of correction Wednesday on a charge of abandoning a minor child. The charge was brought under the new law of 1911. Du Fresnois left the child in July and has just been found. The boy was brought before the court Saturday and was bound over to the state board.

In the district court Wednesday morning six Poles were found guilty of disturbing the peace. They were arrested in Bondsville the night before by Officer Mansfield. Sentences were imposed as follows: Mareian Midura, 30 days in the house of correction; Joseph Stryehrz, $25; Joseph Lapa, $25; Michael Stryehrz, $10; Michael Milutski, $5; Joseph Ubon, $5.

The ladies of the Baptist church will hold a silver tea in the church parlors next Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 7:30 o'clock. During the time the tea is being served there will be a meeting devoted to missions, with a varied and interesting program. At 7:30 o'clock there will be a talk by Mrs. George M.

Darby of Holyoke on "Missions." Other speakers will be announced later. The program at both sessions will be instructive and will well repay the attendance of any interested in missions. The public are cordially invited to both services.

Her Restful Summer

"This going away for the summer," announced Whatcher at the beginning of the season, "is merely a fad. Why go away to some swampy lake and contract typhoid from the water supply and quarrel with all the other women there and have nerves over John-nie's tendency to explore the bottom of the lake and Mamie's admiration for the ribbon clerk on his two weeks vacation when you have a perfectly good spot to rest in right here? The street is wide and shady; the yard is large, the house is roomy and the porch is screened in. The motor car out in the garage probably won't blow up yet for awhile, and there are odds of hot water. Why not be original and stay where you can enjoy life? Then when fall comes you will be rested and in fine condition for the rush of winter!"

So the Watchers stayed at home

It was early in June that the What-chers' cousins from Six Corners, Ia., wrote that they would be in Chicago in a day or two and that they would dearly love to see their relatives if the latter were in town. There was nothing for Watchers to do but confess by letter that they were indeed in town.

When the cousins came they brought the baby and little Susan and Amanda and a rabid desire to see as much of the city as they could by working 24 hours a day. They said it was splendid that Cousin Whatcher owned such a nice touring car, because it was so easy to get about in it. So they burned up as many gallons of gasoline in a day as the Watchers had used in two weeks.

After they got the hang of things, the cousins used to let Mrs. What-cher stay at home and take care of the three children while they roamed the city. All day long while Mrs. What-cher sat smothered in sticky children she thought of the cool lake breezes playing on the cousins' brows and how she had planned a daily drive through the parks and how she wasn't getting it.

When the cousins arrived home in time for dinner they would ask mother's darlings if they had been happy.
Then as they dressed hastily for the theater they would give Mrs. What-cher directions on how to put the three angels to bed. Sometimes they let Mrs.
Whatcher go along if they wanted to be shown something, but she had to hold the two children to pay for her treat. When the cousins left Mrs.
Whatcher burst into relieved tears and Whatcher, who was privileged to gaze upon his motor car for the first time in two weeks, swore in sympathy.

When Aunt Martha wrote that she had heard they were in town and would seize the opportunity to pay them a visit and do her autumn shopping at the July bargain sales the Watchers ran around in circles, but Aunt Martha arrived before they had found cover.

Aunt Martha was a vigorous person, who did not mind that the hottest wave of the season made its appearance in her train. Hot weather always reduced Mrs. Whatcher to a pulp, but Aunt Martha, who was going to leave them some money some day if she ever died, insisted on having her dear niece's valuable judgment on her purchases. From eight o'clock in the morning until five o'clock at night she dragged her dear niece through furnace-like basements, pouncing upon eight-cent gingham marked down from fifteen cents and cake tins that were ten cents less than they were at home.
When the supply of basements ran out Aunt Martha took to stuffy corners, where she unearthed year-before-last's silks, in price reduced one-half.

After she had accumulated two trunkfuls of this sort of plunder, she tripped on a cobblestone and sprained her ankle. Then Mrs. Whatcher waited on Aunt Martha for two weeks, because Aunt Martha had a prejudice against trained nurses. After this visitor's departure Whatcher was able to catch an occasional glimpse of the wife of his bosom, but he asked at first who the strange lady was, for she was such a wreck that he didn't know her.

Just as Mrs. Whatcher was beginning to get rested Whatcher's sister and her family dropped off the train to visit the dear relatives and incidentally to shop. As Whatcher and his sister always got along together just as beautifully as do gunpowder and blazing matches, the visit reduced the Watchers to still deeper misery.

Then the people next door got a phonograph and the young man across the street took to playing the cornet.
In the midst of these afflictions two more cousins from Iowa came, because, as they said, the other Iowa cousins had had such a perfectly grand time that they didn't want to miss the chance, since the Watchers were in town for the summer. They said they thought the Watchers were very wise not to attempt to go away, since Mrs. Whatcher looked so sickly. The place for her, they said, was at home, where she could have absolute quiet and rest and do exactly as she pleased.

The cook left in the middle of this visit and the second girl gave notice, so Mrs. Whatcher celebrated the departure of the cousins by going to a sanitarium for a month.

Life is larger than mortality.

Elizabeth's Peril

A whoop of mingled rage, terror and pain penetrated to the upper regions and heralded the coming of Elizabeth.

Elizabeth's mother, for whom the sound, familiar though it was, has never been robbed of its terrors, ran out of her bedroom and half way down the stairs to meet her waiting offspring. She sank down upon one of the steps and instantly a pair of frantic arms were locked about her knees and a Dutch cropped head and a huge pink hair ribbon were buried in her lap.

Elizabeth's mother gathered into her protecting arms the head, the pink bows and as much as possible of the plump, pathetically heaving body.

"What's the matter with mother's baby?" she asked tenderly.

"Wow, wow, wow!" answered

Elizabeth.

Elizabeth's mother clasped her little daughter closer to her. "Are you hurt, darling?" she queried, anxiously.

"Wow, wow, wow!" The pink bows vibrated violently, but indefinitely.

"Elizabeth, dear," said her mother, trying to uncover the hidden face,
"you must stop crying and tell me what's the matter. Are you hurt?"

The head merely burrowed deeper into the friendly lap. "It's—it's my tooth," gasped Elizabeth, finally.

"Your tooth, sweetheart?" exclaimed her mother. "Does it ache?"

"No, I don't guess so." The answer came in a tone that was something between a bellow and a snuffle.

"Then what's the matter?" Elizabeth's mother was growing slightly peevish under the strain. "Elizabeth, you've got to stop howling and tell me." She raised the tear-stained face and held it firmly between her two hands.

"Now, tell me," she said, authoritatively. "If your tooth doesn't ache, what are you shrieking about?"

There was a fresh outburst of tears,

but with the flood came the words:

"It's—oh, it's coming out!"

Elizabeth's mother gave a little sigh of relief. She kissed the top of the anguished head. "That's nothing to cry about, precious," she said, com-fortingly. "You'll soon have a nice new one in its place."

"Oh, I don't mind the tooth," wailed

Elizabeth, "but Tom said—oh,

dear! Oh, dear me! We was all out playin'—"

"We were out playing," corrected

Elizabeth's mother, gently.

"Yessum. We was all out playin'—" and Tom he come along—"

"Tom came along, baby," Elizabeth's mother said, patiently.

"Yessum. And Tom he come along and he said—"

The remainder of the story was lost in another whoop of woe.

Elizabeth's mother rose and led her small daughter to the bathroom and bathed her face thoroughly.

After that she took the very woebegone infant into the mother's own room and sat down in the big rocking chair with Elizabeth in her lap and rocked her until the sobs had ceased.

When the much-to-be-desired result had been gained she went to her dresser and took out a paper bag of soft molasses candy. Elizabeth's eyes glistened.

"Now," said Elizabeth's mother, "we are going to have a perfectly beautiful treat, just us two."

Fairly radiating joy, Elizabeth buried her more or less uncertain little tooth in the piece of candy. Then she removed the candy hastily, gave it one look and immediately set up a shriek that made the plaster nearly start from the walls.

"Wow, wow, wow!" She took up the cry where she had dropped it a short time before. "Wow, wow, wow!"

My tooth's gone, and Tom said—"

The shriek ceased as suddenly as it had begun. Two large tear drops were arrested midway down her fat cheeks and a smile, beginning in a very small way, grew and grew until it threatened to bisect her face. She ran to the mirror and regarded intently the gap left by the departed tooth.

"Why, mother—Tom thaid, he thaid that when my tooth came out—he thaid that he knew a girl who looked just like me, with little poppy eyes and pink hair ribbon, and when her tooth came—that when my tooth came out—that when her tooth wath gone—that I wouldn't know how to do anything but just whittle! He thaid that when that girl's tooth that looked like me wath gone she couldn't ever talk again. And, mother, it wathn't tho! It kind o' hitheth when

I do it, but I can talk! I can talk luth ath much ath ever!"

Elizabeth's mother fled hastily into the next room and buried her head in a thick bath robe which was hanging in the corner of the closet.

"The eternal feminine!" she choked.

"How her father would enjoy it if it should tell him! But I don't believe I'll tell him. I think this is a case in which only a mother can thoroughly sympathize."

The Cause.

"How do you account for those half dozen houses of yours in the block going off so soon?"

"Because in them I had the six best cellars."

Energy has made more men famous than merit.

GAMBLERS OF HIGH POSITION

Great Ladies of England Formerly Played Continually and for the Highest Stakes.

A little over a century ago there were hundreds of great ladies in England who made their drawing rooms regular gambling dens, and many in the most exalted social positions lost, or won, as the case might be, thousands of dollars in a single night's play. The royal princesses did not hesitate to play for the highest stakes and a faro bank was a portion of the paraphernalia of Dame Fashion.

Queen Elizabeth was fond of cards, but she was inclined to be somewhat peevish and lost her temper at the game. Mary, Queen of the Scots, carried her infatuation to the extent of wagering her personal attire on a game. She would play continually from Saturday to Monday, and sacrifice her wardrobe, if necessary, to do so. Queen Ann of Austria was fairly pursued by ill luck, we are told, but she is said to have played without passion or greed.

Anne Boleyn was an inveterate gambler, as were all the wives of Henry VIII., with one exception—
Catherine of Aragon did not gamble, as she had no love for the card table. Nell Gwyn lost 400 guineas one night to the niece of a notorious gambler, Mazarin, who afterward died insolvent, having lost at cards an enormous fortune left to her by her cardinal uncle. Cards are still popular among the hostesses of many of the English drawing rooms, but not to the extent they were a century ago.

SEEMED TO FILL THE BILL

Young Suffragette Appeared to the Youth's Mother to Be Suitable as His Wife.

The young suffragette who had insisted on marrying the young man with whom she had fallen in love, approached the young man's mother in fear and trembling.

"Can you support my son," asked that lady sternly, "in the style to which he has been accustomed?"

"I cannot, madam. He will have to supply all the cash."

"Um. Are you able, in spite of your advanced views, to keep him badly in debt?"

"I am. That is my specialty."

"Do you know how to nurse him if he should fall ill?"

"Haven't the remotest idea. My childhood has been spent in attending caucuses."

"Ha! Will you guarantee to kiss him good-by every morning?"

"If I happen to remember it—but I can't guarantee anything."

"What time do you expect to come in at night?"

"O, anywhere from 12 to 3 in the morning."

"Do you rehearse your speeches at home?"

"Yes, as a rule."

The mother's face relaxed.

"We must be cautious in these matters," she said sweetly. "But, on the whole, I think you will do."—Life.

Stumbled on Vein of Gold.

For seven pesos or about $2.55 a poor Chilean bought a few weeks ago the foundation of an old house in Putu near Constitucion, relates the New York Sun. As the man grubbed out the stones from the earth his attention was attracted to the yellow specks in one of them. He found it contained an extraordinarily large proportion of gold. He inquired as to whence the stones originally came and finally traced them to a hill in the vicinity. There he found in the slope a vein of gold-bearing rock.
from a small portion of which in the course of a week's work he and a couple of friends extracted $75,000 worth of gold. A company has now been formed with a capital of $100, 000 to open up the vein and determine its true value.

"Everywoman" at Springfield.

It is not a frequent occurrence for a high class theatrical attraction to play a whole week in Springfield, and while Everywoman has not occupied the boards at the Court Square for an entire week on account of Monday being given over to the opening of the new hundred thousand dollar theatre in Hudson, N. Y., the production will be there seven times, five nights and two matinees, beginning Tuesday. The size of the production makes it next to impossible to tour it in cities where the engagement is for less than a week. There are three car loads of scenery and electrical effects, and at least ten hours are required to set the production even after it is hauled to the theatre and is upon the stage. The company carries a massive velvet curtain which is necessary to the peculiar performance, and at least eight hours are required in which to hang this. Then over sixty supernumeraries are required which are secured in each town the company visits. These men and women are carefully rehearsed for several days by a man who is sent forward for the purpose. They are used to represent the throng upon the street at midnight in New York when the old year is passing out and the new year is being welcomed in. This scene, which constitutes its fourth act or canticle, is the most effective in the play and never fails to rouse the audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. The third act, which represents the midnight orgie of a party of roisterers, is the most elaborate of any stage presentation Mr. Savage has ever offered to the public. The costumes and effects used in this act alone represents the expenditure of a good-sized fortune. The entire original production is offered here with the cast unaltered since the New York engagement.

BROWNING WAS NOT A SNOB

When a Cook Came to See Some Pictures He Offered Her His Arm.

A trivial anecdote occurs to me which has nothing to do with the "Countesses" who were supposed to absorb Mr. Browning overmuch. It appeared that on one occasion Mr. Browning's son had hired a room in a neighboring house in which to exhibit his pictures. In the temporary absence of the artist, Mr. Browning was doing the honors, the room being half filled with fashionable friends. Mr. Browning was standing near the door when a visitor, unannounced, made her appearance, he immediately shook hands with the stranger or tried to do so, when she exclaimed: "Oh, I beg your pardon, sir, I'm the cook. Mr. Barrett asked me to come and see his pictures." "And I am very glad to see you," said Mr. Browning, with ready courtesy. "Take my arm and I will show you around." —Mrs. Andrews Crosslee, "Red Letter Days of My Life"

CHILDREN ILL.

Ordinary Cathartics and Pills and Harsh Physic Cause Distressing Physical Complaints.

You cannot be over-careful in the selection of medicine for children. Only the very gentlest bowel medicine should ever be given, except in emergency cases. Ordinary pills, cathartics and purgatives are apt to do more harm than good. They may cause griping, nausea and other distressing after-effects that are frequently health-destroying.

We personally recommend and guarantee REXALL ORDERLIES as the safest and most dependable remedy, which we know, for constipation and associated bowel disorders. We have such absolute faith in the virtues of this remedy that we sell it on our guarantee of money back in every instance where it fails to give entire satisfaction, and we urge all in need of such medicine to try it at our risk.

REXALL ORDERLIES are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

REXALL ORDERLIES commonly completely relieve constipation, except of course when of a surgical character. They also tend to overcome the necessity of constantly taking laxatives to keep the bowels in normal condition. Three sizes of packages, 10 cents, 25 cents, and 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain REXALL REMEDIES only at our store—The Rexall Store, Lynde & Gould, 385 Main St., Palmer.

HOLD INDIAN MEET.

Fine Work By Students of Monson Academy Seniors Secure Most Points.

The second annual indoor meet of the Monson Academy Athletic Association was held in Memorial Hall Wednesday evening before a large audience. Both the exhibition and class competition work were finely executed and Physical Director French deserves much credit for the showing made by his pupils. The seniors came out victorious over the juniors by six points, securing 37, while the juniors won in the exhibition work, winning a silver shield in the Indian club drill.

The juniors won eight points on the first number on the program, while neither team gained any advantage in the next five events. Harper and Pease got eight points between them in the bar vault. Massey and Flynt kept the sophomores in the running by some very good work. Flynt showing up particularly well in the high jump with a leap of four feet nine inches. Dewing and Gillette saved the freshman from a shut-out, Dewing tying Massey for second place in the high jump and Gillette by some splendid running for a third place in the 20-yards dash. The surprise of the evening came when Bowker scored first place in the 12-pound shot-put with a heave of 38 feet. Harry Elliot, who won this event in the Springfield meet a short time ago, was third. Barnikow, captain of the juniors, was high scorer with 14 points, while Dunbar picked up 10 for the seniors. The summaries.

Death of Frank A. Bills.

Frank A. Bills, 56, died at his home on North Main street Tuesday evening at 10 o'clock of a complication of diseases after a long illness. He had been a leading citizen of Monson for many years, conducting the only jewelry store in town for many years. He retired from business two years ago, when his health failed. He was born in Washington November 24, 1855, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Bills. When he was very young his parents moved to Springfield and he came to Monson when he was but eight years old. He was educated in the public schools in Monson and in Monson Academy. After graduating he learned the jeweler's trade. On January 1, 1877, he married Miss Ida Smith of this town, and for a few years they lived in Orange and in Chester, where he was employed as a machinist. He soon returned to Monson and established his jewelry business, which he conducted until two years ago. He was a charter member of the Monson lodge of Odd Fellows, a member of Day Spring lodge of Masons and a member of Hampden chapter, Royal Arch Masons; he was for 18 years financial secretary of the lodge. He is survived by a widow and his mother, Mrs. G. A. Grout of this town. The funeral was held this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock and was in charge of Day Spring lodge of Masons, assisted by Rev. G. A. Andrews. Burial was in No. 1 cemetery.

She was married on Nov. 15, 1860, to Arba Squier of this town, and upon his death, which occurred in 1888, she formed a partnership with her son, Wesley A. Squier, to carry on the lumber, grain and coal business that had been founded by her husband. She is survived by one son, Rev. A. F. Squier of Cambridge, and one daughter, Miss Nellie F. Squier of Monson, and four grandchildren. The funeral was held Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, Rev. F. W. McConnell of the Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. G. A. Andrews of the Congregational church and Rev. E. Stewart of Malden officiating. Burial was in the No. 1 cemetery.

A Parade of Fashion

Unrivalled Even in Metropolitan Centers

The exclusive character of our Exhibit of Fashion during Opening Days lends dignity to our display. If we'd gathered our exposition of style in the open market as most do, there'd be nothing to distinguish it above others, but that's just what we didn't do. Our showing is largely of our own creation and design, created for us in the smartest of American work-rooms from fabrics and fashions of our own selection.

Our Millinery, Too

Carries that hall mark of creative genius that lifts it above the level of the commonplace. Our designers have spent much time in the best New York shops absorbing all the latest ideas from the smartest Parisian milliners. These they've embodied in wearable designs of their own conception. So it's quite true that while others may exhibit with pride Parisian models, we exhibit with greater pride the exclusive product of our own skilled designers and makers.

Milton Makepeace.

Monson voted Milton Makepeace the grand capital prize. To those who followed the progress of the contest, or to those who know the efforts of the others, this is a story in itself.

Milton Makepeace won the $250 cash, and more; he has made new friends, as well as renewed acquaintances, by calling, writing, by using the telephone with the people who were anxious to assist him. A sister of Milton's carried on the campaign for him.

Milton Makepeace.
Winner of Grand Capital Prize, $250.

Certain qualities are necessary if one aspires to first honors in a contest of this kind. First, one must have more than a host of friends. Mr. Makepeace had an unlimited number. One's friends must be willing and able to help to the extent of giving six-months' to five-year subscriptions. One must have an energetic first lieutenant, and this was the position he assigned his sister, who must be given full credit for her untiring efforts. It was this combination that made it possible for Mr. Makepeace to poll 1,303,290 votes and entitled him to the $250 cash.

Another pleased contestant is Miss Julia Shearer of district 1. Miss Shearer's friends worked faithfully during the contest to make her a Mrs. F. Edgar Brown of district No. 4 captured first prize, a diamond ring, and it can be said there is hardly a better known woman or one who is more beloved and admired than is Mrs.

APPROPRIATION MEETING.

$50,000 PROPOSED FOR HIGHWAYS.

Macadam to be Put In, and Paid For at
The Rate of $5000 a year
For 10 Years.

Monday's appropriation meeting passed off most harmoniously, thanks to the excellent advance work done by the committee of 15. The total appropriations were $81,000, against $101,000 for last year, though this amount is likely to be raised about $10,000 if the proposed plan for macadam roads is adopted at the special meeting in April, as it is pretty certain to be, and appropriations are made for one or two other matters which were passed over until the later meeting.

A most important action was taken by the town in regard to macadam or permanent roads, and one which is likely to have extremely beneficial results. The committee of 15, convinced from the articles in the warrant and from interviews with voters in the several sections of the town, that a policy of permanent roads is desired, recommended that the town consider the appropriating of $50,000 for this purpose, building about ten miles of road at once and paying for it at the rate of $5000 a year. The committee figured that, by this means, the town would get vastly more for its money—by attracting large contractors to bid on the work—than by building about a mile or a little more yearly, with the increased cost on account of small contracts. The saving was estimated to equal the amount necessary for interest during the life of the loan. In addition, the road would all be available for use immediately and the town would be a large gainer thereby. A committee of five—Charles L. Waid, Roseus C. Newell, Charles A. Tabor, Samuel Stewart and Charles A. Letfro—was appointed to make investigation as to the sections to be covered, the kind of road and the amount of money necessary, what terms the loan could be made on, etc., and report at a special meeting to be held on the evening of April 22 at 7.30.

The meeting was called to order by Town Clerk Foley, and Thomas J. Moran was elected moderator. A report of the high school addition committee was read by Superintendent of Schools Clifton H. Hobson. H. E. W. Clark reported for the town farm water committee, and D. L. Bodfish for the committee on markers for soldiers' graves. Purlin M. Shearer and Thomas Johnstone were chosen field drivers, and J. M. Allen, Rufus Bond and Charles H. Keith, measurers of wood and bark and surveyors of lumber. Charles H. Keith was appointed tree warden. The reports of the town officers as printed were accepted. The treasurer was authorized to borrow $35,000 in anticipation of the taxes of the current year.

A new departure is made in the method of paying for the services of the highway surveyor. An appropriation of $1000 was made for this purpose and placed in the hands of the selectmen, they to draw an order on the application of the highway surveyor, covering the amount of his services, the intent being to limit his salary to an amount not exceeding $1000 for the year. The committee on new quarters for town officers reported that there were none available at the present time, but expected something in the way of a new building in the near future, when there would be a possibility of suitable space.

It was voted to make a contract with Mangled Body Found.

Warren Man Killed By Freight Train
Early Sunday Morning.

Edward J. Keyser, 26, of Warren was struck by a freight train and instantly killed about 1 o'clock Sunday morning on the railroad track about 150 yards east of the passenger depot at West Warren. The body was discovered about 7.30 a. m. by Michael Smith, who is employed as a track walker. The selectmen were notified and Medical Examiner E. W. Norwood was summoned and viewed the body. He gave as his opinion that death was instantaneous from a railroad accident and he found the back of the skull badly fractured, both legs and the left arm broken. The body was turned over to Undertaker Charles H. Walker, who took it to his rooms in Warren.

Mr. Keyser had been a resident of Warren about six months and made his home with his brother, Wakefield Keyser, on East Main street. He was employed as a machinist by the Perkins Machine Company. He was a member of the Mattawampee club. Mr. Keyser came to West Warren in company with Jason Fosket, Jr., and spent the evening with him. According to the latter, the last he saw of Keyser was when he started to run from Main street to catch a passing freight, as it is reported he had often done, and Mr. Fosket supposed he got on all right. From the position of the body it is probable that he was first thrown upon the west-bound track and later a train threw the body over the east-bound track.

He leaves a widow, Mrs. Annie Keyser, and a son Chester, six years old, who live in Brockton; seven brothers, Martin, Wakefield and Judson in Warren, Louis in Westboro, George in Berlin, Charles and Lester, and one sister, Mrs. Susie Blanchard, in Lynn. Mr. Keyser was born in Chester, N. S., but came to Massachusetts about 10 years ago and had lived in the vicinity of Boston most of the time since.

Funeral services were held from the home of his brother Tuesday afternoon at 2.

President of State Federation Speaks to Palmer Club's Guests.

Representatives from the Women's Clubs in Warren and Ludlow were entertained by the Palmer Woman's Club in the parlors of the Congregational church Tuesday afternoon, the occasion being a visit from Mrs. Henry Coolidge Mulligan, president of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs, who wished to meet the clubs in this section. The president of the Palmer Club, Mrs. T. J. Tipper presided and introduced Mrs. Mulligan, who gave an interesting talk on the work of Women's Clubs in the state and country. A social hour followed the address, during which refreshments were served.

Burglars Monday Night.

Plant of New England Metal Culvert Company Raided.

Burglars broke into and ransacked the plant of the New England Metal Culvert company at Tenneyville some time Monday night, and made away with a quantity of saws, bits, wrenches, etc. As the equipment of the plant is principally heavy machinery, there was little which could be carried away. The only disposition which can be made of the loot is at private sale or in some pawn shop, and the amount realized is sure to be small in either case. Entrance was effected by breaking a window. Officer Crummins was notified and made an investigation, but there was little to be learned. The plant is located in an isolated place, and there is little likelihood of persons with burglarious intent being disturbed or discovered at their work.

Improved Street Lighting.

New Company Makes Offer to Town.
New Customers Coming In.

Critics of the imperfect street lighting of the past will be glad to know that there is likely to be a vast improvement in the near future, through the new management of the Central Massachusetts Electric company. The company proposes to change the present are lamps to the more modern system of Tungsten clusters, at no expense to the town, and to substitute for the present "moonlight" schedule, whereby the lights go out when there is supposed to be a moon, for every night service until midnight. The company offers to make a contract with the town, a thing which has never in recent years existed only as "between gentlemen."

The company offers to substitute for every existing are light, one five-cluster light of street service Tungsten lamps, the lamps to be of 60 candle-power; or it will install one three-cluster light-the lamps to be 32 candle-power, and two single lamps of the same power in places where this arrangement is desired. The price for the five-cluster lights is to be the same as that now charged for the are lights. An offer is made to install a sample cluster light for inspection and proof of better light than heretofore. An advantage claimed for the cluster system is that, unless all the lights in the town go out, there is little likelihood of every lamp in the cluster burning out at the same time and leaving that spot without light, as happens under the present system. The company offers to make a contract with the town arranging for rebates to be paid if lights are out beyond a reasonable length of time for repair. The town is now paying $13.05 per light for a "moonlight" schedule; the company offers an every night service until midnight for $15.50 per lamp. The above was embodied in a letter to the town officials which was read at the town meeting on Monday, the result being that $6000 was appropriated for street lighting and the selectmen instructed to make a contract with the company.

While the management has been busy working out these new suggestions and planning for the improvements, electricians and linemen have been kept at work improving the station and the distribution system. Both these tasks are of enormous importance and big problems to be met simultaneously. But every possible effort is being made to rush the work so that no time will be lost in making the service noticeably better. A most astonishing testimonial to the success of the new management's liberal policy has been given the company during the past week, for over one hundred new customers have sent in their orders for electric lights. This is a tremendous figure, and bespeaks most eloquently the responsive attitude of the communities served, and their appreciation of the co-operative spirit shown by the new management.

Moses Stone, employed on the farm of C. W. Hastings at Forest Lake, was seriously injured Sunday while at work in the barn. After being absent about an hour Mr. Hastings went to the barn and found Stone lying unconscious in a stable under the feet of a horse. He had been kicked and trampled on apparently, and was in a serious condition. Dr. J. P. Schneider was called, and later in the day he was taken to the Mercy hospital in Springfield by Dr. H. A. Dunphy.

Battle of Ballots Now A Matter of History

Brown in the town of Brimfield. When the contest was inaugurated Mrs. Brown was named as a candidate, and her many friends throughout the town, and in fact those who were not her friends, have made a gallant fight to declare her a winner of a valuable prize offered by the Palmer Journal in this contest. Mrs. Brown also captured the special period prize, $25 in cash, in her district.

Dorothy Marie Burns wins second prize in district No. 1. Her friends were more than active in her behalf from the start. The total vote cast will indeed prove her popularity. Her friends are no doubt as much pleased as she is, and a more pleased contestant in the entire race cannot be found than Dorothy Marie. She captured the gold watch in district No. 1.

Mildred Loftus.
Winner of Gold Watch.

Walter Pease of district No. 3 takes a plum for the district in winning a gold watch. Mr. Pease has many friends who assisted him materially in the contest, and they rejoice in his securing the second district prize.

Much praise can be given Clarkson Ringwalt of district No. 4 for his magnificent showing, as a candidate who can get more than 615,800 votes is one who must have ambition and energy. Master Clarkson did not enter the contest until after the start. He is a very popular boy and his many friends will rejoice in his victory.

With the biggest vote ever polled in a similar contest in this section, the Palmer Journal mammoth prize and popularity contest closed Wednesday night at 8 o'clock. As announced, the contest was not a "something-for-nothing" scheme. The Palmer Journal meant that the prizes should be given as a reward for energy and ambition. The Journal did not want itself as being engaged in the pleasant task of giving away valuable prizes for pure motives of philanthropy.

It was not a charitable undertaking, but a business proposition pure and simple. Its circulation was growing at a flattering rate, but there were yet people who had not found out what a superior paper the Palmer Journal is, and it was for the purpose of proving that the Palmer Journal is the paper for all the people, printing all the news all the time, "if new and true, not otherwise," that the contest was inaugurated.

By means of this contest, the Palmer Journal is a welcome visitor, "come to stay," in hundreds of homes not heretofore reached. Hence, with the marvelous gain in circulation, the Palmer Journal not only proves its superiority, but stands out as the leading exponent of upright principles, and clear, sound judgment, and is, to-day, recognized as the greatest weekly in this section.

The conditions of the contest were so easy that it proved attractive from the start, and before a week had passed, before the first announcement of votes, thousands of men, women and children in the surrounding country were engaged in friendly rivalry seeking votes for their favorites. Nip and tuck they fought for more than eight weeks, each vote adding to the interest of the contest. At no time, from the casting of the first ballot, was it possible to pick the winners, so close was the battle.

From time to time, many persons took a guess on the possible winners, but the opinion was hardly expressed before another big batch of votes was recorded and their choice was found among the lower ones. Thus it went throughout the whole contest, first one and then another forging ahead.

Whole United States Voted.

Votes came from all parts of the United States. In fact, many votes were cast for contestants from friends in states east, west, north and south of here for candidates in all of the districts, and with each ballot came undeniable proof that the Palmer Journal is the leading paper of this section, for the ballots meant new subscriptions to the paper. This was one of the conditions of the contest, and as a result the paper, already with a large circulation, made a wonderful jump since the opening of the contest on January 26, when over 120 people entered the contest. Hundreds of new subscribers were secured through this novel contest.

Fairness of the Contest.

The Palmer Journal is receiving praise from every side from disinterested persons, from business men and from the contestants themselves for the treatment accorded each and every contestant. Everything possible was done to facilitate the work of the contestants and their friends, and the result is that everything has terminated in the most gratifying manner.

Some became discouraged and doubtful as to the outcome of the final count, but, giving the management the benefit of the doubt, which was greatly appreciated, they had personal interviews with the contest managers, and learned to their own satisfaction that the least evidence of unfairness or partiality was unfounded, and that a fair, square, and impartial deal was accorded each and every contestant.

It was because of this fact that the interest and enthusiasm was greatly increased. It caused the contestants to put forth their best efforts to be declared winners of the Palmer Journal's great enterprise—the Mammoth Prize Contest. No doubt everyone connected with the contest has been greatly benefited in one way or another in the experience gained in a business way, which is an incentive to greater undertakings.

Advertising Value.

No contest in the history of newspaper enterprise in this territory has been more successful than this one. In fairness to every one of the candidates who worked during the contest, it can be said that they have given their almost undivided attention to securing new subscribers and increasing the circulation list of the Palmer Journal in great numbers. For more than eight weeks the Palmer Journal and its great contest have been the topic of conversation in every town that can be reached by it. The public generally awakened to the fact that the Palmer Journal is certainly the paper for their homes, and to-day it has hundreds of new subscribers who are now among its staunchest friends.

A Main Feature.

If there is one class of citizens more than another interested in the great contest which has just closed, it is the business men and general advertisers, who have watched with interest the daily increase in the scores of the contestants who have drawn their own inferences as to the wonderful increase in circulation, which means an added value to their advertisements. This condition comes only as a natural result, since the greater the number of readers, the greater the value of the Palmer Journal as an advertising medium.

Walter Pease.
Winner of Gold Watch.

Received Enthusiastically.

It was impossible to anticipate such an enthusiastic reception as the one accorded this popular Mammoth Prize Contest. It has appealed to the public mind, and by the increased circulation resulting, the merchants and advertisers who use the columns of the Palmer Journal for the purpose of advertising, are the ones to be directly benefited; therefore, aside from awarding the prizes to the wide-awake contestants, it has conferred incalculable benefits on the merchants and advertisers.

Honors Deserved.

The successful contestants are named to-day as a result of the official count by the disinterested gentlemen acting as judges, and who have no motive in the contest other than to accept the invitation of the management to make a thorough and complete canvass of the votes. The mere mention of the names of these gentlemen is assurance enough of their integrity. The ballots were counted and tabulated by Messrs. Harrie M. Howe, manager Palmer Carpet Co.; James Summers, chief of the Fire Department, and David Brown, chief clerk in the Palmer post office. These are three of the leading and best known citizens in Palmer. These gentlemen are known and highly esteemed by their business associates and by all with whom they come in contact, as thorough and honorable business men.

Winners Feel Proud.

The winners may well feel proud of the fact that they have run one race in a thousand and have come out with the deserving honor of having outrun and outlasted workers who have themselves done exceedingly well, and would, under ordinary conditions, have had enough votes to win.

The honor attached to winning is considered by some of the candidates as being worth many times the value of the prize itself. Friends of the contestants have boosted them all along the line, and nothing seemed too hard for them to do where a subscription was gotten and the votes cast for their favorite.

There has been quite an army of fair contestants who have made it their special business during the past few months, to early and late exploit the virtues of this paper. In all of the districts there have been many contestants at all times during the day, afoot, on wheels, or on horseback, hunting for some one who looked as though he did not take the Palmer Journal.

The contestants have done splendid work and some have been more successful than others, but this is due largely to the ability to hustle possessed by the winning candidates.

All Could Not Win.

It is a fact greatly to be deplored that all could not win one of the prizes in the contest, especially a grand capital prize, but this is impossible, and there is sympathy in plenty for those who have put in days and hours of hard labor, and at the end failed to receive a prize for which they have striven; but, even then, the work has not all been wasted effort. The honest striving after success, even though the immediate object is not realized, cannot fail to do good. The enthusiasm and energy which are developed are not lost, but react on one's character, putting iron into the nerve, encouraging one's confidence, stimulating courage, and rousing an honest belief in one's ability to undertake and carry to success any task which presents itself.

What the Contest Manager Says.
To the Palmer Journal Company, Mr. L. E. Chandler, Editor and Manager.

Dear Sir—In closing our work in your prize and popularity contest, we desire to say that in our experience covering many such events, this has been one of the most successful from a subscription point of view. The exceedingly large vote is sufficient evidence of this fact. The net gain in the Palmer Journal's already large circulation must be pleasing to you, and is in itself a striking tribute to the high esteem in which your excellent and up-to-date newspaper is held by the people of Palmer and surrounding towns.

We cannot help but feel that through the enterprise which prompted this unique affair, the Palmer Journal has been placed in a much stronger position with its readers, its advertisers and the general public.

Please express our best wishes to those contestants and their supporters with whom for a few weeks we have been so pleasantly associated.

May the winners enjoy their prizes, and those less fortunate be consoled with the knowledge that the loss of such a well-fought good-natured contest carries no disgrace, but, on the contrary, the greatest honor in having received the loyal support of so many friends and well-wishers.

Please accept our thanks for the manifold courtesies extended to us during our stay, and at the same time we express our best wishes to you and the faithful employees associated with you. Wishing you every success in the future, we remain, truly yours,
John H. Honlihan, Contest Mgr.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

TO GO WITH THE TURKEY.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

I will now explain how the remaining dishes of the anniversary day menu (cranberry sauce excepted) may be prepared by the paper bag method. The recipes given have all been found by actual experiment to be highly satisfactory in every respect.

Sweet Potatoes in Syrup.—Choose smooth, even potatoes of medium size, boil twenty minutes, drop in cold water, peel, dip in melted butter, roll in sugar, put into a buttered bag, with sugar, butter and lemon juice enough to make a fairly rich syrup. Seal bag, and cook for twelve minutes in a fairly hot oven. Pour the syrup from the bag around them into a hot dish.

Spanish Onions.—Parboil for fifteen minutes Spanish or Bermuda onions, chill them in cold water, then cut a V out of the hearts. Fill the space with butter, after dusting it well with salt and pepper, put the onions in a bag with a lump of butter and a very little water, seal and cook twenty minutes in a hot oven, or thirty minutes in a very moderate one.

Baked Pears.—Ripe, well-flavored pears are best for baking, but the ordinary cooking pear will answer if baked with sugar, lemon juice and spices. Peel the pears, cut off the stems and take out the core, but only a little way beyond the blossom end. Stick a clove, a shred of mace or bit of cinnamon in the core-space, fill in around it with sugar and roll the fruit in dry sugar before putting it in a buttered bag. Put in half a gill of water also to the half dozen, seal bag, and cook at slow heat fifty minutes to an hour.

Creamed Salsify.—Boil tender, drop into cold water, peel and cut in two-inch length strips, steep in a dressing of butter and cream, lightly seasoned with pepper and salt. Put in well-greased bag, seal and leave in the oven a few minutes only.

Smothered Chicken.—Have a good-sized broiler cut into joints, taking care not to leave sharp bones to the joints. Salt and pepper them lightly, dredge with flour and lay in a well-greased bag upon thin slices of bacon. Cover with more bacon slices, taking care to keep the chicken spread rather flat. Add a teaspoonful of water, or a couple of peeled and sliced tomatoes. Shreds of green pepper add somewhat of flavor to the tomatoes. Seal in bag and cook for forty minutes, slacken heat almost half after the first five minutes. Make a peep-hole in the upper side of the bag near the middle, and if the bacon and chicken are not as brown as you like, cook five to ten minutes longer. Serve on a hot dish with gravy from the bag.

Good pies demand good crust—shorter than any temper, easier broken than promises. Make it by M. Soyer's recipe, then surely it will be up to grade. Here is the recipe: Take one pound of flour, three-quarters of a pound of butter. Mix the flour with water and set lightly until the consistency of butter. Leave this dough for half an hour, then flatten with your hand and lay your butter on the top of the paste. Then fold four-corner way, and give it two rolls, as usual. Leave your paste in a cool place for forty-five minutes, and then roll twice more. Leave it for forty-five minutes and then roll twice again.

Bake all your pies in bags; it may seem extravagant, but the gas-saving more than pays for the bags. Use thin pie tins. Roll out and fill as usual. Set pans inside bags and set the bags on trivets. Cook two pies at once, but shift them midway the cooking, from upper to lower shelf, and vice versa. They will brown top and bottom. Grease the bags but lightly underneath; even though they crisp there it does no harm. The essential thing is to keep the upper surface covered and maintain steady heat. Have the oven hot at first, but slack heat after a little—so soon as the bag corners show rather brown. Average pies, with average heat, require twenty-five to thirty minutes. Make peep-holes on top in the bags when you think they are done; if not brown enough, raise the heat a wee bit and cook five minutes longer.

To make the cider-cup, cut thinly the yellow peel from six oranges and six lemons, squeeze out the juice and put in with the peel and three cups of sugar. Make a gallon of sweet cider very hot, but do not let it boil, pour it upon the peels and juice, and let stand in a cold place for twenty-four hours, stirring it several times. The peel can be strained out, but it looks rather pretty in glasses.

For tea lemonade, take the juice of a dozen well-washed lemons and three sweet oranges, cut the squeezed fruit in rings, and add it to the juice. Put in five cups of sugar and strain over the whole a gallon and a quarter of weak tea, boiling hot, then add a cupful of rum. This also is better for standing—it keeps several days in a cool place. The rum can be omitted if there are scruples regarding it. In that case the strained juice of a pineapple that has been shredded and allowed to stand twenty-four hours in sugar can take its place. Dilute this one-fourth with mineral water in the glasses. (Copyright, 1911, by the Associated Literary Press.)

When Angeline Came Home

"Yes, we're awful glad to get back to town," confided the twelve-year-old sister of the young woman whose special young man was calling for the first time since the family returned from the lake.

"Er—Miss Angeline—your sister—is she glad, too?" inquired the young man craftily.

"My goodness, yes!" said the small girl in surprise. "She's the gladdest of us all. Angeline didn't seem to care for any of the things that were real fun, like Ted and I did—she was always afraid of getting sunburned or something. I don't think when you grow up there is much left in life to enjoy. All Angeline wanted to do was to put on another dress and do up her hair and moon around with the count."

The young man sat up straight. "The count?" he repeated inquiringly, with a hasty glance at the stairs. "Who was he?"

"Why, didn't you know there was a real count at the lake?" asked the small girl in surprise. "I should have thought Angeline would have written you about him, because that was all she could talk or think about."

"When she found his name on the register," went on the small girl, "I thought she'd have a fit or something, for she came rushing upstairs and dragged out her best white embroidered linen suit."

"Why," she said to mother, 'did I put on this horrid, cheap blue ging-ham for breakfast this morning? Do you suppose he was the one who sat at the next table?'"

"I was excited, too, but when I asked her if he would walk on a tight rope, or something, she pushed me out of the room."

"All the grown up women were just as excited as Angeline and rushed around whispering together. Ted and I decided that he must have two heads, or something, so we started out to find him. There was a strange man reading a magazine in the arbor and when we walked in and asked, 'Are you a count?' he stared and then he laughed. After that he said he wasn't, but he'd be pleased to direct us to the end of the pier, where we could pursue our inquiries."

"There was another strange man there and I didn't like him half so well as the first one. He kept jumping around and his eyes snapped and we stared at him a long time, till he almost jumped at us. Then I asked him, 'Are you a count? And please tell us what you count?'"

"I don't think he liked us, because he threw up his hands and dashed away."

"He acted different with Angeline. He was always leaning over her chair and smiling and his voice sounded like the inside of marshmallows. There wasn't any other girl there as pretty as Angeline, so, of course, she cut out all the others."

"She did, did she?" remarked the young man in tense tones, with another glance at the stairs. "Go on!"

"Oh, my, yes!" said the small girl. "She told mother she guessed if any of those washed out, uninteresting girls there thought they were going to get ahead of her they were mistaken. Mother got real patronizing to the other women and was always talking about estates and family trees and how Angeline was such a sweet and lovely and brilliant girl that she had always known her fate would be different from the common run of young women. 'No honors,' she said once, 'no honors ever heaped on Angeline's head would ever make her forget to be nice to those beneath her.'"

"The other women just sniffed and left Angeline alone, but she had the count, so she didn't care. She used to talk about it to mother and say, 'Won't the other girls back home be simply crazy jealous when they hear about it, though? And mother would say, 'If only father doesn't act up!'"

"It was real fun to see Angeline sweep through the hotel lobby like a queen and smile sweetly at the other women and see how cross they'd look and how they'd rock fast and talk after she'd gone."

"One afternoon the count was going to take Angeline riding and she came downstairs all rigged out and he wasn't there. Finally she asked the man behind the desk, 'Have you seen the count? I am waiting for him.'"

"There were a lot of people around and they kind of laughed. Then the man behind the desk coughed and said: 'Well, there were two men waiting for him, too, while he was in at lunch and they took him away. They—er—had a warrant. He's been jumping board bills all summer and the detectives just ran him down here. They said something about a forged check, too.'"

"So Angeline was just as glad to come home as the rest of us," said the small girl. "She got terrible homesick after that. Ted and I were glad to come, because father wrote that there were some new puppies in the barn."

"Oh, here's Angeline! Say, Angie, why didn't you write to Mr. Hopington about the count when you wrote to him all those times from the lake? He didn't know a thing about him."

Ballarat's Point.

If we are made in the image of God, Endowed with nature to damn, The Father, God, with a similar rod At last may smite every sham.

Your man can curse, tho' imperfect this oath, The thing displeasing to him:

Can swear like pirate of devilish growth, Whence'er possessed with the whim, Spectral truth proves that the infinite Love Condemns and makes no mistake.

Whose perfect cure, when pronounced from above, Destruction brings his wake.

For man is made like the One in the skies, So God must know how to damn.

There are some folks who declare otherwise, They see on high but a Lamb.

Where sits our Sovereign Father and King, Whose view of God is their loss.

When God to man his salvation would bring, Went Christ, like lamb, to the cross.

But add a fact, to be o'er the race flung, All unseeing people, take note:

The tongue of Balaam far transcends a lamb's tongue.

A Captain governs man's boat, Aye, God, the Admiral! Men who condemn With language hasty and queer Direct our minds and our hearts to this gent—

The crew Commander should fear!

JAMES P. LYNDE'S UNUSUAL OFFER.

"It isn't often that we have faith enough in the medicine put up by other people to be willing to offer to refund the money if it does not cure," said James P. Lynde to a Palmer Journal man who dropped into their store, "but we are glad to sell Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia on that basis."

"The Dr. Howard Company, in order to get a quick introductory sale, authorizes us to sell their regular fifty cent bottles at half price, 25 cents, and, although we have sold a lot of it, and have guaranteed every package, not one has been brought back as unsatisfactory."

"We are still selling the specific at half price, although we cannot tell how long we shall be able to do so, and anyone who is subject to constipation, sick headache, dizziness, liver trouble, indigestion or a general played-out condition, ought to take advantage of this chance. You can tell your readers that if they are not satisfied with the specific they can come right back to my store and I will cheerfully refund their money."

When Artists Can't Agree.

Lodging complaints against artists is a common diversion of their fellow tenants who lack the artistic temperament, but the most unusual grievance and from her standpoint the most vital has been registered by the janitres, of building largely occupied by struggling painters.

"Let them daub away all they please in their own rooms," she said; "that is nobody's business, but for goodness sake let them leave the clothes poles in the backyard alone. They paint them fresh every few days because no two of the artists can agree on an appropriate color, and when plain people who don't mind looking at a plain clothes pole hang out their wash the clothes get all smeared with fresh paint."

Where Wesley Wrote Hymns.

The Rev. J. H. Wicksteed, vicar of Bexley, Kent, England, has presented to the Wesleyan Methodists of Gravesend and Dartford circuit a tree from the vicarage garden, a sapling of the old oak under whose branches John and Charles Wesley, with George Whitefield, often met in friendly conference.

It is believed that Charles Wesley composed some of his hymns under its shadow, and John, in his diary of September 22, 1740, writes: "I went to Mr. Piers, the vicar of Bexley, where in the mornings and evenings I expounded the sermon on the mount and had leisure during the rest of the day for business of other kinds." He was there again Saturday, December 2, 1749, "and preached about 11."

The season for trout opens Monday, April 1st, and closes August 1st. The prospects are not very promising for the opening day. The recent snow storm will be the means of setting the season a couple of weeks backwards. The trout will not be likely to run while the weather continues cold and with a large amount of snow brot running into the streams.

The work of hatching out young trout fry at the Forest Lake hatchery on the Gates farm, which was inaugurated as a test by the Massachusetts Fish and Game Commissioners on March 7th, has proved thus far a decided success. A little over three weeks ago something like 150,000 eyed eggs, consisting of 50,000 brown trout and the remainder brook trout, were placed in the hatching house. As a result the brown trout are all hatched and the brook trout are nearly all hatched also.

THREE RIVERS.

Plans for Fire Protection.

Another meeting was held the last of the week in the interest of fire protection for the east side of the village. It was found that some of the property owners are unwilling to pay the needed cost, and as those who are willing to pay their share are not inclined to do more than that an attempt has been made to get each property owner to pay an apportionment based on assessed valuation. Not much more than half the necessary funds have been received. It was found the extension would cost $500, including 1000 feet of hose. This divided proportionally would make about a charge of $17 for every $1000 worth of property, and an effort has been made to get that. At the meeting the 11th, Charles Tracy was appointed to make a canvass. After doing so and reporting it was found that the amount was quite a bit smaller than what was needed. If the plan is carried out it will be necessary to make arrangements with the Palmer Mill for pumping water into the pipes. R. C. Newell was consulted and he promised they would do all they could in that line if the property owners would pay other necessary expenses, and this was considered a very generous offer.

Both formerly attended the Palmer high school, Miss Geer later going to Northfield. Mr. Jenks was graduated from the Massachusetts Agricultural College recently and is at present one of the faculty having charge of the correspondence courses, being also a specialist in fruit raising. Hale was her pastor for three years, having charge 16 years ago of the Methodist church in Bondsville. The bearers were Leon E. Ryther, W. H. Haldier, H. A. Holland and Rev. A. L. Squiers.

Ryther; two sons, Harry L. Ryther of Enfield and Leon E. Ryther, head master of Rockridge Hall, Wellesley Hills; also two daughters, Mrs. Jessie Squiers, wife of Rev. A. L. Vanity.

A real friendship with a vain woman lacks comfort and sincerity. Would for a second her vanity and the friendship snaps. Many people wonder at the attraction of women who are undeniably plain, but it often has its root in the fact that they are lacking in vanity. They are not constantly absorbed in their own charms, so have time to admire those of other people, consequently they are seldom lacking in friends.

Vanity is not altogether an attribute of the grown-up. One sees it frequently developed to an alarming extent in young children. Nor is it a matter for amusement. Rather should every mother strive to uproot this tendency. Ridicule is one of the swiftest ways of extinguishing it.

Children should be taught not to attach importance to whatever physical charms they may possess. Beautiful eyes, a lovely mouth or a delightful nose should not be subjects of comment, but if commented upon at all should be lightly done, for no child should be started in life with the handicap of vanity.—Exchange.

New Heat Ur't.

The use of gas for heating as well as lighting has made obsolete the old unit the candle power, owing to the fact that this unit rates merely the brightness of the flame, not the heating power.

Devile and more recent experimenters discovered a remarkable proportion between the light and heat of a mantle, and using this, makers are rating burners according to the units of heat given to them. A unit of time in standard calories. Gas of 5-200 calories efficiency a cubic meter has been recommended as the standard.

The latest designs of burners for heat and lighting require that the gas have a fairly constant composition, since the maximum efficiency of the burner is attained only when the relative quantities of air and gas are closely regulated. Waste gas may be added to prevent excessive variation in calorific value.—America.

Long Sermons.

Of one of the sermons, preached by Dr. Samuel Parr in 1800, the lord mayor for the year is said to have remarked to the preacher that there were four things in the sermon which he had been very sorry to hear. "Dear, dear, my lord," exclaimed the doctor, anxiously, "what were they?" "Sir," was the reply, "I mean the quarters struck by the church clock."—London Chronicle.

Odd Sentences.

"Break rock for 100 days or go to church every Sunday for six months," was the sentence imposed upon three Kansas City (Mo.) boys, after they had been convicted of throwing eggs at pedestrians.

"I sentence this boy to a whipping every morning for a month. Not the nanby pamby kind, but good, real hard ones; ones that'll make him eat off a mantelpiece. You'll find then that he'll develop into a good boy." This was the remedy prescribed by magisterial wisdom in the case of an eight-year-old boy who, his mother said, had a mania for running away from home.—Case and Comment.

A WOMAN'S BACK

The Aches and Pains Will Disappear If The Advice of This Palmer Citizen Is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains. Most times 'tis the kidney's fault. Backache is really kidney ache.

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it. Many Palmer women know this. Read what one has to say about it.

Mrs. William H. King, 406 Main St., Palmer, Mass., says: "I had kidney complaint for years and was steadily growing worse. I was rarely free from a dull, bearing-down pain in my back and the kidney secretions bothered me. My head also ached and I had dizzy spells. Finally my husband obtained a box of Doan's Kidney Pills for me at Lynde and Gould's Drug Store and I began their use. They restored me to good health and at that time I gave a public statement, telling of my experience. It is a pleasure for me to confirm all I have previously said in praise of this remedy."

Meeting an Emergency

"Lemme sit by the window! Lemme sit by the window, dad!" shrieked the small boy, making a dive for the last double seat.

"Don't make so much noise," growled dad, a fussy little man with white eyelashes, following his son into the seat. "Here, turn around and take your dirty shoes off my clothes."

Giving a farewell wipe with the shoes, the small boy turned his attention to raising the window shade.

"Here, leave that alone!" grumbled dad. "Don't you see that lets the sun shine right in on me? Why can't you have a little consideration for other people?"

"What's consid—Say, dad, look at that kid out there. Say, looky! He hit that other kid right in the nose. Say, I bet if I was that other kid I'd punch him in the slats. Say, looky, dad!"

"If you don't shut up I'll drop you out of the window," observed dad, sourly. "Keep still, now. I want to read the paper."

"Say, dad, what're we stoppin' for? Oh, gee! Look at all the people gettin' on. Where's they all goin' to sit? Say, dad, look at all the people."

Dad buried his nose in his paper and grunted.

An injured looking man with a receding chin stationed himself in front of the pair and fixed dad with a meek glare.

"Say, dad," remarked the small boy, punching his parent in the ribs, "that man's lookin' at you. Say, what's he lookin' at you that way for, dad?"

"Look here," muttered dad, in restrained but wrathful tones, "if you say another word I'll give you the worst whipping you ever had in your life the minute we get home."

The small boy stuck his thumb in his mouth and returned with a round eyed stare the glare of the injured looking man. At the next stop the injured looking man was pushed forward and his place was taken by two short sleeved, low necked, hobbleskirted damsels.

"Wish I had some place to sit down," remarked one, glancing from dad to his son.

"Wonder he wouldn't make that kid get up and let somebody have that seat," observed her friend.

"Dad," said the small boy, in a loud, hoarse whisper, "she says it's a wonder you don't make me get up and give her my seat. Do I have to give her my seat, dad? Ain't she got nerve, dad?"

Dad, his head completely enveloped in his paper, made no response. The two girls giggled. The small boy amused himself for a few moments by sticking out his tongue at them. When this failed, he looked about for some other means of entertainment and hit upon the novel diversion of reclining upon the small of his back and running his heels up and down the back of the seat in front of him. The seat was occupied by a man who sat with hunched up shoulders and twisted legs, reading a railroad time table. He wore a dusty looking brown hat, with a rather wide brim, which the small boy kicked with each gyration of his feet.

"Dad, watch me kick that man's hat. Say, ain't that a funny hat, dad?" No response from dad.

The train stopped again and the two girls gave place to a fat, perspiring man with a heavy suitcase. He planted the suitcase on the floor and drew a handkerchief from his pocket.

"Phew!" he observed to the public in general, mopping his face with the handkerchief. "This ain't the kind of a day to run for a train."

With the exception of the small boy, the passengers all assumed the stony, far away expression that is supposed to be appropriate when a genial remark is made by a stranger to nobody in particular. The man looked down and caught the eyes of the small boy.

"Say, son," he asked cheerfully, "don't you want to get up and let me have that seat? You can sit on my lap."

"Naw!" replied the boy, regarding his interlocutor dispassionately. The fat man, with considerable effort, seated himself upon his suitcase.

"Well," he observed, as he seated himself, "I ain't in the business of bringing up other folks' children, but I must say that when I was a kid I'd 'a' sat down when there was a lot of grown people standing my dad would 'a' fixed me so I prob'ly wouldn't 'a' been anxious to sit down anywhere for a week."

Then, suddenly, something happened. The hunched up man, thrusting the time table into his pocket, untwisted his legs and rose to his full height, which was about six and a quarter feet. The shoulders straightened to an astonishing breadth.

With a word, he reached across the back of the seat, and, seizing the small boy under the arms, lifted him and set him down on his father's knees. Then he beckoned to the nearest woman.

"Here's a seat, lady," he said. For a moment there was a tense silence. Then the fat man leaned over and touched one of the broad shoulders.

"Pardon me," he said, earnestly. "But would you mind giving me your address? I'd like to have 'em send you a Carnegie medal."

He Changed His Mind

"Every once in a while I change my mind about a few things," remarked the youngish bachelor. "Just now I'm away out on a limb, scarcely knowing which way to jump in regard to the matrimonial possibilities of this life."

"You know, ever since I've been old enough to think out my wants for myself I've planned to wait until I could make satisfactory arrangements with some young creature with a fair assortment of personal charms and also a few bales of the negotiable yellowbacks in her own right, besides a sterling silver key ring containing keys to safety deposit boxes, summer homes and all such things."

"Of course, I never went into the boss and told him I was going to quit my job pending final arrangements for winning out a home with eight baths and hired help. No, I've kept plugging along all the time, and it looks as if I ought to be fairly well heeled some day, even I should have to work for it all. But up to day before yesterday I was still counting on facing a world some day that would say: 'Yes, he married her just for her money.'"

"It wasn't that. I was so sordid as to leave all such items as mutual personal regard out of consideration. I figured that with all the hard working fathers there are dying off and leaving their money to daughters who don't know how to invest it or look after it, there surely ought to be one that would appreciate my true worth and who also would have every desirable personal quality that I would find in one with no chattels or prospects beyond a $40 trousseau."

"But I've changed my mind since I passed a day last week with a fellow whom I've been envying for several years because things seemed to break so well for him. The last time I saw him before this visit he was about to be married to the daughter of his employer. Her dad gave 'em a bungalow in this suburb for a wedding present, and she bought a red touring car as long as a five room flat, out of her own funds. Then an uncle of hers turned a summer camp of his in the St. Lawrence over to them to use when they wanted it. Since then I've heard from my old friend Jim by souvenir postal, first from different places in Europe, then from Palm Beach or New Brunswick, according to the season of the year."

"That was pretty soft for old Jim. It seemed to me, especially on hot days, when I would be sweltering away at my office and the letter carrier would bring me a card that he'd sent me from some big resort off in the mountains or at the seashore. I felt that I could enjoy that sybaritic life just as well as he could."

"Well, as I started to tell you, I visited Jim a day or so ago. He apologized for meeting me with the limousine on such a warm day, but he said the touring car was in the shop for repairs after a jaunt he'd made up to some lake in Wisconsin."

"I saw at once that Jim was changed. Four or five years ago, before he was married, he was one of those positive, table pounding fellows in his talk—had strong opinions about everything, and didn't mind telling them. Now he acted so subdued and had such a hangdog look that I wondered if high living had knocked all the old-time glister out of him."

"After we got to his home and had handed our hats to a servant in the front hall I began to discover what was wrong. Jim's wife was a demure little thing to look at, but she had Jim jumping every minute of the time. Honestly, he didn't cut any more of a figure around that place than a four ounce piece of ice in a six-foot refrigerator."

"Nice sort of a girl, too, Jim's wife was, you understand. She fairly outdid herself to show me a good time. First, she had Jim hustle upstairs after some new records for the phonograph. Then she chided him for being so dilatory about getting me a fresh cigar. Oh, it was Jim this and Jim that all the time. She did it in a pleasant sort of way, but Jim knew what he had to do, all right. He came about as near being the head of that house as a minority stockholder does to getting on the executive committee of a trust. Jim just helped around, that was all."

"The next day he got to talking to me confidentially. He said he was so sick and tired of Europe and summer resorts and winter resorts and society and money and the people who had it that he knew he would have been happy if he could just have married some miller's daughter in a jay town and then could have got a job as bookkeeper in a feed store and lived quietly in a drab cottage back of a sawmill."

"I saw where Jim was right, too."

"Kill or Cure."

Where He Got The Pictures

By Adele Mendel

"Where did you get that photo?" almost shouted Bob.

"What's it to you?" retorted Bill. "A great deal. I can't believe she gave it to you."

"Which one do you mean?" "That one in the corner. Why, there's another and another. It's preposterous. It's disgraceful of Lucille to distribute her pictures around to grace another fellow's college room."

"Their mine. I decline to explain when, where and how I came in possession of them," said Bill, thinking he'd have some fun with jealous, suspicious Bob.

"If you won't tell, Lucille will." "Lucille," commenced Bob, the next time they met. "Promise to tell me the honest, sober, naked truth, and nothing but the truth."

"Don't couple my name with a falsehood. Do you think I shade the truth when I confess you're the only fellow in the world for me?"

"Evidently not when other chaps have your pictures."

"My pictures? You must have been seeing spooks."

"Bill Thornton—"

"Who's Bill Thornton?" interrupted Lucille.

"Are you in the habit of presenting your face—simile to young men whom you do not even know?"

"Are you sure he has my picture?" "Not only one, but three. I saw them encased in gold frames in his room in company with a lot of cheap song and dance artists' pictures."

"Now deny it," added Bob in an exasperated tone.

"Indeed not. If you doubt my veracity in that manner you need never speak to me again. I'll give my picture to whom I please. Kindly return those I gave you."

For all her haughty indifferent manner, Lucille was miserable after Bob's departure.

When her best friend made her appearance, she found a dejected weebegone-looking girl.

"Can't you come to dinner tonight?" began Edna. "I want you to meet my cousin, Bill Thornton."

"Of course I will," answered Lucille with alacrity. "It's the height of my ambition to know him."

"But I thought Bob and you—"

"Don't think so much, Edna. Introduce me to Bill Thornton and I'll be your friend for life."

When Thornton met Lucille he was dumfounded to recognize the original of the pictures.

"Where were you ever at Mackinac?" he asked.

"Yes, last summer. Did you see me there? How strange I don't remember you," answered Lucille.

"I was there only a few hours. While trying to get a snapshot of the island from the roof of one of the cottages you came along and I have some dandy pictures of you."

"You have?" Will you give them to me?"

"If you insist, on one condition, and that is that you will never divulge to Bob how I procured those photos."

"Thank you. A little mystery now and then won't hurt the best of men," laughed Lucille.

Bob was overjoyed at receiving a message from his sweetheart.

"Enclosed find pictures," she wrote, "which were sent to me this morning. As you value my everlasting love, never, never inquire how Bill Thornton came in possession of them. Your own truthful Lucille."

"By Joe," ejaculated Bob. "I'll have to let well enough alone. Suppose Lucille should question me as to where all the pictures I had taken were distributed?"

Now They Don't Speak.

"Ever see a bat close up?" asked Mildred of Arthur.

"No, and I've never been on one, either, so there!" he returned indignantly.

"Well, don't get peeved. I refer to the flying kind, that you hear at night, that hum so loudly, you know, as they flit among the trees. I would like to see one at close range, but I wouldn't like to have one alight on my head."

"Why?" asked Arthur, innocently.

"Because I understand if one alights in one's hair it gets so inextricably wound up in it that one would have to have all her hair cut off to release him."

"H—mmm, but what about the rat—er—wouldn't there be a battle?"

Which terminated a summer friendship that had promised to be something of serious moment to both.

THAT CLINGING REST HABIT

Hard to Break, but It Can Be Done, Says the Amiable Mr. Glimmerston.

"For that don't feel like work feeling, with which," said Mr. Glimmerston, "I fancy we are all of us more or less likely to be afflicted, I would in some cases prescribe rest, though in most cases no doubt the proper prescription would be exertion."

"The trouble with the rest cure is that it is like taking opiates; the more you take the more you want. The rest habit is easy to acquire and hard to break."

"The habit of exertion, on the contrary, is one that commonly we do not take to so kindly; it does not, as it were, spontaneously permeate us as the rest habit does; it may in fact require assiduous cultivation, and it takes quite a man to acquire this habit in a completely saturating and permanent form so that he is proof against attacks of the rest habit, which, if he has a trace of it left in him, is sure to develop on the slightest provocation."

"Exertion is the only real cure. It may be hard to take at first, but you'll come to like it. Persist and you'll find it vastly strengthening and then delightful; and then, while in taking the rest cure you are all the time paying money out, in taking this one you have money all the time coming in."

"Try work, continuous, steady, hard work. Once get the habit of work embedded in your system and you won't be troubled any more by that tired feeling."

WAS THE FRIEND OF A KING

Merchant Told of the Strong Attachment of King Edward for John Bright.

An interesting account is given for the first time of an incident which began the friendship that existed between John Bright and King Edward VII. The story was told by Mr. Bright in the hearing of Mr. Connaught, a merchant in Manchester. Mr. Bright, it seems, had, at a meeting in St. James' hall, rebuked those people who were criticising Queen Victoria for her rare appearances at public functions after the passing away of the prince consort. On the following morning the private secretary of King Edward (then Prince of Wales) called upon Mr. Bright with a special request from the prince to call upon him at Marlborough house.

Mr. Bright at first demurred, but yielding to the pleading of the messenger, he went, and he was received in the most friendly manner by the prince and introduced to the family circle. The prince took Mr. Bright aside and as a son thanked him for his kindly words on behalf of the mourning queen, and asked to be granted the privilege of being counted among the prince's friends.

"Whatever may be my personal opinion of kings and princes," Bright said, concluding his narration of the incident, "the man before me was a son making an appeal on behalf of his mother, and I could not resist it. We shook hands, and have been close friends ever since."—Christian Science Monitor.

Stricken With Generosity.

A Scotsman brought his entire family of seven to visit a relative in London. They were entertained in a mansion that left nothing to be asked for two weeks; theaters, suppers, cab-rides about the city, excursions into the country. The whole time McPherson never put his hand in his pocket to pay for a thing.

When the family was going home, the Londoner and his cousin went into the buffet for a final glass. From force of habit he groped for his wallet; but Sandy gripped his arm.

"Na, na!" said he. "Ye've been verra guid to me an' mine this fortnight past. Mon, we'll have a teck o' this last wee nipple!"—Surrey.

Sick Women

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured many cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are five letters from southern women which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

Elliston, Va.—"I feel it my duty to express my thanks to you and your great medicine. I was a sufferer from female troubles and had been confined in bed over one third of my time for ten months. I could not do my household and had fainting spells so that my husband could not leave me alone for five minutes at a time."

"Now I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. Whenever I see a suffering woman I want to tell her what these medicines have done for me and I will always speak a good word for them."—Mrs. ROBERT BLANKENSHIP, Elliston, Montgomery Co., Va.

LETTER FROM LOUISIANA.

New Orleans, La.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with hot flashes, weak and dizzy feelings, backache and irregularities. I would get up in the morning feeling tired out and not fit to do anything."

"Since I have been taking your Compound and Blood Purifier I feel all right. Your medicines are worth their weight in gold."—Mrs. GASTON BLONDEAU, 1511 Polymnia St., New Orleans, La.

LETTER FROM FLORIDA.

Wauchula, Fla.—"Some time ago I wrote to you giving you my symptoms, headache, backache, bearing-down, and discomfort in walking, caused by female troubles."

"I got two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Sanative Wash and that was all I used to make me a well woman. I am satisfied that if I had done like a good many women, and had not taken your remedies, I would have been a great sufferer. But I started in time with the right medicine and got well. It did not cost very much either. I feel that you are a friend to all women and I would rather use your remedies than have a doctor."—Mrs. MATTIE HODNOT, Box 466, Wauchula, Florida.

LETTER FROM WEST VIRGINIA.

Martinsburg, W. Va.—"I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done wonders for my mother, daughter and myself."

"I have told dozens of people about it and my daughter says that when she hears a girl complaining with cramps, she tells her to take your Compound."—Mrs. MARY A. HOCKENBERRY, 712 N. 3rd St., Martinsburg, W. Va.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

Newport News, Va.—"About five years ago I was troubled with such pains and bloating every month that I would have to go to bed."

"A friend told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I soon found relief. The medicine strengthened me in every way and my doctor approved of my taking it."

"I will be glad if my testimony will help some one who is suffering from female weakness."—Mrs. W. J. BLAYTON, 1029 Hampton Ave., Newport News, Va.

Why don't you try this reliable remedy?

WAGES RAISED AGAIN.

Mill Operatives to Get Another Advance Next Monday.

AFFECT 2200 EMPLOYEES IN PALMER.

Thorndike, Bondsville, Three Rivers Mills Come Up to Other New England Schedules.

Announcement is made that the employees of the mills in Thorndike, Bondsville and Three Rivers are to receive another raise in wages to take effect next Monday. The amount is not stated.

In Thorndike and Bondsville it is stated that the increase is made to bring the wages of the operatives up to the level of those in other places in New England. The recent increase did not do this, and as the policy of the management is to keep wages in these places as high as elsewhere, another advance is to be made. In Three Rivers the statement is that "The employees of the Palmer Mill are advised that another adjustment of wages will go into effect Monday, April 8. It is the policy of this mill to see that its employees receive as much wages as any mill operatives for the same kind of work."

The new schedule will affect about 2200 operatives and the increase is naturally gratifying to them. A readjustment was made only a short time ago. There have been no labor troubles, in spite of rumors to the contrary.

Threw Wife On Hot Stove.

Thorndike Man Does the Trick Twice, And Assaults Officer.

Angered at her for some unknown reason, Anthony C. Stone of Thorndike twice threw his wife on a hot stove last Friday evening, and in addition to the burns which she received he choked her and inflicted other injuries. Mrs. Stone is a small woman, while Stone is a big husky fellow.

Stone came home from work at the usual time and asked his wife for some money. He got it and went out. Later he returned and without any warning seized her as she was at work getting the evening meal and pushed her over upon the stove. Her elbow was severely burned and as soon as she extricated herself from her dangerous position he repeated the performance. Officer Manning was called, but Stone had made his boast that he would never be arrested, and when the officer attempted to take him along he took a piece out of Manning's hand with his teeth. About that time Manning got a swing with the other hand, which held a club, and Stone went down and out.

In court Saturday Stone attempted to tell Judge Dillon that his wife had assaulted him, but his yarn was classed as a fairy tale and he was given six months in the house of correction for assaulting his wife, and three months more for the attack on the officer.

Fire On School Street.

Overheated Brooder Gets Department Out Saturday Evening.

An overheated brooder in the rear room of a house on School street resulted in a fire which called the department out just after 8 o'clock Saturday evening. The house was owned by Mrs. Rebecca A. Palmer and was occupied by F. W. Simonds. The brooder had been built that day and was being tested. Mrs. Simonds and her mother were the only members of the family present at the time the fire was discovered. The alarm was pulled by William H. Mason, who lives across the street, and when the department arrived the inside of the room was a mass of flames. A stream of water soon dissipated them however, and the damage was not great, although had the fire been given another three minutes start it would have been much harder to control. A portion of the furniture in the house was removed and more or less damaged thereby. The loss on the house is estimated at $500, covered by insurance.

West Warren Mills Idle.

Only a Few of the Strikers Accept Offer Of Wage Increase.

Notices were posted in the Warren cotton mills at West Warren late Wednesday afternoon that the mills would start yesterday morning at the regular time, with an increase in wages. The amount of the increase is not definitely determined, but it will be the same as all the mills in this section. The increase will begin the 1st.

Contrary to expectations, however, the mills did not run yesterday. Only about 150 of the English-speaking operatives went as usual, but the Polish-speaking operatives, who largely compose the strikers and have recently joined a local order of the United Textile Workers of America, all remained at home. There were not a sufficient number to run the mills, and those who reported had to be sent home.

School Attendance Record.

Thorndike Leads For Last Month, With High School Second.

For the school month ending March 29, 1912, the record of attendance in most of the schools in town is a little lower than it was during the month of February. This is due, to a considerable extent, to the frequent storms of the past few weeks and an epidemic of mumps, which has broken out in one of the villages.

The highest per cents of attendance by buildings for the month just closed are Thorndike grammar school, 97.26; Palmer high school, 95.9; Bondsville

Jewels Presented Arcanum Council.

Members of Quabog council, Royal Arcanum, who attended the regular meeting Tuesday evening were treated to a number of unusual and enjoyable features, among them being the presentation of a full set of officers' jewels by Grand Regent Ernest E. Hobson, whose term of office is about to expire. Mr. Hobson is a member of Quabog council, and the gift was an expression of his appreciation of the support given him during the year by his home grammar school, 95.8; with 3, 15, and no tardy cases, respectively.

From the table given below, you will note the decrease of tardiness in the grades, especially in those of the Three Rivers grammar school, where 13 cases were recorded during March, 1911, against one during March of this year.

The room having the highest per cent of attendance was that of grades 6 and 7, Bondsville, its per cent being 98.75. Grades 8 and 9 of Thorndike were second in this respect with a per cent of 98.5, while room of grade 9, Palmer, had the third highest, 98.1 per cent. The record in detail is as follows:

Got Mad, Smashed Window.

Soldier Who Found Door Locked Thrust Arm Through Glass.

Angered because he found the door between the waiting room at the union passenger station locked Sunday, Private Frank West of the regular army smashed the glass in the upper part with his fist and received a severe cut. West was in the waiting room and attempted to pass into the baggage room. He found the door locked and it so angered him that he drove his fist through the glass in the upper part. The result was a severe cut in the forearm, an artery being severed. If it had not been for railroad men who applied a tourniquet West would have bled to death. Dr. J. P. Schneider was called and attended to the hurt, which is not expected to result in serious trouble.

Alleged Disturbers Go Free.

No Witnesses Against Men Arrested For Street Car Row.

The cases of Edward Murphy, Thomas Donahue and Dennis Sullivan, arrested last week for causing a disturbance on the last car to Bondsville March 16, came up for trial in the district court Tuesday morning. It had been supposed that there were plenty of witnesses to the disturbance, for participation in which two others pleaded guilty last week, but not a single one could be found who would say that they had seen any of the defendants take any part in the trouble. Accordingly the cases were placed on file after pleas of nolo had been entered.

CHILD MURDER CHARGED.

Three Rivers Woman Buried New-born Infant in Garden.

BORN WHILE FAMILY WAS AT CHURCH

Seen By Neighbor. She Says It Was Dead; Medical Examiner Says Born Alive.

Charged with the murder of her new-born child, Ludwika Dymon of Three Rivers is under arrest at the Burns Hotel until such time as it is deemed safe to take her into court. The child, which she admits was hers, was found buried in a garden in Three Rivers Monday.

The Dymon woman is married but her husband has never been in this country. She has lived for the past three years with her sister in Three Rivers. She was employed in the mill and worked as usual last Saturday, Sunday, while the other members of the family were at church, a neighbor saw Ludwika digging in the garden. His curiosity was aroused, and Monday evening he made an examination which disclosed the body of a female infant. The authorities were notified and the woman was taken to the Burns Hotel, where she was given medical attention. She was placed under arrest, but it was not deemed wise to take her into court Tuesday morning, according to the law's requirements. She frankly admitted that the child was hers, but claimed that it was born dead. She had told no one because she was ashamed of the matter. None of her family nor those under whom she worked in the mill suspected her condition. She worked as usual Monday.

Medical Examiner J. P. Schneider performed an autopsy Tuesday. He found that the child had been born alive, but had died of strangulation. There were marks on the child's neck under the chin, but the medical examiner would not suggest what caused them. The question to be determined is whether or not the woman is responsible for the child's death.

Doing Ellis a Favor

Conrad, threading his way across the steamboat dock littered with boxes and trunks and trucks and people, saw Ellis at a distance and headed his way.

Ellis was a man that it paid to cultivate. Conrad was glad they were crossing the lake on the same boat, for there was the chance of a smoke and a chat together.

"Great jam tonight, isn't there?" Conrad remarked after greeting Ellis. The man with whom Ellis had been talking when Conrad came up laughed at this. "There sure is," he remarked. "I can't get a berth, let alone a stateroom! Guess I'll have to sit up all night!"

Conrad eagerly grasped this chance to do a favor for a friend of Ellis. "You can have a berth in my stateroom," he said, cordially. "I'm alone in it."

Later on Conrad sought his room. Somehow he had lost Ellis after the boat started. He had patiently patrolled the decks without finding him, and was consequently disgruntled. Ellis had not even seemed decently pleased at the kindness to his friend. The stateroom door was locked.

Conrad rapped. There was no answer. He rapped louder. He repeated it.

The man in the next stateroom flung open his door crossly and asked Conrad to stop trying to knock in a side of the boat. He said he had pressing business in port, and if Conrad sunk the vessel and he had to swim in he would be late for his appointment.

Thereupon Conrad kicked the door of his stateroom. It was opened six inches and a sleepy and blinking face peered forth. Conrad shoved himself inside.

"Who are you?" demanded the blinking man.

"Here, wake up!" replied Conrad, disgustedly. "This is my stateroom, and I'm going to bed. Don't you remember that I offered to share with you?"

"Oh!" said the blinking man, comprehendingly, sitting down. Then he rolled over and went to sleep again. Suddenly Conrad gave a howl.

"What have you got in here?" he asked.

The sleepy man sat up and regarded the floor on which Conrad was dancing. "Oh," he said, and seemed amused. "They've got out, haven't they? I must have kicked a hole in the paper covering! There's a hundred of those crabs!"

"Then there are just a hundred too many!" Conrad announced as he made a leap for life.

"You see," said the other passenger, sociably, "I'm going over to visit a friend, and he's daffy about eating little fresh water crabs. He asked me to bring him some. I put 'em in a basket."

"Well, put 'em back!" Conrad ordered, ferociously.

Crouched on the edge of the berth, he watched the other man try to corral those agile crabs. He chuckled and shooed and coaxed and dived headlong and at last had most of them back in their basket. Then he promptly went to sleep once more.

Vastly irritated, Conrad retired. He awoke later to find himself being violently shaken by two strong hands. "Don't you see it? Don't you see it?" shouted a voice. "Can't you stop it?"

"Are those crabs loose again?" Conrad cried in horror, making a spring for the electric light switch.

"No, no!" moaned the voice. "That automobile! It's toppling over and they'll all be killed!"

Conrad shook the sleep walker violently. "Where am I?" the man asked when he came to.

"You'll be overboard in the lake if you repeat that performance!" Conrad told him. "I want to get a little sleep."

In an hour a yell once more sent Conrad to his feet. It seemed that a crab which they had missed in the roundup had ascended a blanket to the berth and had fastened upon its owner's ear. No one could reasonably object to a man's yelling under these circumstances, so Conrad merely detached the crab, threw it out of the window and tried again to sleep, but by that time the boat had reached shore.

Sleepy and angry, he started to dress. The other man was slumbering as sweetly as a baby. He woke up, though, when Conrad tried to put on his shoes, because the shoes had crabs in them.

As he disembarked Conrad met Ellis, who was looking fresh, rested and vigorous. Conrad longed to smite him.

"Here," he growled at Ellis. "You let me in for an awful night with that friend of yours! I've had hardly a wink of sleep and have nearly had heart failure besides! What's the matter with him, anyway?"

"I'm sure I don't know," said Ellis, genially. "I never saw him before last night. He had just stopped to ask me for a light when you came along and took him in like a brother!"

Disposing of Veronica

"There is one peculiarity about this thing exasperated at a man," wrote the girl at a summer resort to her dearest friend at home. "It is that you think you never can be more exasperated than on that special occasion—and then the very next time you get exasperated you are astonished to find how much more so you can be!"

"I don't know anything better calculated to infuriate one than to see a perfectly nice man idiotically in the toils of another girl whose motive is transparent to every woman in sight, though the men are blind and imbecile in her presence."

"When Veronica Bondy first appeared on the hotel veranda and I had watched her ten seconds I sighed because I knew what was ahead of me. I was to view the spectacle of every man on the place trotting around in her wake carrying things and asking her anxiously if the hot sun didn't make her head ache and couldn't they get her something cool to drink and didn't she want to go and look at the moon!"

"Nevertheless, I privately excepted Arthur Daw from the list of lunatics because—well, just because. And that very night at a dance he said in the middle of a waltz: 'Hasn't that new girl, Miss Bondy, the most wonderful face? Like a child's in its innocent appeal!'"

"I think I exhibited great self-control. Instead of telling Arthur that she was a selfish, cold blooded, designing little minx with no sense and whose motto in regard to womankind was 'No quarter!' I agreed with him. This encouraged him to add that such a girl, who was so helpless and confiding and trustful always brought out the best in a man, somehow. Whereupon I told him I'd like to sit down and rest."

"Of course there is nothing else so plentiful in the world as men; still, I didn't fancy letting Veronica Bondy walk off with Arthur just to show me that she could do it."

"So when Veronica blockaded the way as Arthur and I started out to walk three miles through the woods to a farm house where they sell apples, and said pathetically that she was so lonesome and there was nothing to do, I promptly asked her to come along. That three miles is mostly climbing hills or coming down them, and part of the way the sand is deep. She had on delicate pumps and silk stockings and a frilly dress—and I was garbed in khaki and walking boots."

"She hated to walk—I saw it in her eyes—but she hated worse to let me escape with Arthur for the whole afternoon. So she started. When Arthur walks he walks—and though he slowed down when I murmured that we were tiring Miss Bondy he chafed under it. He dislikes sauntering. When we had stopped for the fourth time so he could help Veronica remove the sand from her absurd shoes, his lips were setting in a straight line and he looked to me for sympathy, but I merely beamed."

"When we started back it began to rain steadily. If there is anything sopplier and wetter than the woods when it pours rain I'd like to be informed of it. My hair curls naturally and rain doesn't hurt khaki, so I didn't care, but Veronica was indignant. She complained dreadfully and somehow conveyed the idea that the rain was due solely to Arthur's carelessness."

The more her complexion ran off the more she complained, and at the end of a mile her hair looked like seaweed. Her style demands fluffiness or coiffure to appear well. At every hill she stormed. She said once that it must be nice to be a great, husky, muscular creature like me and be able to negotiate bad roads like an amazon, but herself, it was different."

"That was when I blithely suggested to Arthur that he carry her. She'd have let him, I truly believe, only he pretended not to hear me. She insisted on clinging to his arm, however, and being dragged up the hill. Now, a man has got to be utterly hopelessly in love with a woman before he enjoys dragging her up a hill when she is quite capable of walking by herself. I think the sight of me ambling merrily along as though I was good for another 25 miles added to his irritation."

"When we were in sight of the hotel I turned around and smiled happily at them. At that moment I appreciated to the utmost my curly hair and the color the rain had brought to my cheeks. And Arthur had had to look at her for three solid miles."

"I've had a perfectly beautiful time!" I was hateful enough to say.

"I hope," said Veronica, in a voice of rage—for she knew how she looked—that I don't have pneumonia and die from this!"

"Here," Arthur stormed the minute he got me alone. "What on earth did you ever ask her to go along for?"

"Don't you like to have the best that is in you brought out? I asked reproachfully."

"And he said one of the most brief and expressive words in the English language under his breath—but I heard him. Then I knew that Veronica had been wiped off the map!"

Bless the hand that gave the blow.

Academy Notes.

The spring term opened Tuesday morning at 8.40 with a larger attendance than that of the winter term. The spring term will close on Tuesday, June 11th.

The sudden slump which the Linophilian society has taken this year has caused much comment among the students because of the fact that at the opening of the school last year a renewed interest was shown and plans were formed to make this one of the most successful years of the society. The only plausible reason, however, for the dormant condition is the fact that so much time was given to the operetta recently produced in Memorial Hall by the Athletic Association.

The members of the Athletic Association met Tuesday in the Academy chapel for the purpose of electing a basketball manager for the season of 1912-13. The candidates nominated by the executive committee were Harry Elliot, William Cushman, Allen Wilde and Claude Faulkner. Faulkner received the majority of votes cast but a question arose as to the legality of the election another meeting was called Thursday morning, at which Faulkner again received the majority of votes. The latter has acted as manager of the Academy's second team in the last basketball season and will start immediately to prepare a schedule for next year.

TELEPHONE POLES OF CACTUS

Arizona Government Is Planning to Make Good Use of the Giant Saguara.

Saguara for telephone and telegraph poles is the latest idea and one that is to be tried out. It sounds plausible and it is believed that it will be more economical than the old style of poles. Its test is to come from Tucson.

The government is to build a telephone system for the forestry service of the Coronado forest reserve. The first of these lines to be built out of Tucson is to be used into the Catalinas, and it is there that the saguara experiment is to be tried.

Where they can be found in what approaches alignment, so that the line will not have a zig-zag too much, the saguara up in the canons through which the line will pass are to be utilized for the purpose of attaching brackets to which the wires will be fastened. And so the secret is out.

Along the proposed line it is difficult to set poles, owing to the rocky nature of the country traversed. Not only is this the case, but it is difficult to get the poles up there in the hills to set, while the saguaras are right there in many instances, and while not at a uniform distance this is not considered important.

DANGER PERIOD OF WOMAN'S LIFE FROM 45 to 50

Interesting Experience of Two Women—Their Statements Worth Reading.

Asheville, N. C. — "I suffered for years with female trouble while going through the Change of Life. I tried a local physician for a couple of years without any substantial benefit. Finally after repeated suggestions to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I quit my physician and commenced using it with the happiest results. I am today practically a well woman and anxious to contribute my mite towards inducing others to try your great medicine, as I am fully persuaded that it will cure the ailments from which I suffered if given a fair chance.

"If you think this letter will contribute anything towards further introducing your medicines to afflicted women who are passing through this trying period, it is with great pleasure I consent to its publication." — Mrs. JULIA A. MOORE, 17 East St., Asheville, N. C.

The Case of Mrs. Kirlin.
Circleville, Ohio. — "I can truthfully say that I never had anything do me so much good during Change of Life as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. "Before I had taken one half a bottle of it I began to feel better, and I have continued taking it. My health is better than it has been for several years. If all women would take it they would escape untold pain and misery at this time of life." — Mrs. ALICE KIRLIN, 358 W. Mill St., Circleville, Ohio.

The Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. At such times women may rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M.
Soyer, Famous London Chef.

SPECIAL FAMILY DINNER.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.
The following menu is suitable for a paper bag cooked dinner, to be served during winter months, when the occasion is more than ordinary, say on a national holiday, or some special family or community event:

Blue Fish or Sea Trout, Planked Sliced Potatoes
Cold Slaw
Baron of Beef, Roasted
Baked Squash Celery Salsify Stewed Cold Baked Apples with Rum and Sugar
Romaine Salad with Cheese Balls.
Sharp French Dressing
Plum Pudding, Brandy Sauce
Nut Candy
Stuffed Dates
Homemade Citron

The fish will require a plank, oak, of course, and proportioned to the size of the biggest paper bag. Get it as thin as possible—half an inch, say. Scour it well, then grease with oil or butter, heat gently and wipe off all surplus grease while still warm. This before undertaking to use it. It must be heated very hot underneath the gas flame before the fish goes on it. Sprinkle rock salt thickly over it to prevent charring, dash it off and grease very thickly, then lay upon it your fish, opened flat, seasoned, and well-greased all over the skin side. Season it on top with salt, black and red pepper, a few toasted bread crumbs or a little grated cheese, thin slices of onion and raw peeled tomatoes. Lacking fresh tomatoes, put on a little tomato catsup. Squeeze lemon juice over all and dot plentifully with butter. Flatten well on the plank, then slip plank and fish inside a thickly-buttered bag and cook in a hot oven fifteen to twenty minutes, according to the thickness of the fish.

The beef baron—the double sirloin—needs only to be roasted in a bag after greasing it very well all over. Do not salt it. Roast according to weight—fifteen minutes to the pound for rare meat, twenty for well done. Make sliced potatoes as previously directed, also cold slaw. Beets should be boiled quickly, putting them on in cold water, peeled as soon as done, and buttered while still very hot. Season with salt and pepper, also a dash of either vinegar or lemon juice. Baked squash has been exploited, stewed salsify likewise.

Serve the cold baked apples as a sort of sorbet—a course to themselves. Peel and bake the apples in a buttered bag, with a teaspoonful of sugar to each apple. Put in the serving dish, and while still very hot pour over a desertspoonful of rum to the apple. Let cool and serve with water-biscuit toasted very crisp.

For the salad, break crisp romaine in two-inch bits, make a very sharp French dressing, putting in a little lemon juice with the vinegar, adding salt, celery salt, onion juice, Worcester sauce, black and red pepper, and a mere suspicion of mustard. Sour claret make take the place of vinegar and lemon juice—you must aim at a very piquant flavor to give a tang to the mild cheese balls and biscuit. Shape the balls with butter moulds from cream cheese softened with either a little oil or sweet cream. Roll them in finely ground nuts and stick a tiny sprig of parsley in each. Make very small biscuit to go with them, and bake so they may come to table very, very hot.

Plum pudding should be in hand; heat it well either over hot water or inside a bag.

For the nut candy, use either black walnuts, pecan barks or pecans—I give them in the order of preference. A mixture of all three is not so bad, but the crisp richness of fresh black walnut gummies appeals most to my taste. Crack the nuts and pick out the kernels in as big pieces as possible. Be careful not to let bits of shell fall among the meats. Measure them after picking out, for each heaping cup of nuts take a level cup of soft sugar and half a cup of water. Cook sugar and water together till it ropes from the spoon. Have the nuts in round, rather shallow vessel, well greased. Pour the hot syrup upon them and stir about until the candy hardens around the kernels.

Make your own stuffed dates. Pick out the largest, firmest fruit, wash quickly in cold water, drain, and take out the seed. Stick into the cut side either a nut, a bit of crystallized ginger, a little candied peel, or a bit of citron. Roll in confectioner's sugar and lay in a very lightly-greased bag, left open at the end, in a cool oven to harden. Drain strips of citron from their syrup, roll in sugar and dry off the same way.

The country-bred may like to have either squash or pumpkin served as a vegetable. Peel, cut up, bake soft and mash, then season well with salt, a little pepper and a tiny bit of onion juice. Make in a cake and lay in a paper bag, mottled or a well-buttered bag. Lay thin strips of bacon over the cake, seal an cork in a hot oven ten to twelve minutes. Turn out in a hot dish and serve with the beef. Pumpkin in particular, mashed and cooked in the gravy of roast fresh pork, is tempting and toothsome, to say nothing of being somewhat out of the common. As an accompaniment to roast sucking pig, it has no superior, unless it may be yellow yams. (Copyright, 1911, by The Associated Literary Press.)

Economical Agnes

By Adele Mendel

"What are you looking so blue about Agnes? As though you had been steeped in indigo. Isn't the latest fashion in hair dressing becoming to you or has your father cut down your allowance?" asked Celine.

"Dad hasn't diminished my allowance, but doubled it on the condition that I don't attempt to economize any more."

"Has he had a brain storm?"
"Indeed not. He says my economies cost more than other people's luxuries. My lisle stocking income and silk stocking proclivities don't coincide."

"The first time I wore my white serge suit Jack and I were at the Tea Shop, where the waitress split a glass of ice tea over it. Jack began moaning my fate. I smiled serenely, trying to show what a nice disposition I had. The next day I dipped the gown in gasoline, but I had taken the wrong jug, it was kerosene."

"Was it ruined?" asked Celine.
"We sent it to the cleaners, but nothing would eradicate that odor. After using three bottles of imported violet perfume on it I hung it in the back yard to air. When it seemed safe to risk wearing it, the skirt was gone, stolen."

"Another time I thought it would be sanitary to give our bath tub a fresh coat of enamel. Dad brought home a portly millionaire friend from Kansas. Father wanted Mr. Smith to invest some of his surplus cash in a certain stock company. Our guest said upon retiring he'd think it over. Mr. Smith is accustomed to taking an early plunge. The enamel wasn't quite dry, and he stuck to it. After repeated calls dad rushed to the rescue. At breakfast he was as surly as a bear and snapped at me when I suggested a remedy. Father didn't dare mention stocks, and we have never seen or heard from him since."

"Did you ever try your hand at painting after that?"
"Yes, our porch furniture looked so shabby I painted the chairs."

"They look just like new."

"Oh, these are the new ones. We couldn't use the others. Father and mother were going automobiling. While mother was waiting on the veranda, she exclaimed suddenly in the most aggravated tone: 'Look at my new silk dress.' It was a spotted foulard. I assure you, spots of green paint all over it. After we thought the chairs were dry some one would discover a daub of paint on their suit. Dad's patience was finally exhausted, so he bought these rockers."

"Is your brother out of town?" asked Celine.

"Yes."

"There's some class to him when he wears that light gray suit."
"Don't mention that suit to me. Bob said: 'Sis, get rid of my gray suit. I don't want it any more.'"

"One of those Armenians came to the door with a suit case of kimono and I exchanged the suit for a silk kimono."

"What an excellent idea. What did Bob say about your business ability?"
"I'd hate to tell you. He nearly collapsed when he found I had traded the new suit."

"Mother had selected a new refrigerator at what seemed an exorbitant price. I attended a furniture auction sale, and after waiting four hours, procured an ice box all porcelain and glass for only ten dollars more than the other would have cost. When it came it was 16 inches too high and 10 inches too wide for the pantry."

"Did you send it back?"

"No; it was bought on the condition that it could not be returned."

"Don't you trim your own hats?"
"Not since I blackened my leghorn with shoe polish. Jack and I were caught in a rain storm. Jack gave one howl. 'You look like a coal black lady!' he roared. The shoe polish had dripped off."

"Another time I had needed my white pique skirt in a hurry so the cook washed it and I put it in the oven to dry and turned the gas low, I forgot all about it and the skirt was burned to a crisp."

"But that wasn't even as bad as the time I dyed my last blue messaline, coronation purple."

"Was it a success?" interrupted Celine.

"No, the dress became a hideous purple, but the pan containing the dye slipped. The sink, the table, the wall, everything was tinged with violet. The maid threatened to leave, said she never worked in a purple kitchen, and never intended to. We had the wall cleaned and raised her wages."

"I certainly don't blame your father."

"You needn't sympathize with him. My allowance won't be doubled very long. Jack says he thinks I would make a dear, sweet, economical wife."

Wind Wagon Travels Fast.

Mme. Bleriot has a wind wagon or aeroplane invented by her husband, which stays on the ground, but is otherwise like a monoplane. It is designed on principles similar to the yacht, but it is on wheels and is driven in the same way that an aeroplane is propelled. Mme. Bleriot goes out on the sands in it with her five children, traveling at the rate of sixty miles an hour.

Food For Thought.

Out of the boundless depths of space
He moulded and fashioned a World!
Then He brought forth Earth from the briny deep
And gave to the waters a tidal sweep:
Surfaced the land with verdure green,
Bulldozed the mountains with valleys between,
Gave birds to the air and fish to the sea,
Made them all—for you, and for me!
Then came the rivers, the lakes and trees,
The beetles and glow-worms, manumals and bees,
Till at last, that wonderful birth
When He provided MAN from the dust of the earth.

So from the void came forth this world
To thrive and grow strong forever!
And down the ages in course so true
'Tis speeding yet through the azure blue;
Keeping its path 'long the starry way,
Making the seasons and marking each day:
Wonderful planet! this World of ours!
Given to us with its mystic powers
Brinful of woe and gladness—Aye! to be sure—
Yet bubbling with happiness and all that's pure.
Showing the ways of the weak and the strong,
Bidding us choose 'twixt the tight and the wrong.

Now from the haze of its mystic past
This World has burst forth in splendor!
Countless millions have lived to mourn
And die in darkness, ere the dawn
Spread out its gorgeous light
In proof of great Jehovah's might.
The Reaper who came with outstretched hand
To take our loved ones from the land,
Obed the will of the Master mind—
For the welfare of Earth, and the good of mankind—
So runs the story in books we have read,
Tho' we sorrow and grieve at the bier of our dead.

Yet are taught 'tis the righteous way
To prepare our souls for Judgment day.
From prehistoric days this World
Has guarded well its mysteries!
Tho' learned minds of the present day
Have solved great problems in their way
'Tis far into the Future we must look
To prove all teachings of the Holy Book.
And so in lieu of certain facts we sought
This knowledge is but food for thought.
Since I for one, of average brain
Have eudged deeply—yet all in vain—
To seek the secret of the after life,
And strong in faith I live to die—and know!

PALMER NEWS.

Proposed Real Estate Deal.

The E. Brown Property on Main Street Likely to Change Hands.
It was announced the first of the week that a real estate deal having an important bearing on the business property situation on Main street had been consummated in the agreed sale of the E. Brown estate property to Arthur W. Holbrook. Since that time conflicting statements have been made until the situation became one of considerable doubt. Mr. Holbrook, who was seen this morning, stated that he considered the sale had been made. Mr. Barton, in charge of the matter for the estate, stated that Mr. Holbrook was justified, in view of an agreement reached between them Monday evening, in believing that he had bought the property, but that later matters came up which warranted him in notifying Mr. Holbrook that the sale was off for the time being at least, which he did. Mr. Barton admitted however that the matters in question were not such as might not be overcome, and that a decision might be reached this evening. Included in the original agreement was the sale to Charles H. Burns of the "Seism" property in the rear of the Burns Hotel and the Commercial block, including the narrow strip of land from the dwelling house to Bridge street.

Mr. Holbrook's intention was to build at once a large brick block on the land now occupied by the former office of the Journal, the automobile garage and the small building of the Brown estate occupied by Mrs. Langewald as a millinery store. He proposed a building about 90 feet square, with four stories on the ground floor, several suites of offices, and quarters for the town officers and the lookout if desired. He stated that it would be finished in modern style and up to date in every particular. Included in the plan was the renovation of the entire front of the Commercial block, of which he is already part owner, the installation of plate-glass fronts, etc. The E. Brown Co. was to have a five-years' lease of the portion now occupied by them.

Pastor Accepts Call.

Has Already Assumed His Duties at Second Baptist Church.

Rev. J. Hector Palmer, to whom the Baptist church recently extended a call, has accepted the invitation to become the church's pastor and has begun his work here. Mr. Palmer was born in Prince Edward's Island in 1876; when a young lad he went to Portland, Me., and while yet a youth worked for seven years at the carpenter's trade. He then attended school at the Maine Wesleyan Seminary at Kent's Hill, Me., and at Westbrook Seminary in Portland. He entered Brown University in 1900, graduating in 1904, following with courses at Newton and Hartford Theological seminaries. His first pastorate was over the First church of Elkhorn, Wis., where he served from 1906 to 1908. He then went to Providence and accepted the pastorate of the Lonsdale Baptist church. In 1910-11 he was given a Biblical Greek fellowship in the University of Chicago, being the first New England man to receive one. Upon completing his work there he returned to Providence, and supplied the pulpit of the Baptist church for a time resulting in his call to the pastorate. He will move his household effects to Palmer as soon as possible, and will occupy the parsonage on Thorndike street.

Twice Drunk in Five Days.

Frank Ziaonki was on Wednesday given 20 days in the house of correction for drunkenness. He was in court Monday for a Saturday spree, was fined $6 and given until to-morrow to pay. He acquired the money Tuesday and paid up, then proceeded to celebrate the event by getting full again. He's sobering off in Springfield.

Eugene Mitchell, formerly a clerk in the Kinsley Pharmacy, but recently employed in the B. and A. freight office, has returned to the Kinsley Pharmacy.

School Writing Improved.

Changes Inaugurated Last Spring Productive of Good Results.

Mr. Harry Houston, supervisor of penmanship in the public schools of New Haven, Ct., visited the Palmer schools Tuesday to give the teachers instruction in the teaching of penmanship. Mr. Houston began his work last spring, when he gave the Palmer teachers a talk on this branch of their work. His visit this week revealed that much good work had been accomplished. Mr. Houston found that vast strides toward improvement had been made, and that the teachers were all working hard toward that end. He commented freely on this attitude of the Palmer teachers as in marked contrast to that shown in some other places. In Palmer, he said, every one seemed to be anxious to fully understand the changes which he suggested when first here, and to follow them out as closely as possible so as to obtain the very best results, while in some instances very little attention is paid to his suggestions. The improvement since his first visit was so great that the superintendent of the New Britain normal school, to whom he mentioned it, has asked Superintendent Hobson of the Palmer schools for full-room sets of samples of the work.

Still More New Customers.

Electric Company Receiving Large Patronage. More Improvements.

Manager Parsons of the Central Massachusetts Electric Company reports a gain of 160 new customers in the past week, and is naturally greatly gratified. The number indicates that the public in the several communities served by the company fully appreciate the new management's policy of "co-operation," and are willing to meet them half way.

Mr. Parsons has been kept more than busy looking after the improvements and changes being made. Besides arranging for improvements at the station and in the distribution system at Palmer, he has had a large force at work in West Brookfield re-stringing the wires and changing transformer locations to increase the voltage so that the lights will be improved. He is to install a few street lights of the Tungsten variety for the inspection of the people and the town officials, so they will have an example of what can be done in modern street lighting and will be given substantial evidence of the company's good faith and willingness to co-operate.

Pole Falls With Man.

Who Almost Miraculously Escapes With Only Slight Injuries.

Owen McDermott, a lineman employed by the Central Massachusetts Electric Company, considers himself extremely fortunate in being alive, to say nothing of being without any serious hurts. Yesterday morning he was at work on a pole on Church street, opposite the office of the Worcester County Gas Company; he cut the wires leading to the residence of Dr. H. C. Cheney, and on their release the pole, which had rotted at the base, toppled over with him. He was attached to the pole, by a lifebelt and could not jump, so went down with it. His only hurts were a badly bumped nose and a few cuts on the face. He was attended by Dr. H. C. Cheney.

Funeral of Mrs. Ellis.

The funeral of Mrs. Julia B. Ellis was held Sunday afternoon from her late home on Central street. The services were conducted by Rev. Francis W. Gibbs of Providence, R. I., a former pastor, assisted by Rev. Otto S. Raspe, the present pastor of St. Paul's church. Two favorite hymns of Mrs. Ellis—"Abide with me," and "It is well with my soul"—were sung by Miss Blanche Upham, and Mr. Gibbs read from Whittier's "Eternal goodness," a favorite poem. The bearers were Herbert A. Northrop, Charles E. Fish, Frank N. Carpenter, Charles H. Keith, Everett W. Carpenter, Walter H. Shaw. Burial was in the family lot in Oak Knoll cemetery. There was a profusion of beautiful flowers.

She Was Jim's Sister

"What are you staring at?" asked Jim.

"At that stunning girl over there," replied Lawrence.

"Not that brunette with a figure like an hour glass. She's some chorus lady."

"No, the slender blonde with her back towards you, standing in the entrance to the cafe. She doesn't look coarse to me."

"How can you admire anyone who affects those new-fangled extreme fashions?" questioned Jim.

"I'd sure like to meet her. By the way, old chap, I thought you intended introducing me to your sister."

"If you admire that girl, sis wouldn't interest you. None of those tube-like skirts, flyaway hats and vivid showy colors for her. If my sister would be gowned like your fair friend I'd tell her a thing or two."

"Does your sister allow you to dictate to her?" asked Lawrence, fast losing his desire to meet the girl.

"Oh, I give her brotherly advice occasionally. She's all a twitter just now. A crowd of girls are learning to build their own dresses in a school. I've offered her five dollars the first time she wears a home-made creation."

"Turn around," exclaimed Lawrence. "That girl is trying to flirt with us. She just smiled the most adorable smile."

"He who flirts and runs away, lives to flirt another day," suggested Jim in a blase tone.

"Why, she's coming toward us. Must have made a hit with her. I've read oceans about love at first sight, but this is the first time the waves have struck me."

Jim was so bored by his friend's conversation that he didn't lift his eyes from the plate until a voice near him said:

"Jim, can't you make room for us at your table? All the others are taken."

"Surely," he said rising. "This is my friend Lawrence Hancock; my sister, Florence."

"Your sister," exclaimed Lawrence in astonishment. "Miss Allen? Why, your brother Jim was just talking about you, but somehow he failed to recognize you from a distance."

"It's a wise brother who recognizes his sister when she wears a new dress and hat which she made herself," laughed Florence. "What do you think of my skill?"

"You're as sharp as a needle," said Lawrence admiringly.

"It's fierce, abominable and hideous," broke in Jim. "Florence, for every frock that you don't make I'll give you five dollars. It's so tight it looks as though it had been made out of remnants, and a cow would run a mile if she saw that kerise hat coming along."

"Gee, but Jim's a brute," thought Lawrence. "I only hope that some day I will have the privilege of paying for her frocks," he said aloud.

"I presume your brother's word is law with you, Miss Allen."

"Indeed not," she answered airily. "I believe in woman's rights and its every woman's right to do just as she pleases; anyway brother's opinions about dress don't count."

"You look all right to me. May I call on you tomorrow evening?"

"Do come," answered Florence cordially.

"Thank you," responded Lawrence. After calling on Florence for about a month she gave him the hope he desired, that in the near future he could pay for her gowns.

Cork Leg Nearly Drowned Him.

William Green's cork leg nearly caused his death recently at Wynn, Mass. He got beyond his depth while bathing, and his artificial leg was so buoyant that his feet went up in the air and his head was forced under water. Happily, he was saved by a college girl, who was out bathing with a companion. She managed to get hold of Greene by the hair and held his head out of water, while her escort rowed to shore with Greene dragging behind.

There will be the usual morning services at the Baptist church next Sunday, under the charge of the new pastor, Rev. J. Hector Palmer. The Easter service of the Sunday school will be held in the evening at 7, the subject being "He hath triumphed." There will be a reading, "The love watch," by Miss Linton, and various class exercises, as well as a solo by Doris Thompson.

Rev. Otto S. Raspe, pastor of St. Paul's church, will take for his subject next Sunday morning "Life Everlasting." There will be special music, including two anthems, "Crown Him with many crowns" and "Come and see where Jesus lay," and a solo, "Hosanna," by Mr. Dale. A special order of service is being prepared. There will be an Easter concert in the evening at 7. There was a communion service last evening, with the reception of several candidates for membership.

Emil replied, "Then why didn't you take some when they passed it around?"—National Monthly.

THREE RIVERS. WANTS TOWN TO HELP.

Three Rivers Will Ask An Appropriation for Fire Protection.

The latest development in the Three Rivers fire protection struggle is the decision to have an article inserted in the warrant for the special town meeting, providing the Otis Company will consent to connect with their hydrants. A committee was appointed to get money pledged to install a system independent of the town, of which Charles Tracy is secretary. Mr. Tracy reports that the people are inclined to think that if the town could raise money to buy an engine and auto truck, also to build an engine house in which to keep them for the Depot village, that it could raise funds to lay a line of pipe and install hydrants for one of its other villages which has no protection whatsoever on the east side, its business section. He suggests that it would be well for the town to make this appropriation, as this village has been particularly unfortunate in the past with serious fires. People claim that a number would build on the east side if it had fire protection, and in view of this fact it would only be a few years before the town would realize more than it expended through the extra tax which the new buildings would pay.

MONDAY'S TOWN MEETING.

Selectmen All Re-elected. Town Refuses To Buy Auto Fire Truck.

The voters of Monson, in town meeting assembled Monday, said in effect, "Well done" to the board of selectmen which had served them for twelve months by re-electing them for another year by a generous majority over other candidates, of whom there were three. By a narrow margin it was decided not to buy an auto fire truck, and it was voted to give quit-claim deeds to a strip of land on the westerly side of High street in exchange for relinquishment of rights which individuals may have in the No. 1. schoolhouse lot, thereby disposing of the complications in connection with that matter. The time in which a discount may be had on taxes was extended from August 1 to September 1. The town stays in the license column by a majority of 43; last year it was 126 and 73 in 1910.

Good weather brought out a large number of voters, and a larger number than usual remained to take up the appropriation articles of the warrant at 10.30. There was some close votes in the election, as will be seen by the figures given below. There was only 65 votes difference between the highest and lowest of the successful candidates for selectmen, a remarkably close run, while the nearest opponent was 87 votes in the rear. John J. Pendergast lacked only 46 votes of election to the school committee, and Rufus Fay defeated C. J. Leary for water commissioner by the narrow margin of 16.

The article of the warrant which attracted most attention was No. 24, "To see if the Town will raise and appropriate $5000 for the purchase of a combination automobile fire truck," etc. A similar proposition was killed last year because little was known of the capabilities of such a piece of apparatus. Since then Palmer has had a truck, and information has been gathered from other places. The question caused considerable debate, and a yes and no vote could not be accurately judged, so a rising vote was taken, the motion being lost by a margin of only five.

Under article 5, relative to the No. 1 schoolhouse lot which was deeded to the town in 1820 by Amos Norcross under certain restrictions, R. H. Cushman, who represented the committee consisting of himself, A. E. Shaw and C. M. Gage, appointed a year ago to consider the matter, reported that they had made arrangements with the people interested and with the abutters, whereby the people holding reversionary interests in the lot for quit-claim deeds from the town to the land on the westerly side of High street abutting their property, and that the town then give the trustees of Monson Academy a quit-claim deed to the schoolhouse lot, a reasonable time being allowed for the removal of the buildings. This was voted.

The sum of $2000 will be spent on highway repairs, and $1000 for permanent highway. It was voted to build a gravel sidewalk on Thompson street and one on North Main street; to extend the Mill street bridge and to establish an electric light on Chestnut street. The sum of $1900 was voted for street lights and $350 for the purchase of new fire hose; this in addition to $1000 for the usual expenses of the fire department.

The total appropriations are $29,785, or about $4000 more than last year, and the tax rate will probably be about $18 on $1000, a raise of $1. The appropriations in detail:

"And laid him in a manger."—St. Luke, 7.
"And he, bearing his cross, went forth."—St. John XIX, 17.
Mary, Mary, your song was sweet
Soft and sweet, and crooning low;
True and tender its measure beat
Out into the morning glow
When the promise was made complete
On that Christmas long ago.

Shepherds watching their flocks, they heard
Angel choruses, word on word,
And their souls were with wonder stirred—
Mary, Mary, your song was sweet.

Gently, gently, you hummed the song
In the stable poor and bare—Still it echoes, and echoes long
In a mother song all fair,
In a melody true and strong
That all humble folk may share.

Wise men, bearded, and gray, and gaunt,
Rode through sunbeams that fell aslant,
Giving voice to a glory chant—
Mary, Mary, your song was sweet.

Stripes, and jeers, and the heavy tree—
These were his, and words of scorn, Sorrow deeper than grief might be,
Bruising goad, and piercing thorn—
Still there echoed the melody
Which you crooned that Christmas morn.

One has brought him a winding sheet,
One has spices for head and feet;
Now the price has been paid complete—
Mary, Mary, your song was sweet.

The Delinquent Rabbit

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

THEY said last year when Easter was, an' me an' brother John Got lots o' eggs with names an'
lots o' little pictures on,
That rabbits laid the Easter eggs,
an' pa he showed me where
Th' paper had a picture of th' rabbit nest, an' there
Was colored eggs all roundabout, an' rabbits hoppin' round

"An' Pa, He Showed Me Where th' Paper Had a Picture of th' Rabbit Nest."

As if they's glad, their Easter eggs by little boys was found.

An' so I got a bunny now; I had it for a week,
An' it ain't cackled none at all, although I go an' peek
Inside its little house an' look if I can find some eggs—

"I've Showed It Pictures Like I Want Put on My Easter Eggs."

But it just sits up when I come, an' begs an' begs an' begs
For lettuce leaf an' cabbage leaf, an' shivers with its nose—
I wonder if a rabbit flaps its wings some when it crows!

I'm tryin' to encase-ridge it; I've give it lots o' straw—
But it don't build a nest at all, it wants to sit an' gnaw
Th' cabbage leaves, an' hop around an'
scare at dogs an' cats, an' turn an' jump a foot or two when I look through th' slats, an' when it's night th' rabbit won't get up there on th' roost,
an' doesn't like it when I try to help it with a boost.

He showed it pictures like I want put on my Easter eggs—
I guess it understands me, 'cause it took them with its legs

"Just Sits—an' Begs an' Begs."

In front, an' held them up, an' tried to eat them, too;
Then let them drop an' looked at me as if to say it knew
Just what I meant—but still it's mighty lucy;
It hasn't laid an egg at all, an' Easter's nearly here.
It just sets round an' spends its time a "griggle-in" its ears
An' "jimpin" sideways, 'fradlike, at each little sound it hears.
I got some corn an' stuff like chickens eat, an' throwed it in,
An' told my rabbit that it's time egg-hunting should begin;
I got a nice big nest egg an' I've put it in th' nest
An' told my rabbit to sail in an' do its level best.

Make Your Own Easter Bonnet.

How few women realize the possibilities of things that are ready to hand for making an Easter bonnet that shall be beautiful, unique and individual! The ordinary clothes line lends itself readily to a most artistic creation. Take one that is about worn out and coil it into a brim. Soak this overnight in glue to fix it flatly.
Then for the body of the hat shred about ten feet of the rope and arrange this upon graceful loops of the remainder, dyeing it all in different tints to suit your complexion or your taste.

Fasten it on with clothes pins.

A PASSING THOUGHT.

Life is like an Easter egg.
We shatter many a lively dream, and when we've reached the useful part
We've spoiled the decorative scheme.

Always a Fly in the Ointment.

The two old cronies happened to be taking an automobile ride through the fruit belt.

"Rammage," observed the man with the cropped mustache, "this is a land of plenty. I could be perfectly happy here."

"You wouldn't though, Ruggles," returned the man with the auburn beard. "I'll bet you a dollar that the first man you congratulate on his prosperity will put up a howl about his hard luck."

"You're on."

Ten minutes later they stopped at a farmhouse, ostensibly to get a drink of water.

"You've got the finest yield of grapes in that vineyard," casually remarked Ruggles, "I ever saw in my life."

"I've got too gash-blamed many grapes this year. I can't git 'em in half enough baskets to ship 'em in."

"Rammage, you win," said Ruggles.
And they rode on.

We Always Have What We Advertise

A Public Proposal

Story of Interpolations in the Easter Anthem

PERKINS sat beside Miss Lewis in the choir. Perkins sang baritone, and she sang alto. They had sang in the choir for two years, and naturally it was a polite act at the first for him to ef-fer to escort her home after choir practice.

This got to be a habit with him, until one evening he experienced a peculiar shock. Another man appeared at the choir rehearsal and listened with evident enjoyment to the singing, and then calmly walked away with Miss Lewis.

Shocks of this sort are salutary to the young man in love. Without them he takes the affair in too much of a matter of course way. He simply drifts.

The drifting lover is not a satisfactory one to a girl. The tide of his affection may be smooth enough, but it does not get anywhere. Women like the ambitious, aggressive man.

And certainly, from the feminine standpoint, aggressiveness and ambition are never more aptly exercised than in the effort to win her hand.
Winning a hand is different from holding it as though it were inherited property.

The other man was Hollicker. Hol-licker was a man who formulated a campaign as soon as he decided upon its object.

Consequently he had maneuvered so that Perkins had had mighty few moments with Miss Lewis.

And she enjoyed it. No matter how much a girl thinks of a man, she must enjoy his desperation and despair when he sees another man apparently winning her away from him. It is this elusiveness in woman nature that constitutes a large part of her human nature.

Perkins wanted to propose now, badly enough. But he needed the chance. This Easter morning when the choir arose to sing the anthem he looked over the congregation and he gripped his teeth when he saw Hol-licker sitting right in the Lewis pew.

Mechanically he took up his part of the anthem, and as he sang an inspiration came to him. He and Miss Lewis had sort of a recitative second part to the solo during most of the anthem. The soprano carried the air and held all the attention of the audience, and the deep tones of the organ effectually hid the words the baritone and Miss Lewis sang.

Instead of the words on the page before him he touched her elbow with his and softly sang:

"Am I never to have a chance—
Never to have a chance—
A chance to speak to you alone?"

She glanced at him almost with alarm. She could not believe she had heard him aright. He returned her glance and again sang:

"I mean what I say.
Listen to me,

For I am deeply—
Am deeply in earnest this morning."

With another glance, of understanding this time, she sang:

"What in the world—
What in the world—
What in the world do you mean?"

Perkins waited until it was his time to sing again and then he leaned a bit toward her and sang:

"You know very well—
You know very well!"

She took up her part of the anthem in her mellow alto tones at once with:

"I can't imagine—
Can't imagine—
What do you mean?"

It was the moment for the choir to swing into the finale. The organ was booming and the singers were beginning to fortissimo passages. Perkins

"I Will—I Will—But Do Not Kiss Me Here—Not Here."

slipped his hand under the book and caught her fingers in his. He sang:

"This is my only chance—
Say that you will wed me.
O, say that you will wed me.
Will wed me."

There was an answering pressure on his fingers, and with a demure smile on her lips she answered:

"I will—
I will.
But do not kiss me here—
Not here."

As the congregation was leaving Hollicker came to Miss Lewis and said:

"I must congratulate you on the expression you gave to your part of the music this morning."

"So must I," Perkins declared. "And while you are about it, you might as well congratulate us both."

Facts About Indigestion and Its Re-

Although Indigestion and Dyspepsia are so prevalent, most people do not thoroughly understand their cause and cure. There is no reason why most people should not eat anything they desire—if they will only chew it carefully and thoroughly. Many actually starve themselves into sickness through fear of eating every good-looking, good-smelling, and good-tasting food, because it does not agree with them.

The best thing to do is to fit your-

We believe we can relieve Dyspep-

PALMER, MASS., FRIDAY EVENING, APRIL 12, 1912.

THOUGHT IT SMALLPOX.

Exciting Time on Boston and Albany Train Monday.

PASSENGERS QUARANTINED IN CAR.

Health Officers Summoned, Finally Decide Child Has Case of Chicken-pox Only.

There was a smallpox scare on train No. 7 on the Boston and Albany road, due in Palmer at 10.46 from Boston, Tuesday morning, and for a time there was a scurrying around of railroad officials and a gathering at the station of curious ones who happened to hear the report. The excitement was out of all proportion to the alleged patient, a two-years-old child, but following the principal laid down in "Great oaks from little acorns grow," the railroad authorities proposed to take no chances.

Station Agent Rice of Palmer was notified by wire from Boston not long before the train was due that it had a case of smallpox on board. He was ordered to allow no one to enter or leave the car in which it was, and to have a physician at the station on the arrival of the train. Dr. J. P. Schneider was summoned. The train arrived about 20 minutes late and was stopped east of the station until orders as to quarantine could be given the train crew. Dr. Schneider boarded the train at the station and proceeded with the victim to Springfield. There, after some time had been spent in locating the proper persons, the health officer was secured, and with other physicians a careful examination was made. After a delay there of about an hour it was decided that the case was a mild one of chicken-pox and the train was allowed to proceed, minus such passengers in the quarantined car as chose to leave.

The innocent cause of the tangle was a small Italian child, which was noticed to have blotches on its face after leaving Worcester. Inquiries revealed the fact that the party came from Salem, where smallpox is prevalent just now, and naturally there was suspicion of the disease. There were about 60 passengers on the car, and there was a sigh of relief in Springfield when it was decided that there would be no need to quarantine them for a time in that city, as first seemed imminent.

Extending Electric Wires.

Palmer Company Gets Granby Franchise. New Flat-rate Circuit.

At a town meeting held Monday the town of Granby voted to give the Central Massachusetts Electric company a franchise to erect poles and string wires in that town, and the work is to be commenced at once. The company expects to be able to supply the citizens of that place with electricity for all purposes in a few weeks. In order to do this to the best advantage a 13,000 volt sub-station will be built at Three Rivers, and this will enable the company to give the citizens of Three Rivers a much better service than is now possible. Electricity will be furnished for power, and it is expected that the Palmer Mill will be a generous user for this purpose.

Manager Parsons is putting in as fast as possible a flat-rate circuit for users of electricity for lighting show windows and for electric signs. It will be connected with a time-switch which will automatically turn the lights on at one-half hour after sunset and turn them off at 11 at night. By this means a merchant may leave his show window lights on after the store closes at night without having the lights burn all night. The price will be a fixed one per lamp per month, and the company will give free renewals of Tungsten lamps used in the window lighting.

Lively Brush Fire Sunday.

The fire department was called by telephone about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon to a brisk blaze in the woods at the Point of Rocks on North Main street. The fire started on land of the Holbrook estate and spread over the hill to land of G. E. Buck. About five acres were burned over. It is not known definitely how the fire started, but a man was seen going over the hill by a path close to where the blaze originated only a few moments before. The department was on hand with the auto truck and a dozen or more men in five minutes after the alarm sounded.

WILBRAHAM.

At an adjourned meeting of the First Congregational parish Monday evening, a plan was presented for the new church. It is expected that the architect will have the plans drawn in full by May for the building committee.

Scared To Death By Dog.

Ware Child Buries Blood Vessel By Screaming in Frigate.

Mary, the four-years-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Swistak of Ware, died from fright Wednesday afternoon about 1 o'clock. The child had been in her usual health and after eating dinner sat on the steps in front of her home. A puppy belonging to a neighbor was playing in the yard and seeing the child, ran playfully toward her, but was unable to get up the steps. The little girl was so frightened at the dog's approach that she screamed, and almost immediately blood flowed from her mouth and nostrils. The child's mother heard the screaming and running out she carried her daughter into the house and laid her on the bed. She died immediately. Medical Examiner Dr. W. W. Miner, who was called, said the child died of hemorrhage of the lungs induced by fright. He said that the excitement caused by fright resulted in the bursting of a blood vessel in the lungs and that the case was a very rare one.

West Warren Strike Over.

Operatives Get Increase in Pay and Vote To Return to Work.

The strike at the Warren cotton mills of the Thorndike company at West Warren, which began March 18th, ended Monday afternoon, when the Polish help held a meeting and unanimously voted to return to work upon the new schedules of wages. This schedule was posted Monday afternoon by the mill management, and gives an increase of from 7 1-2 per cent to 15 per cent.

The original strike was for a raise of three quarters per cent per foot for weaving a certain grade of cashmere for which they have been receiving 37 cents and on the 18th of March they were granted an advance to 39 1-4 cents. The strikers asked for 40 cents and they are now granted a further increase to 41 cents per cut. There has at the same time been made an adjustment of wages so that the poorer paid help will benefit more than some others.

It is to be said for all concerned that everything has remained quiet during the strike. When the strike started the selectmen appointed 18 special officers, but few of these have been called upon to do anything except as night watchmen at the mills.

Notices were posted Monday afternoon that all the mills would start Tuesday morning and all would be given employment if the different departments had sufficient help to run them.

FIRE DISTRICT ANNUAL.

Mightily Little Interest Shown in Important Event.

ONLY FIFTEEN VOTES CAST TUESDAY.

Fire Alarm System to Be Changed. Old Officers Re-elected. Cash in The Treasury.

Apparently it will not be many years until it will be necessary to ring a fire alarm in order to get a quorum to do business at the annual fire district meeting, provided the lack of interest progresses at the present rate. Last year only 21 votes were cast and on Tuesday there were only 15, and not all of the voters remained to the business meeting.

George E. Clough was chosen moderator, and the reports of the various officers were accepted as read. The treasurer reported a balance of $465.22 on hand. It was voted to change the fire alarm system from the present battery system to that of storage battery, to be charged from the street railway current. The present system is unsatisfactory and unreliable, and the new system is being adopted in most places; it has been in use in Ware for some time and works perfectly. The cost of maintaining the present system is about $125 a year, while the cost of the new will be less than $10 probably. The cost of changing is $500. The salary of the fire patrol was raised from $25 to $350, and that of the janitor of the engine house to $150 on account of the increased labor required for the new heating apparatus and the care of the auto truck. The sum of $500 was also appropriated for new hose. Two new fire alarm boxes were voted to replace 66 and 68, which are of the old style and worn out, these being the two which are most used; they have given trouble for a long time. The tax collector was instructed to charge interest at the rate of 6 per cent on all taxes not paid on October 1. The appropriations were:

The board of engineers reported property owned by the district to the value of $9,704.85. They reported favorably on the work of the auto fire truck, stating that it has proved an unequalled success, and it has never failed and has already saved the district and town thousands of dollars worth of property. It has proved particularly valuable in forest fire work. The total amount of property involved in the first district fires was $22,289, the loss was $6,519 and the amount saved was $15,770; in the Three Rivers fire the amount involved was $170,125, the loss was $70,925 and the amount saved was $99,200. The list of calls during the year was as follows:

April 22. Telephone call. Grass fire Cooley's Crossing. About 20 acres burned over. Cost to extinguish $15.

frolics he ventured too near the Chicopee river and rolled in. The water was deep and the current swift, and he was swept quickly along. He had gone some distance when he was seen by Thomas Holt, employed in the machine shop of the Palmer Mill. He at once ran out, leaped the fence on the river bank and plunged into the stream. Young Goudek was by this time some distance from the shore, but Holt reached him quickly and seizing him turned and swam to the shore. The lad was taken to the boiler room of the mill, where he was warmed and soon recovered from his impromptu bath, after which he was taken to his home. Holt changed his clothes and returned to his work.

Brimfield's New Landlord.

Springfield Man in Charge of Hostelry On Historic Stand.

The management of the Brimfield hotel at Brimfield was taken over last week by the new proprietor, Henry Addison Bidwell of Springfield. The change of administration from that of George W. Braekett, who has owned and managed this historic and well-known hostelry for the past five years, to that of Mr. Bidwell has taken place without any break in hospitality or efficient service. Mr. and Mrs. Braekett and family have moved into the Chamberlain residence, now the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Lincoln Peirce of Newtonville, to remain for a time, and the new landlord commenced his duties with the hearty goodwill of his predecessor.

There is a deep and wide-spread interest in the management of the Brimfield hotel because of its connection with the history of the town and its relation to the social life of the section, and also because the present building was erected by citizens with the co-operation of descendants of the town. Of late years its patronage has been largely of those connected with Brimfield by ties of kinship or association. The present building is the third structure on the site where the first hotel was built in 1808, and the stand has been an important inn and abiding place and a social center of the town and section for a century. In the early half of the past century it was the place of intersection of long-distance stage-coach lines between Hartford and Worcester, and Springfield and Providence, and was a stopping place for stage travelers and for exchange of horses. Later it was the hospitable inn for passengers on the Southbridge and Palmer stage line until the opening of the Springfield and Worcester electric road in 1907. The hotel has also been an important ally of the Hitchcock Free Academy by furnishing a home for teachers and pupils and accommodation for alumni and those visiting the school.

In undertaking the conduct of this historic stand the new proprietor is desirous of maintaining its traditions as a place of homelike hospitality for local people, friends of the town and strangers, and also for the many Springfield people with whom he has been associated since boyhood.

Mr. Bidwell is a graduate of the Springfield high school, and for two years after graduation was employed as floor walker by the firm of Meekins, Packard & Wheat. From this position he was suddenly called to his home in Becket by the death of his father, Addison H. Bidwell, a prominent citizen and former postmaster of that town, who had carried on a large business as proprietor of the leading general store in the vicinity. It is business had been handed down from the young man's grandfather, who was also associated with the late Ex-Gov. Clafin in the tannery business, for which Becket was noted. However, instead of continuing the mercantile business of his forefathers, Mr. Bidwell, being of a social disposition and hospitable spirit, has decided to start in this new enterprise, believing that a good country hotel can be made to please and pay at the same time, and that the one in Brimfield affords a good opening for a young man of business ambition and push. Mr. Bidwell has divided his time for the past two years between the care of his father's estate and family matters and a real estate business, and has been located in Springfield, where he is a member of the board of trade and of several well known clubs.

As Grange members, Mr. and Mrs. Bidwell will come into especially close relations with the community life. In their capacity of host and hostess they will have the co-operation and assistance of their mother, Mrs. Addison Bidwell, in extending the hospitality of the hotel and in making it fulfill the name already applied to it, "The Place of Contentment." The house is undergoing some improvements and is being newly decorated throughout.

ELECTRIC WIRE BURNS.

Thorndike Boy's Feet and Hand Severely Injured.

TANGLED IN WIRE WHILE AT PLAY.

Moving House Pulls Wires Down. Youngster Had Been Driven Away Once Before.

As a result of coming in contact with a live electric wire, Ernest, the four-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Labelle of Main street, Thorndike, is in the Mercy hospital in Springfield with severe burns on his hands and feet. The hurts were received last Saturday afternoon while the little fellow was playing in the street near his home.

A building which was being moved along the highway came in contact with the wires of the Central Massachusetts Electric Company and the strain broke the pole, which in falling broke the wires. Young Labelle, whose home was several blocks away and who had been driven away from the building by the mover, became entangled in the wires and was severely burned. Neighbors noticed the predicament of the little fellow and rescued him. The electric company was notified later that the pole was down and the wires broken, and repaired the damage. The boy was cared for by Dr. Dunphy, and on Monday was taken by his father to the hospital. There the index finger of the right hand was amputated, and there is a possibility that another finger, or a portion of it, may have to come off.

League Records Smashed.

The Athletics smashed three Palmer league records Wednesday night in rolling against the Electric Five, and by so doing took all three points, giving them a clear title to first place. The first record to go was the individual single of 124 held by Mitchell, which Doherty boosted to 127; this, with Holden's 112 ran the high team score up to 502, or 12 pins more than the 490 score the Independents had held for so long. The high team total of 1364, held by the Athletics, was pushed up to 1425 by the consistent bowling of Holden, who got singles of 112, 103 and 100, a total of 315. The score:

Starve to Gain Weight.

The fat one who has been cut out of meals galore will now rejoice. The last cure for thinness is to omit every other dinner. A man under such treatment by advice of an up-to-date physician has gained at the rate of two pounds a week. With Parisian specialists advising five meals a day for obesity it sounds as if the doctors liked change as much as the mode-makers.

A Professional Paradox.

The study of science is not necessarily all gray; it may have its rosy patches. It is said that a learned professor of Heidelberg forbade his students the repetition of a certain experiment.

"But," they protested, "it has always been successful."

"Nevertheless," he said, "its position among experiments is absolutely untenable from an intellectual point of view."

The boys stared.

"The thing may answer very well in practice," said the professor, "but it is not sound in theory."—Yonkers Companion.

SOME EXCUSE FOR MULES

But Ranch Hand Had Poor Opinion of Any Other Living Thing That Made Same Mistake.

"Recently," writes attorney Earl B. Smith of Somerton, Yuma county, Arizona, "I was obliged to remain at a primitive southern Arizona ranch over night, and at about dusk I was given a quilt, a clean sheet, and a pillow and told to take them to the top of a 20-foot alfalfa stack and make up my bed. Knowing the condition of the country, I did not murmur, and climbed the pole ladder to spend the night. I never enjoyed a better night's rest at any hotel. At early dawn I raised my head and saw two yearling mule colts feeding at the edge of the stack. We exchanged glances for a moment, while the mules' ears showed keen astonishment. Suddenly I rose to my feet, and in doing so the white sheet clung to my shoulders, where upon the colts 'ilt out' down the lane as if the Angel Gabriel were descending to take them to celestial pasture. While at the breakfast table I related the incident, which was much enjoyed, but no remarks were made at the time. As one of the ranch hands was passing out of the door he said in a subdued but distinctly audible voice that it was the first time he had ever heard of a lawyer being mistaken for an angel, and nobody but a mule would have made such an error."

SOME RIGHT TO BE ANGRY

Foreigner's Action That Was a Knock-Out Blow to New Yorker's Idea of Courtesy.

The maddest man on a Mount Vernon-New York car the other evening was a polite man. There was the usual Sunday night crowd waiting on the curb for an opportunity to get to the subway at One Hundred and Seventy-seventh street, and only the lucky ones got seats. The alms were filled with standees before the car started for New York.

Only one man of sturdy build and foreign extraction was clumsily holding a baby in his arms. Beside him was his wife, also a strapping man. The polite man observed them, thought it was tough luck to have to stand with a chubby youngster in one's arms, all the way to the city, and offered his own seat to the tired couple.

The sturdy young man of foreign extraction accepted the courtesy with a murmur of thanks. He gave a sigh of relief as he sank into the vacant seat. Then—he handed the baby up to his mother to hold, which she did the rest of the way.—New York Times.

Art of Punctuation.

A man went into the Jewell County Monitor office and asked the young apprentice what rules of punctuation he followed. The boy replied: "I set as long as I can hold my breath and then I put in a comma, when I gape I insert a semi-colon, and when I want a chew of tobacco I make a paragraph."—Kansas City Journal.

Wild Oats Crop.

If the statistics were available probably it would be found that 65 per cent. of young men who are sowing wild oats are permitting somebody else to pay for their oatmeal.—Galveston News.

MAY PROVE FATAL

When Will Palmer People Learn the Importance Of It?

Backache is only a simple thing at first; But when you know 'tis from the kidneys:

That serious kidney troubles follow:

That dropsy, Bright's disease may be the fatal end.

You will gladly profit by the following experience.

'Tis the honest statement of a sufferer who was cured.

Mrs. D. H. Barnes, Main St., Monson, Mass., says:—

"I gladly verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills given in 1906. I had considerable trouble from backache, especially when I went up or down stairs. I was very restless and in the morning felt tired and unrefreshed. Reading about Doan's Kidney Pills, I decided to give them a trial and the first few doses convinced me that they were a remedy of merit. The contents of two or three boxes removed the pain and lameness and restored me to good health. This remedy has been used by another member of my family and in that case the results were satisfactory."

Why YOU Should Use Tungsten Lamps

If your Light costs too much, it's because you don't use Sunbeam Wiretype Tungsten Lamps.

They cut a dollar lighting bill down to 40 cents because they use only 2-5 as much current as ordinary incandescent lamps, and that's not the whole story either. Compare this Light with ANY other and you will see a wonderful difference. It's more agreeable to the eye, easier for reading and working, shows colors up better. It's more like natural daylight than any other Light you ever used. "It's the Sun's only Rival."

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

PAPER BAGGING THE SCRAPS.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.
Beware the fast after a day of out-of-the-ordinary feasting. Abrupt transitions are bad alike for body and mind.

Is it traditional in your family to have a lordly roast turkey on family feast days, if they were in the turkey season? Then the remains of the bird, either in patties or croquettes will help you keep from fasting after the first dinner of the new year. But there is another shape for the remains—one which I have not so far seen in print. Pick up the meat, free it of skin, bone and gristle, cut in bits, not too fine, and pack a layer of it neatly at the bottom of a buttered paper bag mould. Dot with bits of stuffing if any remains, also gravy from the dish—made gravy is too heavy. Cover the meat layer with a layer of cranberry sauce and put meat on that, also seasoning. Repeat till all the meat and sauce are used. If the bulk is scant, put in a middle layer of toasted bread crumbs. Cover the top layer of cranberries with crumbs rather thickly. Slip the mould inside another bag and cook about eight minutes. Serve either hot or cold. Excellent for luncheon or tea.

Most likely the baron of beef was but half eaten. Cut the best of it into neat slices half an inch thick, two inches wide and four inches long. Dip them in melted butter, roll in a little salted flour, sprinkle lightly with vinegar or lemon juice and let them stand an hour in a warm place, keeping them well covered. Make a good crust, shortening it with suet or drippings if possible, and putting in a little more salt than for pastry. Roll it a quarter-inch thick and line with it a mould, either tin or paper bag, of sufficient size. The mould must be well-greased, and if made from a bag, clipped extra-tight at the corners. Lay upon the bottom slices of meat, letting them lap a little, single-wise. Cover this layer with thin sliced onions, sliced and peeled white potatoes and the sliced yolk of a very hard-boiled egg. Season very lightly with salt and pepper, then put on another layer of meat. Bread crumbs or slips of crust may alternate with the vegetables or take their place. Whatever is used do not overfill the mould. Put a layer of crust in strips on top, or else a thick coating of crumbs. Pour over melted butter, enough to season well, and an equal quantity of tomato catsup or tomatoes stewed to a pulp. If you like a lattice crust or a solid one, put in the butter and tomatoes before adding it. Pour in a tablespoonful of boiling water also, put on the top, set the mould in a very well-greased bag and cook thirty-five to fifty minutes, according to size. The result should be a beefsteak pie as tasteful as ever came out of the oven.

The snippets and trimmings of the roast, minced fine or ground, mixed well through mashed potato and cooked in a greased bag, either in one big cake or many smaller ones, provide excellent supper fare. Ten minutes of baking is enough.
Meat and rice pudding can be cooked either directly in the bag or put in a mould and then in a bag. To make it, throw a cup of well-washed rice into a kettleful of salted water that is boiling hard. Stir once—no more—and boil eighteen to twenty minutes. Drain away all water, then stir into the hot rice a large spoonful of butter, a cup of rich milk, beaten up with two eggs, salt and pepper to taste, and two cupfuls of finely minced cold meat very lightly dusted with corn starch. Pour on a little tomato catsup or add a half-cup of dry tomato pulp. Dot lightly with butter or sprinkle with grated cheese. Cook for twelve minutes in a hot oven and serve from the mould.

If the rice and meat pudding is for children, leave out the pepper and catsup. By making the mixture stiffer, leaving out part of the milk and adding a little flour, you can shape it into balls, dip them in egg and bread crumbs and bake inside a thickly-greased bag to a light brown. Instead of rice, whole wheat bread crumbs can be mixed with the meat, then the mixture bound together with egg beaten in milk, seasoned lightly with salt and sweet herbs, also a little melted butter, and cooked in a bag ten minutes. All that requires cooking is the egg and milk, as the meat and crumbs are already well done.

Shredded wheat biscuit, crumbled fine, make the basis of a very good nursery pudding. Take two cups of crumbs, two cups finely chopped apple, half a cup of butter creamed with one cup of sugar, half a cup of raisins well-floured, half a cup of flour sifted with one teaspoonful baking powder, and one cup sweet milk added to two well-beaten eggs. Put in a pinch of salt, beat all well together, pour into a mould which is very well-greased, set the mould inside a bag and bake very slowly for an hour and a half.

Here is a sort of rice pudding without eggs, entirely possible to the paper bag. Wash very well a scant half-cup of rice, mix it with a cup of seeded raisins cut in half, a cup of sugar, a teaspoonful of butter and a large cup of milk. Put all in a very well-greased bag, seal and cook slowly for an hour and a half.

WARREN.

Lively Runaway.

A horse owned by Edward Brown of Brimfield created some excitement Saturday in front of Hastings' pharmacy on Main street. A passing automobile truck loaded with furniture frightened the animal, which jumped toward the walk. The horse was hitched with a large rope and could not get away. Before anyone could get to the animal it had made a complete turn around the post and when he stopped the wagon was on its side and the horse stood in the shafts facing the carriage. It was only the work of a few minutes to loosen the harness, and when the carriage was again righted, it was found that the entire damage was a small break in the harness.

Sherwin - Kibbe.

The marriage of Miss Ellen G. Sherwin, daughter of Henry Sherwin of Jamaica Plain, to Louis G. Kibbe of Warren took place in Roxbury Wednesday evening. The maid of honor was Miss Alice L. Ware, and the best man was Willie Brown of New York. Miss Adele Fairbrother and Miss Dorothy Fairbrother of West Newton were bridesmaids. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's father in Jamaica Plain. Mr. and Mrs. Kibbe, after their wedding trip to Bermuda, will live on Bacon street in Warren. Mr. Kibbe has been for the past 2 1/2 years assistant manager of the Warren steam pump company.

Sudden Death of H. A. Tuttle.

Henry A. Tuttle, 67, died very suddenly Saturday morning at 1 o'clock at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Herbert N. Tuttle, on Crescent street. Mr. Tuttle had been in his usual health and rode out Friday, but was taken ill late that evening and died in a few hours from a cerebral hemorrhage. He was born in Blandford, and had made his home during recent years with his only sister, Mrs. Mary Hinsdale, in Meriden, Ct. He had been in Warren since the death of his twin brother, the late Herbert N. Tuttle, last October.

Runaway Boys.

Lester Rice, 13, and Homer Rice, 15, sons of W. A. Rice, who lives on the corner of West Main street and Moore avenue, started to run away Saturday morning. They had a dress suit case packed with clothing and were seen starting to jump a freight train. Constable William T. Haley and their father were notified and the boys were overtaken near the passenger depot. They had planned to go to Boston and strike out for themselves. They were persuaded to return to their home and no charge was brought against them.

At a regular meeting of Warren Grange last Friday evening the first and second degrees were conferred upon a class of 13 candidates. After the degree work there was a literary and musical program carried out in charge of the following committee: Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Gilligan, Mrs. Jennie Johnson, Miss Minnie Mason and Leroy Kimmel.

Michael Miller and his mother, Mrs. George Miller, met with an accident as they were driving down School street Sunday afternoon about 5 o'clock. They made the turn to West Main street too quickly and the buggy was upset, throwing the horse on his side and Mrs. Miller and Mr. Miller were thrown out. Neither were injured beyond a few bruises, but the horse was cut some.

WARE.

Edward Cote Found Dead.

The body of Edward Cote, 41, was found late Monday afternoon on a side hill near the Gilbertville road, a short distance from the road leading to what is known as Ragged Hill. Edward Cote, a conductor on the Gilbertville line, saw the body while making the trip to Gilbertville. An investigation was made and Chief of Police B. W. Buckley was notified. The body was viewed by Medical Examiner Dr. W. W. Miner, who was notified, and it was taken to the undertaking rooms of L. S. Charbonneau. The man had been making his home on Ragged Hill and left there Sunday morning to attend church in Gilbertville. It was found upon investigation that he left the latter place Sunday evening at 6 and returning had boarded the car at Morse avenue just before 9, leaving the car at the Ragged Hill road. It was the opinion of the medical examiner that death was due to exposure and from the effects of liquor. Cote was one of 24 children, the son of Mrs. John James of Easthampton. He had lived in this section for about 15 years, coming from Lowell to Gilbertville, where he lived until a few years ago, when he moved to Ware.

Death of Gamaliel Marsh.

Gamaliel Marsh, 91, Ware's oldest citizen, died Monday afternoon at his home on Church street from complications of diseases due to old age. Mr. Marsh was remarkably active for his years up to a short time before his death. Until he retired from business last fall, he could be found at his shop daily, and until a year ago he worked at the bench as a tinsmith. He was one of Ware's most respected citizens. He was born in that part of Hardwick now embraced by the village of Gilbertville, and had lived in Ware and vicinity most of the time with the exception of 30 years spent in Chicopee. He was twice married. He is survived by two children, Nellie, who kept house for him, and Abner H., who is in business in Aberdeen, Wash. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Death of Owen F. McMahon.

Owen F. McMahon, 66, one of the oldest Irish residents of Ware, died at his home on West Main street Wednesday night of heart failure after being in ill health all winter. He was born in Ireland, and came to this country at the age of three years, going first to Worcester. About 50 years ago he came to Ware and learned the trade of marble cutter, in which business he was engaged at the time of his death. He leaves three daughters, Mary A., Alice C. and Jennie L., all of Ware, one son, Joseph of New York, and one sister, Miss Alice J. McMahon of Worcester. The funeral will be held to-morrow morning in All Saints' church, and burial will be in St. William's cemetery.

Death of Mrs. Edward J. Fallon.

Mrs. Edward J. Fallon, 41, died Tuesday night at her home on Cottage street after four-days' illness of pneumonia. Mrs. Fallon's maiden name was Katherine Donohue and she was a native of Bondsville. She leaves besides her husband, two sons, Michael, aged five, and Edward, aged one.

The employees of the filling department of C. A. Stevens & Co. Monday night demanded and received an increase in wages from $6.80 to $7.50 a week.

The annual meeting of Trinity Episcopal church resulted as follows: Senior warden, Wilfred Lawson; junior warden, Robert S. Greenwood; secretary, Clarence W. Booth; treasurer, George W. Dunham; auditor, Frederic D. Gilmore; vestry, Edward H. Gilbert, George Emerson, William J. McCann, Ossian N. Moore and C. G. V. Sjostrom.

Historical Society Meeting.

Lecture of Rare Enjoyment Given by Rev. F. S. Childs.

As had been announced, Rev. F. S. Childs of East Brimfield read his paper on "A university atmosphere, reminiscences of good folk and great," at the meeting of the Palmer Historical society Tuesday evening. Mr. Childs' father was a notable professor at Harvard, the possessor of thirty-nine languages, which he spoke fluently, and was constantly the host of many of the great men of this country as well as of Europe, so that his son had the rare opportunity of gaining the acquaintance of his father's guests. In his lecture Mr. Childs made his many acquaintances pass in rapid review before his audience, describing their varied characteristics and in many cases repeating their very conversation, which in some instances was most amusing, especially when the speaker impersonated the originals in every tone and gesture. The lecture was a rare treat and was richly enjoyed by those who braved the inclemency of the weather to attend.

The Perfect Test

By Annie Hinrichsen

"Do you really mean that you will give me no explanation?"

"I can not explain, Katherine."

Carter protested. "My reason is an excellent one. Some time I can give it to you. I ask you to trust me until that time."

"We have been the best of good friends, Doane. Before the legislature convened you came often from your home in Johnsville to Benton to see me, a distance of seventy miles. After the legislature assembled and you were in Capital City, ten miles from my home, you came once to Benton. Then you wrote me that you could not come again for many weeks, probably not until the legislature adjourns. You said there is a reason which some time I shall understand and—and you asked me to—"

"To love me and trust me," Carter broke in. "You did not answer my letter."

"Of course, I did not. When a man tells a girl he does not intend to see her again she knows it is because he does not want to. I come to Capital City every few days to see my sister, who is in a hospital here. Today I meet you by chance, and you ask me to believe that you care for me?"

"You know I love you, Katherine. Will you not trust me a few weeks? Will you not believe that my reason is a good one and an honorable one?"

"Then why not tell me?"

"I can't, dear, yet."

"Is it because you can not trust me with the reason or—because there is no reason except your desire to end our friendship?"

"I am not a cad, although you seem to think I am. I could trust you with anything in the world that I could in honor share with you. But I can not tell you this."

"You need not," Katherine's voice had become suspiciously gracious. "Your affairs are no concern of mine."

"The door against a clamoring mob of admirers."

"You know now why I could not come to see you." His voice was cold. He spoke hurriedly as if in haste to dispose of an unpleasant topic. "Your uncle, it was known, was using every means to secure those five votes. The Democratic candidate was also doing his best to get them. Both men are grafters and bribers. We five stood out to elect a good man. I was made chairman of our band. Every act of mine was watched by the spies of each side. Had it been known that I was going to Benton, Sherrill Vane's home, to see his niece I should have been suspected of secretly favoring his candidacy, I could not have made any one understand that he and your father are bitter enemies because your father despises his political methods. My connection with his family would have made my men suspicious of my sincerity and they might have been won by one or the other faction."

"There was more at stake than a little glory for ourselves. We were fighting to compel the assembly to elect a great man instead of a boodler. Last night the Democratic leaders agreed, since they could not elect their candidate, to share with us the honor of electing Allerton."

"Now you understand my reason. When I refused to tell you and you refused to trust me, the candidates had to refuse to support Vane, if he should be nominated, were still secret. I could not in honor tell you the plans of my associates."

"I understand, Doane, and I am sorry—I can't tell you how sorry I am—how much I regret my unkindness. If you were to ask me again to trust you—"

"I shall not. Since I have been proved honorable you are willing to trust me. I have given you the explanation I promised you. I do not ask you to love me. What sort of wife would you be? A woman who would have no confidence in her husband, who would not believe his word of honor unless it was supported by affidavits?" He opened the door to allow her to pass out. "Good morning," he said curtly.

In the rotunda she met her uncle, the defeated candidate. For the first time in her life he spoke to her.

"Doane Carter sold out for a price," he said deliberately. "His price was Allerton's daughter. He expects to marry her. She is the reason he formed an insurgent band and elected her father."

"That is not true." There was conviction in Katherine's voice. "He elected Mr. Allerton because he was a great man, an honor to the state and not a boodling politician. Doane Carter is a man whom no price can buy."

"Good for you," laughed Carter behind her. "I hurried after you," he went on when her uncle was out of hearing. "to ask you to forgive me for being such a brute and to love me if you can. I've loved you all the time, Kate, dear, but my pride had been awfully hurt by your lack of confidence in me."

"Lack of confidence? Did I not prove that my trust in you is absolute when Uncle Sherrill could not make me suspicious or jealous by saying you loved another woman? Have I not stood the perfect test? Aren't you sure now that I trust you and—and love you?"

"I was in Naples when old Vesuvius broke loose the last time," said an American tourist, "and the waiter at the table at my hotel was certainly pleased at the size of the tips I handed him daily. He could speak pretty fair English, and for three or four days he gave me all the information he could. One day, however, when I handed him the usual coin he looked at it in a way to make me see that he was dissatisfied."

"Anything wrong, Josa?" I asked.

"Hasn't the service been good?" he queried in turn.

"All that I could have hoped for."

"But I had looked for a little increase in the signor's generosity."

"Why, because the flow of lava has increased?"

"No; because I had a brother in a village six miles away."

"Well?"

"And the lava it overtakes him and his wife and five children and they go up what you call the spout, and I am put to expense to buy mourning for them."

"The point seemed to be well taken," said the tourist, "and I doubled the tip, but later on, as I found all the other waiters playing the same game, I wasted no more tears on the family that went up the spout and came down well roasted."

Newspapers from Canton, Ohio, report a romantic wedding of a poor Norwegian cook to a local millionaire.

Mr. Edward Langenbach, the cook, whose name is Rosa Jansen, won her husband through her skill in the culinary art. Mr. Langenbach engaged Miss Jansen as cook, and was so delighted with the first meal she prepared that he proposed to her on the spot. The new cook was considerably astonished, but accepted him with equal promptitude. The millionaire lost no time, but immediately took out a marriage license, and the ceremony was performed an hour after the satisfactory meal had been placed on his table.—Exchange.

ADHERED TO HER BARGAIN

Bride Had Own Opinion of Marriage as Business Transaction, but Farson Got His Fee.

The Rev. L. B. Bates, long associated with the East Boston Bethel, tells in his "Wonder Book" of an amusing marriage ceremony performed by his father. This is the account of it: About nine o'clock one night the old parsonage on Cape Cod was approached by a man and a woman in a "one horse shay." Hearing the wheels, Father Bates went to the door, to see coming up the walk a buxom lass of two hundred pounds or so, followed by a very little man.

With a giggle she announced, "We've come to be married, parson. Haven't we, I?" An energetic nudge succeeded in eliciting the desired affirmation from "Bill."

The parson exclaimed the license, and proceeded to officiate.

"Please join your right hands," he said. "Dearly beloved, you are gathered here for the purpose of holy matrimony. Do you—" but he was here interrupted by the bride:

"Say, parson, before you go any further would you mind taking your pay in dried apples?"

Being assured that dried apples were current coin with parsons, she allowed him to proceed:

"Madam, do you—" but again he was interrupted.

"Say, parson, the apples are not ripe yet, but you shall have them without fail."

He assured her that her honesty was appreciated, and proceeded with the ceremony without further interruption.

Two months later a bushel of the best dried apples was hauled by the bride herself to the parsonage door.

"I don't know as he was worth it," she said, with a twinkle in her eye, "but a bargain is a bargain for all that."—Youth's Companion.

THEIR SINGING HARD LABOR

People of Star Island, Says Celia Thaxter, Grind Out Sounds With Tremendous Exertion.

Among people of average musical ability there is less singing than there used to be. Nearly everybody enjoys singing, and there was a time when nearly everybody was expected, on occasion, to sing. But from different causes—a more exacting standard; the rivalry of the phonograph, and other reasons—amateur singers are fewer than they were. It is a matter for regret from one point of view, and from another for rejoicing.

In a recently published letter, Celia Thaxter tells how some of the Star Island folks, during her long residence at the Isles of Shoals, used to sing.

"Their singing," she declared, "was truly astonishing, indeed, I might say, excruciating. They go at it precisely as if they were sawing wood, and grind out the sounds with such exertion that their faces become crimson and the perspiration stands in beads on their foreheads."—Youth's Companion.

Counting the Cost

"I OFTEN wonder," said a local merchant recently, "why our bill for toll calls isn't larger each month, when I stop long enough to consider the use we make of the telephone, both at the store and at home. There isn't a town where I do business but seems nearer to me than even next door. I can beat many competitors by selling my goods over the telephone before they can get there by train; I can get into every town in New England all in one day, tell about my stock, quote my prices, make my deals and sit right here with my eyes on the home store all the time. Most of the people I sell to like that way of doing business."

"As for the folks at home, they keep in touch with all their friends everywhere, and my daughter there at Wellesley isn't a bit lonely, for she has mother's counsel, and it's the same way with Bob in Boston."

"Do you think I would let that telephone out of my reach? No sirree! It's not only money in my pocket in my business, but we are in the center of a big world of real live people, just because we can call up anyone, anywhere."

Teeth Were Artificial

By Peggy Powers

"Jack, dear, be sure to come home early," said young Mrs. Clark. "Why, Kate, what's up?" "Have you forgotten the Mortons and Healsy are coming for dinner?" "Believe me, I won't forget it again. I'll be in time to change my collar. Good-by! Hope your first dinner will be a howling success. Mrs. Clark was busy arranging the flowers for the table when her best friend called for a few minutes' chat. "You're the cutest little housekeeper!" exclaimed Lillian. "How happy you must be in this darling bungalow!" "I'd be supremely happy except for one thing. If I tell you, promise on your honor you'll never repeat it to a soul." "I'll be as mum as a safety deposit vault," rejoined Lillian. "What's this awful mystery?" "All my front teeth were knocked out in a frightful automobile accident when I was a school girl," began Mrs. Clark. "That's ancient history now," interrupted Lillian. "Not to Jack, however. He hasn't the least conception that mine are artificial." "He married you for better or worse and he's better off than having to pay dentist bills." "Why don't you tell him?" "Impossible! Jack was absolutely shocked when he discovered my switch and false puffs, and scandalized the first time he noticed my pink powder box. He abhors anything false. Horrors! Whenever he mentions my pearly white teeth I feel like an escaped convict." "Don't fret over imaginary troubles," said Lillian, as she left. "Cheer up, girl! Your husband won't care." The guests came, but no Jack. "Jack is famous for his forgetting," commented Mr. Morton as they sat down to a cold dinner. "Indeed, he's never been late to dinner before," protested his wife. "Either something important detained him, or he missed the suburban train." As the last course was served Jack appears with profuse apologies. "Beastly sorry to be so late! Could not reach you by phone; missed my train, had to wait an eternity for the next one." "Jack," Kate said after the guests departed. "Why weren't you home on time? That dinner was one dismal, dreadful failure." "Don't be a human interrogation point. I've explained nearly a hundred times already. Do you doubt my veracity, Kate?" "Was that pretty stenographer in the office late, too?" "How dare you make such a remark!" "So this is our first quarrel?" "Stop your weeping. If you must know, I broke my plate." "Your plate? What are you talking about?" "It's a wonder I knew after all this excitement. My teeth are false ones, and I had to wait at the dentist's until the plate was mended. Are you satisfied now?" "I am overjoyed, sweetheart," exclaimed Kate. "What do you mean?" "Only that you can't be so appalled now, when I tell you my teeth were knocked out in an auto accident and are also artificial," confessed Kate, much relieved. "Oh! I knew about yours all the time," said Jack. "I saw them in a glass one morning."

To Conserve India's Rainfall.

A great scheme was proposed at Bombay recently, by which it is proposed to utilize India's huge rainfall for the purpose of providing electric power for industrial purposes to the Bombay section of Western India. During the monsoon season, there is a rainfall on the west coast averaging 175 inches at Lanoul, and sometimes greatly exceeding this figure. Three lakes or reservoirs are to be formed. One at Lanoul will be large enough to hold sufficient water during the longest breaks in the monsoon season, and the Walwhan Lake, covering 2 1/2 square miles is to serve for the remainder of the year and will have a capacity of 2,600,000,000 cubic feet. The generating station is to be at Khopoli, 300 feet above the sea and 90 miles from Bombay.

ARE MICROBES IN YOUR SCALP?
It Has Been Proved That Microbes Cause Baldness.
Professor Unna of Hamburg, Germany, and Dr. Sabouraud, the leading French dermatologist, discovered that a microbe causes baldness. Their theory has time and again been amply verified through research experiments carried on under the observation of eminent scientists. This microbe lodges in the Sebium, which is the natural hair oil, and when permitted to flourish it destroys the hair follicles and in time the pores entirely close, and the scalp gradually takes on a shiny appearance. When this happens there is no hope of the growth of hair being revived.

We have a remedy which will, we honestly believe, remove dandruff, exterminate the microbe, promote good circulation in the scalp and around the hair roots, tighten and revitalize the hair roots, and overcome baldness, so long as there is any life left in the hair roots.

We back up this statement with our own personal guarantee that this remedy called Rexall "33" Hair Tonic will be supplied free of all cost to the user if it fails to do as we state.

It will frequently help to restore gray and faded hair to its original color, providing loss of color has been caused by disease; yet it is in no sense a dye. Rexall "33" Hair Tonic accomplishes these results by aiding in making every hair root, follicle, and pigment gland strong and active, and by stimulating a natural flow of coloring pigment throughout the hair cells.

We exact no obligations or promises—we simply ask you to give Rexall "33" Hair Tonic a thorough trial and if not satisfied tell us and we will refund the money you paid us for it. Two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain it only at our store—The Rexall Store.

Trustful Apolonia

If old Jedediah Haymaster had really bitten all the tenpenny nails in two that people invariably mentioned when called upon to describe his characteristics and abilities, he would have accumulated quite a little scrap iron heap by the time he was sixty-five. As it was, what he had accumulated was the awed dislike of his townsmen and a collection of stocks, bonds and mortgages that would sink a ship. Jed Haymaster could make money with his eyes shut and one hand tied behind him. Make that he did, with no quarter for the innocent bystander. Having all these years of practice behind him, it was easy for him to induce the letter to Mrs. Daw. Apolonia Daw had come to town a few years before as the bride of Henry Daw, who had died shortly after. His young widow had continued to reside in the pretty cottage Daw built for her, her small income sufficing for her quiet needs.

Most of this income came in the shape of dividends from her stock in the Haymaster engine works. This stock her husband had purchased cheap when old Jedediah had started this, the tenth of his big enterprises. Jedediah disliked women mixed up in his business affairs and entitled to participate in the annual meetings of stockholders—and, besides, there was soon to be a large extra dividend. Whoever held Mrs. Daw's stock at that happy time naturally would get the fat dividend upon it.

Therefore Jedediah wrote her that it had occurred to him that she might like to invest her money in government bonds or something else solid and trustworthy instead of having it in engine stock, which, while good, might be seriously affected by some unexpected disaster. He would, in the generosity of his heart, take her stock off her hands, now that the dangers of possessing it had been made clear to her, and he remained hers respectfully.

Apolonia Daw wrote back on paper faintly scented with violets. She said she certainly appreciated his deep interest in her affairs, because she had found very little genuine kindness in a business way since she had been left alone. It touched her greatly. But the fact that he was at the head of the engine works gave her such a sense of security that she had never worried a bit about her stock. The Haymaster engine works was just as solid as the Bank of England to her with his keen judgment and strong hand at the helm. So, thanking him again, she remained his most grateful ally.

Jedediah read this with his face screwed up in a tight knot. "The woman's more of fool than most of 'em!" he said as he dipped his pen in ink. "She hasn't sense enough to get scared!"

This time he wrote that her trust in him was, indeed, flattering, but that he was only a weak, human man who did not claim infallible judgment and he could not bear to have it upon his conscience if she should suffer financially through him. Of course the engine works were as solid as any, but he begged to point out to her that industrial stocks fluctuated unexpectedly sometimes. They were delicate. He considered it his duty to look out for her. So great was his concern that he would offer her $5 a share above par value.

Apolonia answered that she wished there were more men like Mr. Haymaster in this hard world. Things would take on a far different aspect then. She said there were tears in her eyes as she wrote and that she would be less than a woman if she felt the slightest quiver of doubt in the engine works under his guidance, while, if she descended to the depths of selling her stock, she would really be an object of contempt. No, she assured him, she never would be ungrateful or foolish enough to think she could better herself by getting rid of her engine stock. Again she was his most grateful ally.

Jedediah gazed at this epistle hostilely and breathed hard. "Yet she can't be as fast-fingered smart as she must be if she isn't a fool!"

So he called on Mrs. Daw that evening on the way home. She fluttered to welcome him as though he were her dearest friend and clasped his hand warmly. Jedediah, really looking at her for the first time in his life, saw how very pretty she was. "I called," he said, "about that stock. I don't seem to have made myself clear in my letters. You worry me, Mrs. Daw, with your sublime woman's ignorance." Apolonia leaned forward and looked Jedediah fairly in the eyes. "Dear Mr. Haymaster," she said, sweetly, "I wouldn't have you worry about me for the world! And you made yourself quite clear! I think it would have been brilliantly clear even if I had been as ignorant as you thought me! You see, I know all about that extra dividend that is coming. I'm going to marry your son and he told me about that dividend some time ago. But I appreciate your interest!"

Jedediah Haymaster stared. Then he suddenly held out his hand. "You win," he said, briefly, "and I guess we need you in the family. You're too smart to run around on your own account, Apolonia!"

Once a Packard Always a Packard

Why does a used Packard, rebuilt, stand in a class by itself among used cars? Because the use of replaceable bushings peculiar to Packard design in Packard cars keeps the wear from the main structure of the car and limits it to these replaceable bushings. By renewing these bushings in any Packard car, as we do in the rebuilding, the car, no matter what model, immediately regains the quiet, smooth-running flexibility which characterized it as a new Packard.

We carry a full line of the various Packard models, rebuilt and repainted. In justice to yourself, look these cars over before buying. There is no such value, dollar for dollar, on the market to-day.

At from $1,500 to $3,000 these cars offer you the best service obtainable at the prices anywhere. Write for Catalogue and particulars.

FIRE IN THREE RIVERS.

Three Families Have Narrow Escape Monday Morning.

DWELLING BURNED TO THE GROUND.

Sleeper Woke To Find Bureau In Room A Mass of Flames. Firemen Save Other Buildings.

Another fire was added to Three Rivers' long list Monday morning at 2.30, when the block on Main street owned by John O'Connor and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Domey, Mr. and Mrs. M. Frederick and family and Mrs. Margaret Connor was burned to the ground.

The fire was discovered by Thomas Connor in the chamber where he was sleeping. He was awakened by smoke and found the bureau a mass of flames. The fire spread rapidly and by the time the family had been aroused and donned scanty clothing, nothing was possible but to leave the building. It was a two-story house and the building and the contents are a total loss.

Fortunately there was no wind, so the conflagration did not spread. The Palmer firemen have been given the credit however for saving the other buildings. Only for the auto truck the other buildings near would probably have been burned. The surrounding property escaped without any damage.

The cause of the fire is not known but it is believed to have been started by mice. There were matches in one of the bureau drawers, it is said, and mice must have ignited them. The loss is estimated at $2500 on the building and at least $1000 more on contents. It was covered by insurance.

Fight Disturbed Court.

Youngsters Settling Difficulties Close By Interrupt Proceedings.

Two of the boy pupils of the Palmer grammar school will be careful the next time they start to settle their difficulties with a fight to go beyond the hearing of the district court if that tribunal is in session.

They gave little thought to that phase of the situation last Friday, being intent on adjusting their differences according to the customs of youngsters from time immemorial to take that into consideration. The court was close by however, was in session, and was greatly disturbed; hence an officer was sent to investigate. The principals were summoned to appear in court Saturday morning, when they were given a reprimand and allowed to go. The habit of fighting within hearing distance of the court room, which has been more or less prevalent of late, will now cease—for a time at least.

The trouble started in the grammar school yard earlier in the day. Knowing that fighting was not allowed there the disputers met by agreement near the trolley express freight house on South Main street after school in the afternoon. A crowd of about 50 sympathizers, with most excellent lungs, attended. The cheers with which the participants were urged on so disturbed the officers of the district court, who were holding an inquest on the death of a child, that they were obliged to send officers to quell the rumpus.

WILBRAHAM.

Death of Mrs. Jane M. Hunn.

Mrs. Jane M. Hunn, 74, widow of Charles A. Hunn, died at the home of her brother, Chauncey E. Peck, Saturday morning after a three-months' illness, as the result of a fall on the ice in January while on her way to church. Mrs. Hunn was born in East Longmeadow July 14, 1837, and was the daughter of Alpheus D. and Mariva (Kibbe) Peck. She was married to Charles A. Hunn of East Longmeadow about 1858, and lived in that place and Hampden the greater part of her life, and in Monson about 10 years. For the past six years she had made her home in Wilbraham with her brother. Mrs. Hunn was a member of the Baptist church in East Longmeadow. She leaves one son, Herbert C. Hunn of San Jose, Cal., and two daughters, Mrs. Frank L. Bliss of Monson and Mrs. James A. Butler of North Wilbraham, one brother, Chauncey E. Peck of Wilbraham, and one sister, Mrs. Alonzo Noble of Hampden. The funeral was held at the home of Mr. Peck Tuesday afternoon, Rev. M. S. Howard officiating. Burial was in the Baptist cemetery in East Longmeadow.

The Palmer society for District Nursing will hold its annual meeting next Friday evening. Reports will be read, officers elected and the policy of the society for next year determined.

Killed On Railroad Track.

Man Struck By Express Train At West Warren Last Friday.

Joseph Lapine, 60, reported to be of Woonsocket, R. I., was struck and instantly killed by the western express train, No. 13, on bridge No. 87 just west of the No. 4 mill of the Warren Cotton mills at West Warren last Friday. The body was thrown into the Quaboag river on the north side of the bridge and landed upon a rock about 100 feet below the bridge and 25 feet from the shore. The express was stopped, but as nothing could be done but notify the officials, it went on, leaving a brakeman to look after the body. A. D. Tessier and his gang of section hands, who were on their way home on their hand car, stopped and improvised a raft from the new railroad ties which were beside the track and went out and secured the body.

The body was then removed to the West Warren freight depot and was identified. Medical Examiner E. W. Norwood viewed the body and gave as his opinion that death was instantaneous from a fractured skull and many other injuries. Undertaker John F. O'Leary took the body in charge and removed it to his undertaking rooms.

Mr. Lapine had been in West Warren about six months or more about two years ago and was employed by the Atlas fiber company in their leather-board factory. It is thought he was walking the tracks, and at that time there are express trains going both ways, and as No. 13 came around the sharp curve he became confused and was not able to get out of the way in time to avoid being struck by the pilot of the engine.

ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE.

Man Stepped Before Electric Car In Broad Daylight.

FOILED BY MOTORMAN'S QUICK STOP.

Car Crew Have Hard Work to Drag Man From Track at North Monson Monday.

An unknown man, apparently tired of the struggle with an unsympathetic world, made an evident attempt at suicide on the track of the street railway company at North Monson Monday afternoon. But for quick action on the part of the motorman of the car his desires would have been gratified.

The car was the one leaving Palmer at 12.15, due in Monson at 12.40 and North Monson at 12.30. It was in charge of Conductor Frappier and Motorman Trainor. As the car rounded the curve south of Mason's Crossing Motorman Trainor saw a man come from the side of the track, throw himself upon the rails and crouch down as if waiting for the car to hit him. By quick work the car was stopped and the crew went up to the man. They had to use considerable force to remove him for the rails, but succeeded in doing so, after which they proceeded. About two hours later the fellow boarded a car near the point where he made the attempt to end his life, but there was nothing unusual in his actions at this time. The officials of the town of Monson were notified, but the man's identity was not learned.

Three Rivers Rebuilding.

Business Places, Recently Destroyed By Fire, Being Replaced.

Three Rivers is rapidly rebuilding the business section of the village which was recently destroyed by fire. The buildings which are filling up the vacant places are very attractive and all will be soon ready for occupancy. This shows the prosperity of the village.

The Hartnett block which is being built on the site of the Quaboag Hotel and the Hartnett residence, is rapidly nearing completion. On the ground floor there will be four business places and two tenements on the second floor, one of which is to be occupied by D. J. Hartnett and family.

Mrs. Dunn's building is almost ready for the clapping. It will have a store on the ground floor and tenement above.

The Cercle Canadian will soon start rebuilding their hall. It will be an improvement on the former building which was erected very shortly before the recent conflagration. On the ground floor there are to be two stores and the society's hall will be on the second floor. This hall will be suitable for entertainment purposes as well as for the lodge use. There will be a balcony and it will be the most attractive hall Three Rivers has ever had.

These buildings are being erected in the certainty that they will soon have adequate fire protection, even if they have to install the hydrants themselves. This week's fire has made them more determined. The matter will be brought before the people at the town meeting the 22d.

Liquor Licenses Delayed.

Second Publication Will Postpone Day of Granting until 30th.

An error in the publication of the applications for liquor licenses last week has necessitated their republication this week, and they will be found elsewhere. The error consisted in signing them with the name of H. R. Paine as chairman of the board of license commissioners. It should have been H. R. Paine, clerk of the board, or John W. Fay chairman, and was made under conditions which make it possible to say with equal truth either that no one was responsible for it or that all concerned in the publication were responsible.

The notices in to-day's paper are the only ones which will be considered in making the grants. There is a question whether the form used last week would invalidate a grant, but the commissioners prefer to take no chances. The effect will be to delay the granting of the licenses until April 30, the day before they may be legally exercised.

HAMPDEN.

Charles S. Ballard and family of Springfield and Frank Bardwell and family of New York were in Hampden Saturday on a fishing trip.

IS 102 YEARS OF AGE.

Brimfield Woman Achieved That Age Last Saturday.

IN GOOD HEALTH UNTIL YEAR AGO.

Mrs. Laura Griggs Moore, Oldest Resident in County. Vigorous Until Last Fall.

Mrs. Laura Griggs Moore, who lives with her daughter, Mrs. Sanford Booth of Dunhamtown, Brimfield, celebrated her 102d birthday Saturday. Mrs. Moore had enjoyed the best of health until about a year ago. She suffered a shock last June, but was not completely prostrated until last November, when she was prostrated with a cold, from the effects of which she is still confined to her bed. Mrs. Moore's vitality and industry have been remarkable since she passed her century until she sustained the shock. The last handiwork which she could engage in was the braiding of rugs. On her 100th birthday she was able to receive visitors throughout the day.

Mrs. Moore was born in Union, Ct., and was the daughter of Elisha and Sarah (Booth) Griggs. Her father was the eldest of the 14 children of Joseph Griggs, who moved from the Rockmeadow district in Union to Brimfield in 1800. Elisha remained in Union, while others of the family went with their father to Brimfield and had homes and reared families in that town. The daughter, Laura, was married to Dexter Moore of Union, July 4, 1839. Her husband met with a tragic death, November 5, 1844, when he was killed by falling on to the circular saw in his saw-mill. Mrs. Moore has three children living. They are Mrs. Ellen A. Booth, with whom she makes her home; Malone G. Moore of Stafford Springs and Emerson O. Moore of Sidney, N. Y. There are seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. Mrs. Moore has been a member of the Congregational church in Union, Ct., for 80 years, having joined that church in 1832 and never having transferred her relationship to another church.

The residence of T. P. Strong, F. W. Farrar and Mrs. Elvira J. Coney of Church street were broken into some time Saturday night. Nothing of great value was taken from any of the houses. Mr. Strong's loss was 10 cents, Mrs. Coney's $2 and Mr. Farrar lost nothing.

At a meeting of the board of health Monday it was decided to inaugurate a movement toward cleaning up the town, and the board will send out copies of its regulations in regard to keeping premises clear of rubbish and refuse. It was voted that in all cases the requirements must be complied with by May 15th.

Will Rebuild Power Plant.

Central Massachusetts Electric Company to Make Many Changes.

The entire power plant of the Central Massachusetts Electric company on the Quaboag river at Blanchardville is to be rebuilt as a part of the plan of improvement adopted by the new company. According to Manager Parsons the reconstruction will include the removal of all the present equipment except the dam, and the installation of new machinery throughout. The flume will be rebuilt and three new water wheels installed which will be directly connected with three new generators. This will eliminate all loss of energy resulting from shafting, belting, etc., and make the efficiency of the machinery as near 100 per cent as possible.

Mr. Parsons also states that the work of improving the distribution system is well under way, and that it should be completed in a short time. A large electric sign is to be placed in front of the new office on Main street. It will be about 17 feet high, double faced, and will read "Use electric light and power." Besides being appropriate for the business the sign will have a material value to the town by increasing the light in the street at that point.

The new management has reason to feel much gratified with the business returns since it took charge. The town of Wilbraham has already ordered nine new street lights, and over 200 new customers are said to have signed contracts to use electricity since the change in management occurred. Mr. Parsons believes that this number will be materially increased by the new idea he has introduced in offering Tungsten lamps at a phenomenally low figure.

BELCHERTOWN.

Miss Adele Rawson has taken a position as teacher in the schools at Marlboro, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Ward, who have made their home in Belchertown for some time, have made arrangements to sell their place and will move from town.

The old homestead and barn, known as the "Dormant mill site," was destroyed by fire about 4.30 Tuesday morning. The place is owned and occupied by Mr. Jensen, who bought the property about three years ago from E. H. Dyer. The cause of the fire is unknown.

WARREN.

Severe Thunder Showers.

The town was visited by two thunder showers Tuesday. The first one, at 2 o'clock, was not very severe, but the second, about 5.45, was accompanied by severe lightning, which struck the tower of the Bradford yarn mill. The lightning shattered the north and south posts on the top story of the tower and threw a lot of splintered boards to the ground. Then it entered the building, and passed through the spinning-room on the second floor, dissipating itself apparently on the steam pipes. No fire was set in any part of the building. An electric car on the Warren, Brookfield and Spencer street railway was in front of the mill at the time and the passengers had quite a scare, but no one was injured. Another peculiar freak of the lightning was that it followed the gas main of the Worcester county gas company, which crosses the Quaboag river at that point, and ignited a slight leak at one of the joints.

The Tuesday club met this week with Mrs. W. E. Lincoln on Bacon street.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Robinson of Peabody have been the guests of her mother, Mrs. Charlotte E. Demond of Bacon street.

At a meeting of the selectmen Monday Robert A. Brown was appointed election inspector of precinct B, in place of William Campbell, who has left town.

The selectmen have appointed the following fire engineers for the ensuing year: Charles E. Comins, Herbert P. Johnson, Eugene W. Root, Joseph D. Vigneaux and Jerry M. Sheehan.

At the meeting of the delegates from the Palmer district of the Foresters of America Sunday in Webster, William F. Duncan of Warren was indorsed for a re-election for the fourth year as grand treasurer.

Mrs. Teresa Graham, 75, died at the home of her nephew, James Culliton, on Moore avenue Tuesday morning, after a short illness. She leaves one brother, James Graham of Wales. The funeral was held yesterday morning in St. Paul's church.

An alarm was rung in Monday morning about 6 o'clock for a fire in the house on Hillside avenue occupied by William A. Steele. The blaze started in an upstairs bedroom from an unknown cause, and when discovered the bed was ablaze. The fire was extinguished by the firemen with hand extinguishers. The loss will be about $100, covered by insurance.

WAS WIFE KIDNAPPED?

Mother of Mrs. George Moses Claims That She Was.

BUT INDICATIONS POINT OTHERWISE.

Mother-in-law Pounded With Club, And Wife Taken Away With Husband In Team.

Was Mrs. Ethel Colburn Moses kidnapped by her husband Monday evening? Mrs. Colburn's mother says that she was, after the husband had pounded with a club both his wife and her mother. Certain it is that she has disappeared, as has also her husband, and although officers have been looking for him no trace of the whereabouts of the couple has been found.

Mrs. Colburn's story is that about 9 o'clock Monday evening she and her daughter were walking on the state highway not far from their home, which is near the Cooley crossing about three miles east of Palmer on the Warren road; when they reached the underpass of the Boston and Albany railroad near the electric plant, Moses, the younger woman's husband, drove up in a wagon and jumping out attacked Mrs. Colburn with a club; he also used the club freely on his wife, after which he dragged her into the wagon and drove off. Mrs. Colburn exhibited the club in court Tuesday, when she made complaint to Clerk Fitch. It is a limb of a tree, about 6 feet in length and about two inches in thickness. She also exhibited a black eye and other bruises, said to have been inflicted by Moses.

An automobile broke down near the Colburn home about midnight Monday, and while repairs were being made the driver says that a small man skulked the road in the glare of the headlight, but could give no closer description of him. Moses is a small man about 5 feet 2 inches tall, and weighing about 140 pounds. An effort is being made to identify the man who was seen by the autoist.

George Moses and Ethel Colburn were married in Palmer March 18. The match was not all to the liking of Mrs. Colburn, who had little use for Moses. He is a Syrian, Armenian or other foreign parentage, and about 35 years old, while Ethel is 18. He had been paying attention to the girl for some two years, much to the annoyance of the girl's mother. Moses is a peevish and lived in the vicinity of the Colburns and had been driven from the house more than once. After the marriage it is said that the couple went to the home of the bride to announce the news. The bride's mother had even less use for Moses as a son-in-law than as a neighbor, and refused him admittance to the house; she also refused her daughter egress, keeping her at home for a few days. The couple finally went to board with Miss Margaret O'Neil, in the near vicinity, and a little later went to the home of Mrs. Sophia Brooks on Maple street in Palmer. There they had a difficulty of a minor character a short time ago, with the result that his wife left him and returned to her mother. He met the two on the street last week and attempted to induce the wife to return to him, but she refused and he was arrested on charge of assault at the time of their difference. He was in court last Friday and pleaded not guilty, the case being continued until Tuesday of this week; he failed to put in appearance however at that time. In court Mrs. Moses stated that she did not wish to live with her husband as he had threatened her life; Mrs. Colburn also said he had threatened her. A complaint for assault on Mrs. Colburn has been entered against Moses, and if found he will be called to account for his conduct.

While Mrs. Moses has said she did not wish to live with her husband, there is reason to believe that she has changed her mind since. The indications are that she had an engagement to meet him this week, and that the alleged assault upon her was in the nature of a bluff, calculated to hoodwink Mrs. Colburn. It is known that the couple traveled together that night and the next day, and when last heard of had progressed a considerable distance into another commonwealth.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Rev. Thomas E. Williams has received a call from the First Congregational church of Newark Valley. The church is one of the largest of the denomination in Southern New York. It is stated that he will accept and he will probably begin his duties by the middle of next month.

OLD FASHIONED FAMILY PEW

In That Rested the Strength of the Church, and It Should Be Restored.

One sometimes hears a deal of nonsense about the danger of creating a prejudice against religion in the mind of a child by making him attend church once a week. The danger would seem to be about one-tenth as great as that of arousing a prejudice against education by sending him to school twice a day. In both cases the remedy lies in the good sense of the parents and their estimate of the value of religion and education carefully instilled into the child's mind.

The strength of the church has been in the old-fashioned pew, with father at one end and mother at the other, and a stairway of more or less restless children. From that pew have gone out the upright, devout, consecrated men and women who have loved the church and maintained her worship and done her work in their several generations. For the sake of the church, and especially for the sake of the children, let it be restored.

If it be impossible for the children to attend both Sunday school and the church service, this writer would by all means teach them the catechism at home and bring them to church that they may learn to worship God in the congregation of his people.—South-ern Churchman.

GARDEN ON VALUABLE LAND

Small Patch in Heart of City of London Is One of Capital's Curiosities.

There are many curious things about the Bank of England, but among them how many know that it possesses a respectable garden? It is to be found just inside the Threadneedle street entrance, on the left-hand side.

This old-fashioned garden has a fountain in the center, graveled paths and a couple of trees, the whole forming a quadrangle with the bank building running all round.

Its history is a curious one. In reality this garden is the churchyard of the vanished Church of St. Christopher-le-Stock, which used to stand where the Mansion House now is.

One reason why the church was pulled down was because its tower completely overlooked the bank, and it was feared that it would be a danger to the "Old Lady" if the church was occupied by rioters.

As the bank occupies the site of the entire parish of St. Christopher-le-Stock, it is said that any freeman of the city can claim admission to the old garden. But, as a matter of fact, any one who cares to see it may do so during business hours, and it is well worth a visit, if only for the fact that it is the most valuable garden in the world.

Dodging the Question.

"Young man," said the Maine merchant, "what are your habits as to intoxicating beverages?" "Excuse me," replied the applicant for employment, "but under the circumstances mightn't we just as well avoid talking politics?"—Washington Star.

HAD A NAUTICAL CHRISTENING

Sea Captain Knew Only One Form of Ceremony and Did His Duty as He Saw It.

Some years ago a slow sailing vessel, when some 600 miles out from Liverpool, picked up a lusty youngster of five years lashed to a mast.

The captain took a great liking to him, called him his son and decided that the little chap must be christened—one of the few things which he knew must be attended to in the case of children.

Of course there was no chaplain aboard, so the captain himself undertook the ceremony. He gathered the men about him, and with a mixed knowledge of his duties he glared about him and asked whether any one knew just cause why the boy should not be christened.

"If there is," he roared, "speak up like a man or forever hold your tongue."

Then he suddenly cracked a bottle of wine above the boy's head and christened him.

The ocean waltz is now settled down—a steady longshoreman, but he still relates with satisfaction the story of his christening.

Why YOU Should Use Tungsten Lamps

If your Light costs too much, it's because you don't use Sunbeam Wire type Tungsten Lamps.

They cut a dollar lighting bill down to 40 cents because they use only 2-5 as much current as ordinary incandescent lamps, and that's not the whole story either. Compare this Light with ANY other and you will see a wonderful difference. It's more agreeable to the eye, easier for reading and working, shows colors up better. It's more like natural daylight than any other Light you ever used. "It's the Sun's only Rival."

What It Means

The kidneys are overtaken:
Have too much to do.
They tell about it in many aches and pains—
Backache, weariness, headache.
Early symptoms of kidney ills.
Urinary troubles, Bright's disease follow.

A Palmer citizen tells here a reliable remedy for kidney ills:
G. Wood, State Ave., Palmer, Mass., says: "About five years ago I was suddenly attacked by a dull pain across the small of my back and I had too frequent desire to pass the kidney secretions. My life was one of misery and the physicians told me that I could not live more than a year. Finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, obtained at Lynde & Gould's drug store, and they restored me to good health. At that time I publicly endorsed this remedy and I am now glad to confirm my former statement."

Opening of the Season of SUMMER FURNITURE

This week marks the opening of the season of Summer Furniture. The warm days will soon be here and then to move out on the piazza or the lawn and bask in the delicious warmth of the sun.

Summer Furniture has come to be a business in itself and this year we have made big plans for this trade and we now have on our floors the largest, most varied and most attractive display of Outdoor Furniture we have ever made—artistic, comfortable and practical furniture for the piazza, the lawn or the summer home, and at wonderfully attractive low prices.

Old Favorites in New Patterns and Distinct Novelties

Our present stock includes the same splendid makes that we have carried for years with such unflinching satisfaction—the very best summer furniture made in America, and in addition we have this season many pleasing novelties—furniture distinctive in character and at very moderate prices.

Bombay Furniture From Bombay

We introduced this new imported furniture last summer, but after the first announcement we didn't say much about it for it was all too quickly sold and then we could get no more of it, for it can be bought only by placing your order a year ahead.

This is the furniture which has been so popular for years with the British army officers in India. It is made of a native grass with strong willow frames that give the chair great strength and elasticity, making the most comfortable chair imaginable—it "just fits all over."

These Bombay Chairs are made in many pleasing designs, quite unlike any American furniture—graceful and artistic—and best of all, this furniture, though brought all the way from India, is very inexpensive.

With many families there is nothing quite like the old Hickory, and really for rugged artistic worth it has no equal. Old Hickory is the toughest of furniture and in the new styles there is none of the roughness that was once an objection to this popular furniture.

BURDETTE An Old Favorite

We have sold this splendid furniture for years and still it has no rival in strong, light, well-made and attractive piazza furniture at a very low price.

YOUNG WIFE SAVED FROM HOSPITAL

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to house-keeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back ached, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health. "If sick and ailing women would only know enough to take your medicine, they would get relief."—Mrs. BENJ. H. STANSBERRY, Route 6, Box 18, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

If you have mysterious pains, irregularity, backache, extreme nervousness, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait too long, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound now. For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy and should give every one confidence.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M.
Soyer, Famous London Chef.

TWO DINNER MENUS.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.
Here is a dinner menu, easy but nourishing, not so costly, and capable of being prepared, cooked, and served inside two hours:

Roast Beef, Stuffed Rolled Round
Sliced Potatoes Baked Apples
Cold Slaw
Banana Puffs

Black Coffee Salted Peanuts Have the round cut rather long and as thick as need be. Butter it on both sides, salt and pepper lightly, cover the upper side with bread crumb stuffing seasoned with onion, roll up, tie and seal in well-greased bag with a lump of butter or clarified dripping and a spoonful of water. Put in a hot oven for three minutes, slack heat, and cook until done, allowing fifteen to twenty minutes to the pound. If tomatoes are at hand, put one or two, peeled and sliced, in with the meat. The gravy will be better and the meat itself more piquant.
Slice peeled potatoes thin, drop in cold water, drain out, put in a greased bag after sprinkling very lightly with salt, add a little extra grease, seal and cook fifteen to thirty minutes in a fairly hot oven, the time depending on the quantity in the bag.

Wash the apples well, but do not peel, cut out specks and bruises, core, fill the bottom of the core-space with a lump of butter, over which pile sugar, and add a bit of cinnamon. A clove stuck in the side may take the place of the cinnamon. Seal inside a well-greased bag, and bake eighteen to twenty minutes in a fairly hot oven.

Make cold slaw in the usual way, and the salted peanuts as follows, after blanching and drying them: Put in a thickly-buttered bag, set in a very hot oven for half minute, then reduce the heat three-quarters, and leave nuts to brown for ten minutes longer. They will come out crisp and beautiful, needing only a sprinkling of salt.

To make the banana puffs, roll out good puff paste a quarter-inch thick and cut it in squares six inches across.
Cover half of each square diagonally with bananas sliced thin and soaked for half an hour in sugar and lemon bag and bake twelve minutes in a hot oven. Bananas, always cheap, and among the most nourishing of the fruits, ought to be more used in cookery.

Here is another good meal for a winter day:

Pork Tenderloin, Roasted with Sweet Potatoes

Cabbage Pudding Stewed Carrots
Celery

Apple Dumplings, Cider Sauce
Coffee Cheese Crackers

Have the tenderloins split lengthwise and cut them in halves. Wipe with a clean, damp cloth, rub over with butter or dripping, season lightly with salt and pepper, and lay in a well-greased bag along with raw sweet potatoes, peeled and halved, or quartered if very large. Add a lump of fat, butter or dripping, rolled in a little flour, also a tablespoonful of water. Seal bag and cook in a hot oven thirty-five minutes to an hour, according to the quantity of food in the bag. Slack that after five minutes.
Slow, steady cooking makes the meat tender, yet full of flavor.

Choose a tender cabbage for the pudding. Shred it fine, then drop in boiling salted water and cook uncovered at full boil, ten minutes. Drain out, run cold water through it, then mix it thoroughly through a pint of milk which has been beaten with two eggs, and season with salt and pepper. If the cabbage is small, use one egg and half a pint of milk. Have the bag very thickly greased and sprinkle it inside with grated cheese.
Put in the mixture by big spoonfuls, add a lump of butter and sprinkle in more cheese between the spoonfuls.
Seal very tight, lay on a trivet, put in a hot oven for three minutes, then slack heat, and cook for at least an hour.

Scrape carrots as usual, cut them in pieces and put into a buttered bag with half a gill of stock, a dot of butter and salt and pepper to taste.
Cook thirty-five to forty-five minutes
at a moderate heat.

Apple dumplings are apple dump-plings in or out of bags. Their goodness depends on three things—the paste, the maker and the cooking.
The apple is hardly more than a vehicle to hold sweets and spices and accent the tang of them.

Make real puff paste for your dump-plings, roll it a quarter-inch thick, fit it neatly around the apples, which should be liberally treated with sugar and butter, not to name lemon peel and cinnamon, put in a thickly-butered bag with a small lump of butter and a spoonful of sugar, and cook for twenty to twenty-five minutes in a fairly hot oven.

For cider sauce, cream half a cup of butter, frothy light, beat into it a heaping cup of sugar, then set over hot water and add gradually a cup of fresh sweet elder, hot but not boiling. Beat hard together, grate nutmeg over, and serve very hot.

The cheese crackers are lightly buttered, sprinkled with parmesan, and heated inside a bag for about five minutes.

TAME GULLS OF SHETLAND

Each Family in Lerwick Has Its Own Flock Which the Children Feed.

There are many small villages in the world that have only one street;
but Lerwick, in Shetland, besides having only a single street possesses only one tree, and it is not a very tall one either. There are no land birds there, not even a sparrow; but the sea gulls are plentiful.

The inhabitants of Shetland are very proud of their tree and very kind to the gulls, of whom the children make pets. Children who are brought for the first time to see the wonders of one-streeted Lerwick are always shown, as a great curiosity, "the only tree in Shetland."

The sea gulls are the sparrows of Lerwick; and as such they have a greater share in the town's life than the sparrows of London. In the morning you will note that a sea gull sits on every chimney pot. Sea gulls swoop and hover over every roof in town. The air is full of their strange, high, plaintive, haunting cries.

Every house has its own familiar sea gulls and every street its own band of them. But, according to the Fruit Magazine, they never mix. The children in each house have a pet name for their own particular sea gulls; and, having called them by those names, they feed them every day.

Each sea gull knows what is meant for him. No bird attached to one house ever seeks to eat the food scattered from the house next door. He does not dare to do so. So all day long the sea gulls hover and call over the roofs of Lerwick.

The people of the town if they come across a little pile of rice laid upon the roadway step over it with care. They know that it has been placed there for some sea gull. And at night the sea gulls leave their appointed chimney-pots and fly gracefully away to their resting places on the rocks of the isle of Noss.

BEING BRISK A GOOD HABIT

Children Should Be Taught Quickness in Running Errands and in Dressing Themselves.

If a child is allowed to acquire a slow, dawdling manner when told to do any particular duty it will be found very difficult to effect a cure, and this means a serious hindrance to success in after years.

Teach them while very young to do everything promptly and to finish what they have commenced. If they are sent on a message make them go directly to the shop and not loiter on the way. Children may be seen at any time carrying a message and lingering to look at everything on the way.

I often wonder at what time the poor mother gets her messages home, when I see a child loitering about instead of walking briskly. Quickness in dress, also, should be insisted upon. If too young to dress themselves they should be taught to keep still while the mother or sister puts on their clothing.

At a later age forbid any running about the house until fully dressed—and quickly dressed. Some little maidens are rather fond of looking in the glass while dressing and this is a habit which should be at once repressed. It not only encourages vanity but it causes the child to waste much valuable time.

Moroccan Corruption.

Two main evils in Morocco are the corruption of Moorish officials and the degradation of Moorish women. The Moorish officials are inadequately paid and are liable at any moment to be stripped and cast into prison at the caprice of their overlords. The natural result is that they make hay while the sun shines, and by their "pickings" provide against the evil days which are almost certain to be in store for them. Says a writer: "Before they take office they may be honest and kindly men, but the knowledge that they may at any moment fall victims to a higher power quickly corrupts them, and they proceed to do as they are likely to be done by. Each official preys on the one below him, but while each, for a short time at least, enjoys power and prosperity, the poor peasant is squeezed unceasingly."

PALMER NEWS.

Death of Horatio B. Knox.

Former Palmer Teacher Passed Away in Providence on Sunday.

There was gloom in many hearts in Palmer Monday morning when it became known that H. B. Knox, a former principal of the Palmer high school, had died at his home in Providence early Sunday morning. Mr. Knox was taken home from the normal school, where he was teaching, on the afternoon of the 4th suffering from a severe chill which quickly developed into pneumonia. His condition was considered serious almost from the first, but he responded to treatment and by the middle of last week one lung had wholly cleared and the other partially so. His system was so weakened however, that he had not the strength to rally, and the end came about 5.30 Sunday morning.

Mr. Knox came to Palmer in 1887 as principal of the high school. After about nine years he went to Providence as instructor of Latin and Greek in the Friends' school, where he remained 11 years, then going to the state normal school in 1904, where he has since remained, filling the position of instructor in history.

Mr. Knox was one of those rare men of whom it can be truthfully said, "None knew him but to love him. None named him but to praise."

It is doubtful if he had an enemy in the world. Warm-hearted, genial of disposition, he had a warm grasp of the hand, a direct look into the eye and a friendly greeting which could not fail to impress those with whom he came in contact. But it was as a teacher that Mr. Knox is best remembered by the younger generation. Coming to Palmer when the high school was hardly more than that in name, he did much to place it in the forefront of educational institutions of its class. He possessed a rare faculty for enthusing those under his instruction, and changing an indifferent student into one possessed with a desire and ambition to learn. He also had to a wonderful degree the faculty of so imprinting his instruction that it seemed never to be forgotten. One of his former pupils in the Palmer high school, who was later under numerous other instructors in various places and now occupies a responsible position in the professional world said of him: "I consider him the greatest teacher I ever knew, without exception. He had a peculiar way of making his pupils understand things, and boy or girl who went to school to Mr. Knox never forgot what he taught them. The things I learned of him were the ones they couldn't fool me on when I went to college." Through his inspiration, encouragement and assistance, both pedagogical and financial, numerous Palmer boys and girls are to-day holding high positions which they never would have attained but for him.

The funeral was held from his late home Tuesday afternoon, and the body was taken Wednesday for burial to Farmington, N. H., where his early life was spent and where his father and a brother still live. His immediate family consisted of a wife, and a daughter Gertrude and son Philip.

Auto Collides With Team.

Come Together Near Overlook Farm Late Wednesday Night.

There was a collision between an auto and a wagon near the Overlook farm west of the village late Wednesday night, but fortunately without serious results, although the possibilities were great. An autoist from Boston named Casey struck squarely head on a horse and Concord buggy driven by a Mr. Cooney, who was driving from Holyoke leading three horses. The auto struck the driven horse square, but the animal miraculously escaped with a few scratches. The buggy was not so fortunate however, and was reduced to kindling wood. The led horses were not hurt. The only damage to the auto was a broken lamp and wind shield. The wagon was being driven without a light of any kind.

There will be a meeting of the Relief corps this evening.

Special Town Meeting

Next Monday Evening. Vital Matters to Be Considered.

The special town meeting, the special province of which will be to consider the expediency of spending $50,000 this year for permanent highways in the town, will be held in the town house next Monday evening at 7.30, when the committee appointed at the annual town meeting will make its report.

The committee will not, as has been supposed by some, make any recommendation. It was appointed to ascertain certain facts regarding the financial end of the proposition, and also whether or not the desired amount of highway could be built for the sum suggested. This they have done and their report will be along the line of information without recommendation. An examination of the sections over which it is hoped the permanent roads will be built has been made, and consultations with the state board of highway commissioners has convinced the committee that all the special pieces of highway asked for in the warrant for the annual meeting, as well as strips connecting the villages of the town, with some other strips which it will be wise perhaps to build now if the town is going into the permanent highway business, can be constructed for the amount named, and will provide all the permanent highway which the town can reasonably be asked to construct in the next 25 years. The state highway commission recommends oil gravel road as the best for the needs of this town. With more information along this line the committee will leave the matter with the voters.

There have been numerous inquiries concerning article 23 of the warrant, "To see what action the town will take relative to abolishing the Palmer fire district." The selectmen have said that it was brought to them with the names of the necessary ten petitioners, and they had no choice but to insert it in the warrant. That is as far as it will get, and there need be no worry over any possible action in the matter. The fire district was created by the Legislature on petition of voters in the district, and can be abolished only by the Legislature of its own volition or in response to a request of fire district voters alone; the town has nothing to do in the matter.

Pool Tournament Banquet.

About 70 Enjoy Event Last Evening at Nassawanno House.

The banquet given the winners by the losers in the pool tournament completed recently by the Palmer Business and Social club, was held last evening at the Nassawanno House. About 70 attended. The dining room was prettily decorated for the occasion, and the winners were designated by red carnations in their coats, while the losers had to be content with white. After the party had been seated a flashlight photo was taken of the group by Woodhead of Palmer. Landlord O'Connor served the following menu:

Oysters on Half Shell.
Cream of Tomato Soup, aux Croutons.
Broiled Chicken Halibut, Hollandaise Sauce.
Saratoga Chips.
Roast Vermont Turkey, Cranberry Sauce.
Mashed Potatoes, Hubbard Squash.
Mashed Turnip, Stewed Cucumbers.
Cold Ham and Tongue.
Egg Salad, En Mayonnaise.
Neapolitan Ice Cream, Assorted Cake.
Cheese, Toasted Crackers.
Tea, Coffee, Milk.

The menu was printed on heavy card, illustrated with special drawings illustrating various events during the tournament, and were much prized as souvenirs. An orchestra of three pieces played during the banquet. After the last course Louis J. Brainerd, president of the club, acted as toastmaster and there were remarks by several of the members. The event was considered one of the pleasantest and most satisfactory social events of the season.

In the district court Monday morning J. C. Churchill was given 60 days in the house of correction for drunkenness. This was his second offense within a week, the first case having been continued.

Siddell—Wells.

The marriage of Edward S. Wells of Palmer and Miss Ruth B. Siddell of Springfield took place Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. C. C. P. Miller of Everett officiating, assisted by Rev. Mr. Palmer of Palmer. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion. There were 10 ribbon girls, who formed an aisle with white ribbons through which the wedding party passed to meet the groom and his best man, Harold K. Taylor of Palmer. The bridal party was led by two ushers, George Summers and George Fitch of Palmer, and they were followed by little Elizabeth Cratsley, who acted as ring bearer. The two bridesmaids were Miss Faith Wells, sister of the groom, and Miss Edith McCoy. The maid of honor was the bride's niece, Miss Luvia S. Meara of Hartford. Immediately preceding the bride and her father, who gave her in marriage, was the flower girl, Miss Elizabeth Meara, the three-years-old niece of the bride. The bride's gown was of white mesaline and shadow lace, and she wore a veil. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. The wedding music was played by Miss Mabel L. Stow of the Springfield conservatory of music. After the ceremony a reception was held, and the bride and groom were assisted in receiving by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Siddell and the groom's mother, Mrs. M. S. Wells. The couple received a fine array of valuable gifts. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Wells will make their home in Palmer.

K. of C. Assembly.

The assembly held by Palmer Council, Knights of Columbus, Tuesday evening in Memorial Hall, was one of the pleasantest social events of the season. There was a large attendance of Knights and invited guests. The entertainment included an address of welcome by Grand Knight Richard F. Donovan, reading by Miss Katharine Carroll of Ware, vocal solo by J. J. Donahue, short address by J. C. Sullivan and selections by Wilder's orchestra. A dance program of twelve numbers was carried out and refreshments were served.

The Palmer Carpet mill closed last night for the remainder of the week.

Subscriptions for the support of the street watering are being solicited this week.

Frederic W. Porter, after having been given two opportunities to get out of town, was gathered in about 1.30 Wednesday morning on a charge of vagrancy, and in the district court yesterday was sent up for 30 days.

The street railway company has had erected recently along the Brimfield line several shelters for passengers who may have to wait for the arrival of cars. These are at points where people are accustomed to board the cars, and are much appreciated.

On the eighth page will be found an announcement of the Aronson clothing and shoe company of Springfield. This company has been a dealer in shoes for some time, but has added clothing recently. They offer some unusual bargains, and offer to pay car fare if callers will only ask for it.

A large number of the members of Quabog council, Royal Arcanum, are planning to attend the banquet in Springfield next Tuesday night tendered to Grand Regent Hobson by the councils of the Connecticut valley. It is expected that a special electric car will leave Palmer at 6.45. Attendance is not limited to members of the order, and tickets may be secured of C. H. Babcock of Quabog council, at $1 each. The banquet will be held in Clinton Hall on North Main street at 8 o'clock.

The annual meeting of the Palmer Woman's club was held this afternoon. Reports were read and the following

"AND MY WIFE, ROSIE," TOO

Bridegroom Who Had Forgotten to Register His New Better Half Quickly Makes Amends.

In splat and span raiment, carrying each a new suit case and a timid expression, they entered the Hotel Narragansett and inquired the way unhesitatingly to the desk, says the Providence Journal.

Spying a kernel of rice on the youth's hat brim, the clerk smiled covertly, whisked the register with an encouraging flourish and placed the inked pen in the nerveless hand.

"John B., New Bedford, Mass," wrote the youth, pushed back his hat, upset the kernel of rice and wiped his beaded brow.

"But, er—the lady?" inquired the clerk soothingly.

"She's my wife," quoth the youth, straightening up, bristling.

"She ought to be registered," advised the clerk thoughtfully.

"Ain't you put me down?" the lady murmured, looking over the youth's shoulder.

"O, sure, I—I forgot. Gimme the pen," said the youth, quickly.

Whereupon he smiled and wrote: "And my wife, Rosie."

White Heron in New Jersey. Local naturalists and bird lovers are interested in a number of white heron which are making their headquarters at Avis' Pond, Woodstown, N. J., about a mile from town. The birds were first noticed about a week ago. These are the birds from which egrettes are obtained. Extinction of the species is feared because the egrettes can be obtained only when the bird is raising its young, and its death at the hands of the hunter also means starvation of the young heron.

IS IN CRITICAL CONDITION.

W. B. Whittemore Falls From Team and Injures Spine.

W. B. Whittemore of North Main street is in a very critical condition as a result of being thrown from his carriage at about 7.30 o'clock Wednesday morning. Mr. Whittemore was driving from this town to Palmer and was just passing the residence of Dr. G. H. Ingraham, when he decided to put his overcoat on. Appropriation for State Highway.

After several years of promises from the Massachusetts highway commissioners, the town has received the first installment towards the construction of a strip of permanent road on the Palmer road. Superintendent of Highways S. M. Stebbins of this town returned from Boston Wednesday, where he had been in conference with the state highway commission and after explaining the facts and the necessity of a permanent road between these places and also that the town at the annual town meeting voted to spend the sum of $1000 for a strip of permanent road, the commissioners were sufficiently impressed with this argument to grant $1000 to be used for this purpose. This will be a decided benefit to the town and much credit is due Mr. Stebbins for his active part in obtaining this aid from the state. It is thought that it will now be a matter of but a very few years before all of the strip of road from North Monson to Palmer will be a macadam road.

The Ladies' Aid society served a baked bean and salad supper in the vestry of the M. E. church Tuesday evening. Owing to the shower at the supper time a smaller number was present than usual. It is thought the proceeds will be nearly $15.

Mrs. P. J. Sullivan has been notified by her attorney that the suit pending against her for well damages by Mrs. Timothy Lyons of Springfield, formerly of this village, has been dropped, the plaintiff having no case. This is pleasing news to Mrs. Sullivan's many friends.

Rev. George Sutherland, who has had charge of the Methodist church in Saugus for the past year, was at the conference of churches in Springfield recently, transferred to the church in Bondsville. It is expected he will take charge of the services next Sunday.

Rev. W. H. Upham, who has had charge of the Methodist church for the past two years, will this year go to Upton to have charge of the Methodist church there the coming year. Mr. and Mrs. Upham will go to their new home the last of the week and Mr. Upham will preach in his new church the coming Sunday.

The friends of the Ladies' Aid Society will be glad to know that the society of Bondsville ranked second in amount of money raised during the past year in the churches of the Springfield district according to a report read at the conference in Springfield last week by District Superintendent J. P. Kennedy. The amount raised was $554.

Arabia's Laughing Plant.

The laughing plant is not a flower that laughs, but one that creates laughter, if the printed accounts of travelers can be believed, says an English paper. It grows in Arabia and is called the laughing plant because the seeds produce effects like those caused by laughing gas. The flowers are of a bright yellow, and the seed pods are soft and woolly, while the seeds resemble small black beans. Only two or three grow in a pod. The natives dry and pulverize them, and the powder, taken in small doses, makes the soberest person behave like a circus clown or a madman, for he will dance, sing and laugh most boisterously and cut the most fantastic capers and be in an uproariously ridiculous condition for about an hour. When the excitement ceases the exhausted exhibitor of these antics falls asleep, and when he awakens he has not the slightest remembrance of his frisky doings.

"Old Bet."

Hackathia Bailey of Somers, about 1815, imported the first elephant brought into the United States. "Old Bet," with other animals soon after imported, formed the first traveling menagerie in the country, with which Van Amburgh, the lion tamer, was afterward associated. Thaddeus and Gerard Crane, Lewis Titus, and John June, familiar to the public as enterprising showmen, were from Somers and North Salem.—Westchester County Magazine.

FOR AGED PEOPLE.

Old Folks Should Be Careful In Their Selection of Regulative Medicine.

We have a safe, dependable, and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirements of aged people and persons of weak constitutions who suffer from constipation or other bowel disorders. We are so certain that it will relieve these complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer it with our personal guarantee that it shall cost the user nothing if it fails to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called REXALL ORDERIES.

Rexall Ordeuries are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity. Three sizes, 10c., 25c., and 50c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. James P. Lynde, 385 Main St., Palmer.

ELECTRIC POWER FROM WIND

Economical Lighting Plants Can Be Based on It, With Gasoline Motors to Help.

There has never been a time when the forces of nature were subjected to such searching scrutiny to determine their availability for the development of mechanical power as they receive at present. This arises mainly from the progressive use of electricity.

Among other things it is believed that the wind can be utilized to a far greater extent than in the past, especially for electrical lighting. With this object in view the average state of the wind has been investigated in England. It is found that for approximately half the time the mean wind velocity is ten miles an hour, and for about one-third of the time fifteen miles. In the winter the average is higher. The great difficulty arises from the calm periods, which may last days, or even a week, but it has been shown that economical lighting plants can be based upon wind power by providing gasoline motors to take up the work whenever the wind fails.

The historic Iron Crown of Italy has played a romantic role in the history of the peninsula. It was made in the year 594 by the command, it is said, of Theodolinda, the widow of a Lombard king, on the occasion of her marriage to a duke of Turin.

The crown is of iron overlaid with gilt. Its significance was supposed to lay in the fact that the weight of royalty could never be lightened by its splendid exterior. The iron of the inner portion was traditionally held to be one of the long nails used at the crucifixion.

For a long time the crown was in the keeping of the famous monastery at Monza. In 774 it was brought forth to be placed upon the head of Charlemagne as "King of the Lombards," and on later occasions it figured in the triumphs of Frederic IV and Charles V. Finally in the presence of all the representatives of state, the foreign envoys and princes and officers, Napoleon Bonaparte solemnly united it to the crown of France.

The crown belongs to the state, and the custodian of it is the legitimate representative of the basilica of Monza. The title of "grand custodian," however, pertains to the head of the order of Cavaliers.—Harper's Weekly.

TAFT IN PALMER.

Made Short Speech From Train Yesterday Afternoon.

BIG CROWD GATHERED TO SEE HIM.

Dislikes Quarrel With Old Friend, But Must Deny Unjust Accusations Of T. R.

The announcement that President Taft would make a stop of five minutes in Palmer yesterday afternoon on his way to Boston drew a large crowd to the railroad station shortly after 2 o'clock. The presidential special came in at 2.28, and was stopped so that the rear end of the last car was about midway of the open space west of the covered platform. It was only a moment before the President appeared, in response to an introduction which stated simply that his time was short and all of the time belonged to him. The crowd understood, and after three cheers gave strict attention.

After remarking that he was usually glad to come to Massachusetts at any time, and particularly this section because his mother had attended school at Monson Academy, Mr. Taft expressed regret at having to come on the errand which he had, because it compelled him to defend himself from the accusations of an old friend, one who had done much for him, and had materially helped to place him in the presidential chair. If he alone were concerned he would keep quiet, he represented a cause, and he could not allow that cause to be assailed without defending it. He was consequently in Massachusetts to deny every one of the antagonistic statements of Theodore Roosevelt. Regarding the one in which Mr. Roosevelt claims that Taft is using the public patronage to assist his cause, the president pointed out that the patronage was divided, 70 per cent of the present office holders under discussion having been appointed by Mr. Roosevelt; "and he knows it," was the way the matter was left. Reference was made to certain other misstatements, and the speaker expressed regret and surprise that T. R. is not proving a good loser, in spite of his usual fairness. "It is easier to make charges of unfairness than to produce proof." "I am a man of peace," the president announced, "but there are times when a man is driven into a corner and ought to fight and must fight."

The crowd at the station was an immense one. The school committee had been asked to dismiss the pupils of the grammar schools, but had declined on the ground that the railroad grounds were hardly a safe place for them, and their judgment proved to be excellent. The crowd is estimated at between 3000 and 4000, and it is probable that the latter figure is nearer correct. In addition to the inhabitants of the village of Palmer very many of whom were on the grounds, the surrounding towns and villages furnished large delegations. Car after car came in from Monson, the villages, Ware and other places loaded to the limit. At the station there was a solid mass of people from the top of the hill near South Main street all the way to the subway at Bridge street, the platform being filled to overflowing. All were goodnatured, quiet, and not inclined to crowd, and no accidents were reported.

Armed With Two Big Knives.

Man Roamed Thorndike Village Sunday Night. One Man Hurt.

Adam Velk of Thorndike appeared in the district court Monday morning charged with an assault on Jan Beach. He pleaded guilty, but alleged that he was so drunk at the time he had no knowledge of what happened. Beach claimed that as he was on his way home late at night Velk jumped from behind a tree and struck him in the temple with a knife. When the officer found him he was bleeding profusely. Two other witnesses claimed to have seen Velk at different times earlier in the evening with two big knives, which he appeared to be trying to sharpen on stone posts and railings, and with which he promised to relieve people of their troubles. One witness said he had escaped by a quick jump backward. Six months in the house of correction.

12 MONTHS FOR MOSES.

Long Sentence For Assault On His Mother-in-Law.

WOMAN SHOWS BAD HURTS IN COURT

Assault Wholly Unprovoked, According To Woman and Her Daughter, Moses' Wife.

George Moses, who was wanted for an assault on his mother-in-law, Mrs. Jane Colburn, on the evening of the 15th, but had fled into Connecticut, was arrested Sunday and was given a hearing in the district court Monday. He was found guilty and sentenced to a year in the house of correction, but appealed. Bail was fixed in the sum of $1000, which he could not furnish, so went up.

The evidence showed that as Mrs. Colburn and her daughter were on their way home about 9.30 at night Moses sprang out from the side of the road and struck Mrs. Colburn a severe blow on the left side of the head near the eye with a club; the eye was decidedly black in court Monday. Just previous to the blow Mrs. Colburn testified that he said, "I'll murder you," and followed the first blow with two more, the first leaving an ugly bruise on the upper arm which showed two inches wide by nearly six long, and the other leaving other bruises. She screamed and ran, when Moses seized her daughter by the arm, taking her away with him. Returning with a neighbor soon after, Mrs. Colburn picked up in the road a club about five feet long and fully two inches thick, with which the assault was committed. The daughter's testimony was practically the same with the exception that she did not hear Moses' threat. There was other testimony to show that Moses had seen Mrs. Colburn and her daughter leave home earlier in the evening, and seemed to indicate that he had waited for them to return.

Moses testified that he met the couple, asked his wife to come with him, and received a blow in the face from Mrs. Colburn as an answer. This angered him and he picked up something—he couldn't tell what because of his excited condition—in the road and struck the woman with it. He claimed to remember little of what he did.

Judge Dillon, who was on the bench, held that it was plainly evident that Moses had committed a most vicious assault, and gave him the limit. Sylvester A. Callahan of Springfield appeared for Moses. The trouble grew out of the dislike of Mrs. Colburn for her son-in-law. He is 35 and his wife is 18, and the marriage took place March 18 without Mrs. Colburn's knowledge or consent, she having forbidden Moses to the house and on one occasion at least having driven him out. Mrs. Moses now says that she has no desire to live with her husband.

BELCHERTOWN.

Annual Parish Meeting.

The annual parish meeting of the Congregational church was held one evening recently. Superintendent Lewis was chosen moderator and Lewis Blackmer clerk. The reports of the different officers were accepted and the church was found to be in a good financial condition. D. F. Shumway, D. K. Shumway and H. H. Ward were chosen a committee on music. The prudential committee are A. H. Bartlett, Martin Bardwell and M. G. Ward. The sum of $700 was appropriated for music, and the prudential committee was empowered to insure the organ in the church.

Austin—Bidwell.

Miss Louise Austin, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Austin, and Edwin Bidwell were married at the home of the bride Saturday evening, Rev. E. P. Kelley of the Congregational church officiating. Only the immediate family and near relatives were present. The bride has taught school in Connecticut since her graduation from the local high school, but for the past year had been in charge of the central telephone office. Mr. and Mrs. Bidwell will probably live in Springfield.

Death of Former Resident.

Nelson R. Towne died in New York Saturday morning of acute pneumonia. Mr. Towne was born in Belchertown 83 years ago, the son of Israel and Hannah Stacy Towne. There were eight children, only one of whom, E. F. Towne of Belchertown, survives. Mr. Towne was twice married, his second wife dying about six years ago. He leaves one son, Frank N. Towne of New York. The body was brought to Belchertown for burial.

$50,000 FOR HIGHWAYS.

Town of Palmer May Spend This Much This Year.

COMMITTEE TO OVERSEE THE WORK.

Plan to Connect All Villages, And To Macadamize Principal Streets In Each.

The town of Palmer, as a result of the special town meeting Monday evening, will build approximately eight and a half miles of macadam road within its borders, spending about $50,000 for the same. The committee appointed to have entire charge of the matter from now until the completion of the work is the same as was appointed at the annual town meeting to investigate the question of permanent roads,—Charles L. Waid, treasurer of the Palmer Savings Bank, Charles A. Tabor, agent of the Thorndike Company at Thorndike, Roscius C. Newell, agent of the Palmer Mill at Three Rivers, Samuel Stewart, agent of the Boston Duck Company at Bondsville, and Charles A. LeGro of Palmer, retired,—and the selection is considered most eminently satisfactory.

The meeting was attended by nearly 200 voters, a much larger number being present from the Depot Village than is usually to be found. Thomas J. Moran was elected moderator. The committee appointed at the annual town meeting to investigate the matter of better roads reported in favor of connecting the villages of the town with trunk lines, and of macadamizing the principal streets in all of the villages. The material recommended is oil gravel. The report of the committee was accepted and a motion was made that the town proceed to follow out the recommendations made therein. The opportunity for debate brought not a single voter to his feet, and the standing vote showed 159 in favor and none against the proposition. The sum of $50,000 was appropriated for the work. Bonds will be issued for this amount, to be known as Palmer highway bonds, to bear interest at 4 per cent payable semi-annually. They will be retired $5000 each year, and will be issued July 1.

All but a chosen few expected, when C. S. Ruggles of Three Rivers asked to have the article relative to fire protection for that village taken up and moved that $5000 be appropriated, that they were in for a long and heated debate. They knew that Three Rivers had asked the town for fire protection, and they knew just as certainly that it would not be given without a struggle, in view of the fact that other sections were furnishing their own. Mr. Ruggles read a long petition describing the limits of a proposed fire district and asking for protection; then announced that he wished a negative vote on the motion, as the inhabitants of the described tract wished to form a fire district and could not under the laws of the state until refused aid by the town. He got his wish without a dissenting vote.

The sum of $300 for curbing on Main street in Three Rivers was refused on the ground that the town has accepted the provisions of a statute which permits the assessing of half such costs on the abutters, and that the way to get the benefit was to petition the selectmen under that statute. The committee on the disposal of surface water on South Main street in the Depot village reported that the water course is a natural one, and the town's only responsibility is to keep it clear where it crosses highways. The disagreeable features reported in connection were referred to the board of health and the other matter was left with the new highway committee.

The voters agreed to ratify a note of the town's for $21,000 held by the Palmer Savings Bank, given to pay for the Three Rivers bridge a little more than a year ago. The reason for the action is not generally understood. When the bridge was built no provision was made for paying for it and the selectmen made a temporary loan. Such loans can run only one year, according to state laws, and the matter was overlooked in the spring town meeting. As the town has no intention of repudiating the debt it was necessary to ratify the loan. Now unless some other provision is made it must be paid from the taxes of this year. "This is not desirable and it is proposed to bond the town for it; and permission must be had from the Legislature; as no one was prepared to make the requisite motion at Monday night's meeting, the meeting was adjourned to yesterday afternoon in order to prepare the necessary documents.

Held For Child Murder.

Ludwika Dymon, Three Rivers Woman, Bound Over to Grand Jury.

The case of Ludwika Dymon of Three Rivers, charged with the murder of her infant child, was heard in the district court last Saturday morning. Little that was new was brought out in the hearing. A man where the woman boarded told of seeing her digging in the garden, and on finding the body of the child when he investigated later. The woman admitted that the child was hers; she first claimed that it had been born dead, but later admitted that it was alive. She claimed however that she left the place where it was born, and when she returned it was dead. Medical Examiner Schneider and Mrs. Hodgkins and Miller testified that an autopsy developed the fact that the child was born alive, that it was well nourished, and had apparently come to its death by strangulation. Probable cause of guilt was found and the woman was bound over to the grand jury.

Wilbraham Academy Tuition Fees.

A meeting of the finance committee of Wilbraham academy was held in Springfield Saturday afternoon, when it was decided to fix the tuition on a sliding scale from $400 to $600 a year. The location of rooms in the new Rich hall is to be the determining factor of the tuition of any student, the more desirable suites to cost more.

It was announced that $21,000 of the proposed total of $50,000 to be raised for the school has already been pledged. Before the work on the dormitory and general living quarters of the building, Rich hall, is begun, the school must raise $40,000, and it is expected that this amount will be pledged in a short time.

DYNAMITE ON BABY.

Had Stuff in Pockets When Found Last Saturday.

BUT BABY WAS VAGRANT, NOT CHILD.

Had Three Sticks of Stuff When Gathered In, And Had Given Some Away Previously.

Night Officer Timothy J. Crimmins picked up a baby near the Main street bridge over the railroad tracks about 3.45 last Saturday morning. And as is customary with babies, he handled this one rather gingerly. This was not at all due to the tender years and infantile qualities of his find, for baby had reached the voting age some years ago and acquired a hundred and a half avoirdupois. It was reported that baby was loaded, and there was no knowing when he might go off and take the officer with him, and the latter is no featherweight at that. The report proved to be correct, for in baby's pockets were found three sticks of dynamite.

Officer Crimmins received word of the fellow a short time before from the car barn, where he had been and presented one of the men with two more sticks of the explosive. He gave the name of Andrew Baby and claimed to have secured the dynamite several years ago, and also to have worked in Stafford. But little could be learned of him there. He did not give a good account of himself in court Monday, and was sent to the house of correction for 60 days on a charge of vagrancy, which he did not think he deserved, as he came to Palmer looking for work. The dynamite was given to Whitcomb & Faulkner to care for, and on being taken to their storehouse it was found the latter had been broken into, but whether that found on Baby was a part of their stock could not be determined.

Death of Thomas Carroll.

The body of Thomas Carroll, who died in New York Wednesday of last week, was brought to Palmer Saturday for burial. Mr. Carroll was well known in town, having visited here frequently. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. Belle Kauffman of New York, and one son, Andrew Carroll of Palmer. The funeral was held Saturday morning in St. Anne's church, Three Rivers at 8 o'clock, with a mass of requiem, Rev. L. O. Geoffrey officiating. Burial was in the family lot in St. Anne's cemetery.

Carlton Kimball has sold two pair of horses to John Lyons and moved his family to Enfield, where he expects to make a business of poultry raising. Mr. Lyons will remain here and draw lumber and ties to the railroad.

HAMPDEN.

The closing reception of A. J. Giacomia's dancing class was held in the town hall last week Thursday evening. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Giacomia gave a series of fancy dances and Miss Mildred Giacomia and Miss Lauretta Paige danced the Highland fling.

At a meeting of the Hampden baseball club it was decided to have Walter S. Beebe as manager of the team and W. J. Sessions was chosen umpire. Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Warren, Mrs. F. J. Kenworthy, John B. Isham and Miss Seraph Bliss attended the spring meeting of Congregational churches and ministers held in Southwick Wednesday as delegates from the Congregational church.

The annual Congregational parish meeting was held last week Thursday. M. S. Beebe was chosen moderator and John B. Isham clerk pro tem. These officers were elected: Parish committee, H. H. Thresher, John B. Isham and Edward N. Hitchcock; loan trustees, Herbert H. Thresher, Charles Burleigh and John B. Isham; treasurer, W. H. Pease; collector, Alexander Larson; assistant collector, M. H. Warren; auditor, Samuel D. Beebe. Edward N. Hitchcock was chosen to see about repairing the horse sheds. The collections during the past year were somewhat in excess of previous years, and the amount of the funds from which the interest is at present available for support of preaching is $5545.

ODD WAYS OF THE COMMONS

Illustrated by the Imminent Peril of Mr. Pearce, Who Read News-paper During Session.

A member of the British parliament remarks in London Opinion that the rules of the house of commons are past all understanding, and then proceeds to cite the case of Mr. Pearce, M. P., and the imminent danger in which he one day appeared to be. This was when the sergeant-at-arms, with his terrible sword in hand, rose from his chair and rushed with cyclonic speed in the direction of the mild, meek and altogether unconscious-offense member. It was quickly made clear what was the cause of this hasty saber charge by the sergeant. Mr. Pearce had actually been reading a newspaper, and there is no more heinous offense known to parliament. The members when in the chamber are not permitted to read newspapers for any purpose not immediately connected with the debate actually in progress, though one may succeed in doing it surreptitiously by folding the newspaper small and concealing it behind the order paper of the day, much like a boy may nibble at an apple in school, concealing the pippin behind his spelling book. Yet more gross breaches of parliamentary etiquette and decorum may be seen, members even wearing their hats when a fellow member is addressing the house, and even the dearest friends of an orator may go to sleep while he is delivering his choicest periods.

Life of the Grape vine.

There are some who contend that the life of the grapevine is longer than that of the oak. It is rare that a wild grapevine is to be found that has died of old age. Pliny mentions a vine 600 years old. There is a vine at Hampton Court, England, planted in 1769, while here in America there is a wild grapevine on the shores of Mobile Bay, within a mile of Daphne, Ala. commonly known as the "General Jackson" vine, more than 6 feet in circumference at its base. There is a grapevine in Carpinteria, Cal., under which more than eight hundred persons may stand. Its trunk is eight feet in diameter at the base and it has borne as high as ten tons of fruit. It is said that this vine was planted in 1842.

Parasols for Fowls.

The burning question of the day in the minds of all thoughtful poultry keepers, says C. N. Perkins in the Poultry Review (U. S. A.), is how to provide shade for the fowls during the hot weather.—Farm Life.

There are various things to do, suggests London Punch. A parasol for every fowl is sometimes tried. Another way is to teach them "In the Shadows."

TO RELIEVE THE HICCOUGHS

Sucking Ice or Taking Salt and Vinegar Often Will Cure Simple Cases.

Simple cases of hiccough are often relieved by such measures as sucking ice or taking salt and vinegar. Pulling the tongue forward and holding it for some time is an effective procedure.

Sometimes obstinate hiccough is relieved when the patient is strong by having him hang with the arms extended and grasping some beam or pole, so that his feet do not touch the floor. With all the abdominal muscles tense, have him hold his breath as long as possible.

The spelling "hiccough" is recent, being a combination of the syllables "hic" and the latter term of "cough," which is without either physiological or etymological basis; the pronunciation, with perhaps the rarest exception, is still that of the older form "hiccup," earlier given variously—as "hickup," "hickupsticup," "hickop," "hickcock," "hickcock," and "hickett," with quasi-diminishing suffixes ack, etc.; but the "hick," a syllable aptly expressive of the spasmodic sound produced by the conditions giving rise to the particular disturbance, is found in all references to the origin of the term which the writer has been able to obtain. The term singultus is rarely used.—New York Medical Journal.

Nails in Hard Wood.

It will be found almost impossible to drive thin steel nails into hard wood, for the moment you hit them hard enough to puncture the wood they bend over on themselves.

Many people employ the use of a small gimlet to bore the hole destined to hold the nail, and few people know that if yellow soap is rubbed on the nail it can be driven in the hardest wood with ease.

This trick was learned by a carpenter, who discovered it accidentally.

Now whenever he is working with hard wood he keeps a cake of soap near by and sticks it full of nails, using them as he needs them.

He also has a deep hole cut in the handle of his favorite hammer and keeps it filled with soap in which to stick the nails if the cake of soap is not conveniently near.

Sign of Prosperity.

CANNIBALS WHO CHEW GUM

Traveler Finds the Seris Kindly and Affectionate and Quite Without Deadly Weapons.

Though it seems rather a pity to shatter romantic illusions and myths in a world from which romance (of that kind, anyway) is fading rapidly, yet it must be said that there are only two old, useless rifles in the hands of the tribe, and at the time of our visit only two bows and a couple of quivers full of arrows, not one of which was headed. And now they haven't those, for we bought them for souvenirs.

Among themselves, at any rate, however they may have behaved to strangers in the past, the Seris were as kindly and even affectionate a lot of people as I have ever had the good fortune to encounter. Never did we see a mother or father slap a child. Never was anger displayed or irritation. They were continually sharing with each other the little gifts we made them. Really, you know, when you see a group of alleged cannibals sharing chewing-gum (the first they had ever tasted) from mouth to mouth and enjoying themselves hugely, respect for travelers' tales of blood and thunder goes down a peg or two.—Michael Williams in Outing.

Circuitous Retribution.

"Did you help elect that man because of his personal popularity?" "No," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "I had my suspicions of him for a long time and wanted to shove him along to where the muckrakers could get a good go at him."

WORK THAT TELLS

Plenty of It Has Been Done Right Here in Palmer

Cures that last are cures that tell. To thoroughly know the virtues of a medicine you must investigate the cures and see if they prove permanent. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test, and plenty of proof exists right here in Palmer. People who testified years ago to relief from backache, kidney and urinary disorders, now declare that relief was permanent and the cure perfect. How can any Palmer sufferer longer doubt the evidence?

Mrs. Osborn, 38 Converse St., Palmer, Mass., says: "I still recommend Doan's Kidney Pills highly and confirm all I said in their praise when I publicly recommended them in 1908. My head and back ached and it was plain to be seen that my kidneys were disordered. I always felt tired and I knew that something must be done. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I obtained a supply at Lynde & Gould's drug store. They soon gave me relief, and after taking them I enjoyed good health."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—DOAN'S—and take no other.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M.
Soyer, Famous London Chef.

FOR THE SCHOOL BOX FROM HOME.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

Are you numbered among the many mothers of this great nation who have boys and girls away at school or college? Then you know what a great delight it gives the children to receive from "Mother" a box of home-cooked things to eat, from solid meats, like turkey and chicken, to the frothiest of sweets.

Right here, good mother, you will find the paper bag a very present help. A plump chicken, a small fine turkey, bag-roasted and well drained and popped inside another bag, lightly greased, packs well, can be eaten without a qualm, and makes a mighty fine cornerstone for the upbuilding of a proper box.

The box from home is the cornerstone of the season's supreme school or college "spread." Wherefore, make it one to honor alike your child and your housewifery. Besides the turkey or the chicken, or the brace of ducks, or the nest of smaller birds safe in their own gravy, put in cakes, pies, tarts, tartlets, sundry small and piquant meat turnovers, indeed, the very choicest things amongst all those heretofore set forth as suitable for paper bag cooking. Make, too, in quantity pickled biscuit—they will be good much longer than the average college boy or girl can keep them.

Here are a few candy suggestions worth consideration even by a "woman" freshman—or sophomore.

Fondant, which is the basis of many candies, is variously made; this is as good a way as any I have found: To each cup of sugar allow a drop of acetic acid and one-third cup of cold water. Cook in a very clean brass or enamel kettle, stirring constantly until it begins to boil. Wipe off any dry sugar from the sides of the kettle, add the acid, cover the kettle and cook without further stirring at gentle heat until the syrup, dropped in cold water, forms a soft ball. Pour out then in a flat dish, wet with very cold water. When cool, not cold, work with a paddle back and forth until white and creamy, then put in something deep, cover with a clean damp cloth, and set away to ripen.
This formula is adapted from observation in a famous candy factory, where huge tubs of fondant stood month after month until the trained sense of the heads said it was just right for use. When ready to use, cut out a good lump, put in an earthen vessel and liquefy over boiling water.
Then flavor and color to taste, and either dip into it blanched nuts, dates, figs or crystallized fruit or small rounds of hard fondant. After the first dipping, set them upon a wire rack over a bowl to drain and harden.
Dip a second time if you want the candies very superior. If there is not time for this, roll while still soft in powdered sugar and set on waxed paper to dry and harden.

Fondant thus liquid, colored pink,
green or yellow, flavored with mint and dropped from a spoon-tip upon waxed paper, makes delectable mint cream. Any other flavor can be used instead of mint. With orange or lemon flavor, after dropping the creams, sprinkle while still soft with finely ground nuts, or stick a tiny bit of cocoanut in the center. Coccoanut cut to shape and cream nuts, shelled whole, make fine candies if they are first covered with stiff fondant and then dipped in the melted stuff, which has been made rich with chocolate.
Here, as elsewhere, put in a very little brandy with the chocolate, as a means of accenting its flavor.

Fruit squares are good. To make them, take equal quantities of seeded raisins, well chopped dates cut small, figs steamed and cut up fine, shredded citron, shredded candied peel, shredded fresh cocoanut and shredded blanched almonds. Stir all well together and spread without packing evenly over a well buttered flat dish.
Pour upon the mixture boiling hot a taffy made by boiling until it crackles in the teeth, two cups sugar, with one-half cup vinegar and water mixed and one tablespoonful of butter. Let stand till the surface hardens slightly, then with a well-greased knife mark in squares. Break apart when cold and wrap in waxed paper. Pack the wrapped squares inside a paper bag.

Lastly, be sure that almost the biggest cake bagged for the box is a Lady McMillan, which to my mind quite discounts Lady Baltimore. Take for it three and a half cups sifted flour, two cups sifted sugar, one cup blackberry jam, one cup sweet milk, two-thirds cup creamed butter, two whole eggs or yolks of twelve, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon mixed cloves and allspice. Cream butter with part of sugar, add yolks beaten light with rest of sugar, sift flour with baking powder and add alternately with milk and stiff beaten whites. Add spices mixed in half cordial, then jam. Bake in layers put together with icing filled with seeded raisins and chopped English walnuts. Use plain icing on top and sides. Or bake in a large sheet inside a bag, cut square and put together as directed. The essential thing is to fill a big bag with it, so that the spread it graces shall be a huge success.

Japanese Fruit Trees.

Among the many ways of their own that the Japanese have for doing is their system of pruning and training fruit trees. The system is called "tana," and consists in training the branches overhead on trellis work made of bamboo or wire supported on wooden posts about five and a half feet high.

This offers advantage in gathering the fruit, and not only serves to protect the trees against wind and storms, but is said to increase production. Only very light pruning is done, and that usually in the wintertime. This system is generally adopted for pears and vines, as often for apples and plums.—You n's Companion.

BALD HEADS NOT WANTED.

Baldness is Too Generally Considered a Sign of Advanced Age.

A bald-headed person does not have an equal chance with one blessed with a healthy head of hair, because baldness is too generally accepted as an indication of age. Many large corporations have established an age limit, and refuse to take men over 35 years of age as new employees.

Probably 65% of bald-headed people may regain a good head of healthy hair if they will follow our advice and accept our offer. We have a remedy that we positively guarantee to grow hair on any head, unless the roots of the hair are entirely dead, their follicles closed, and the scalp has become glazed and shiny. We want people to try this remedy at our risk, with the distinct understanding that unless it does exactly what we claim it will, and gives satisfaction in every respect, we shall make no charge for the remedy used during the trial.

We know exactly what we are talking about, and with this offer back of our statements no one should scoff, doubt our word, or hesitate to put our remedy to an actual test.

We want every one who is suffering from any scalp or hair trouble, dandruff, falling hair, or baldness to try our Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We want them to use it regularly—say until three bottles have been used—and if it does not eradicate dandruff, cleanse and refresh the scalp, tighten the hair in its roots, and grow new hair, we will return every cent paid us for the remedy for the mere asking. There is no formality expected, and we exact no obligation from the user whatever.

We make this offer with a full understanding that our business success entirely depends upon the sort of treatment we accord our customers, and we would not dare make the above offer unless we were positively certain that we could substantiate it in every particular. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store.

'EIGHTS' ARE THEIR HOODOOS

Postal Clerks Say Stamps of That Denomination Cause Them Much Financial Loss.

When a meek little man stepped up to the stamp window in a branch office and asked for an eight cent stamp he caused as much consternation as if he had demanded "your money or your life."

All the clerks came to the window to take a look at him. They muttered to one another and made strange and fantastic signs, crossed their fingers, knocked on wood and did various other things that are supposed to drive away evil spirits.

"We're just out of eight cent stamps," a clerk finally stammered
"Got lots of two and ones."

"Well, gimme a five and a three,"
said the meek little man, upon receiving which he paid for them and departed.

"What's the matter with the eights?" queried an inquisitive spectator.

The stamp clerk was still too nervous to answer, but one of the others said, with a smile:

"Eights are hoodoos. None of the small offices handle them if they can help it. It's this way: They are just a wee shade different in color from the ones and it is no infrequent thing for a stamp clerk in a hurry to hand out a lot of eights when ones are asked and paid for. It always costs him seven cents a stamp when he does it. The clerk here the other day, during the rush hour, when the offices are closing, was called upon for a dollar's worth of ones. He handed out a hundred eights instead. Cost him seven dollars. Then he got rid of all the rest of the eights and now he won't have anything to do with eights. Even says 'eaten' instead of 'ate.'"

Bright Kindergartner.

In a kindergarten in Omaha "America" was being sung and the director was repeating the words to her small pupils. When she came to "Land where our fathers died," one small child with a puzzled expression on her face spoke up: "But my father ain't dead yet."

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood

by destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting

Prize Speaking Contest.

High School Entertains Large Audience Wednesday Evening.

The prize speaking contest of the high school in the opera house Wednesday evening drew an audience which filled every seat in the house. The contestants were all from the sophomore class, and had been in training for several weeks for the event. Twenty members were originally selected and pieces assigned them by the faculty; after rehearsals the school committee selected ten—five boys and five girls—for the final contest. The work done Wednesday evening showed a high degree of capability on the part of the high school along this line, and careful and painstaking work on the part of those who had the coaching of the contestants. The audience showed its interest in matters pertaining to the school by giving the closest attention to every selection, there being an unusual lack of noise of any kind during the rendition of the pieces.

The judges, William C. Hill, principal of the Springfield classical high school, Principal Henry F. Dewing of Monson Academy, and Nathan R. Smith, principal of the Ware high school, awarded the prizes as follows: Girls—first to Frances H. Chandler of Palmer, "The Swan-song," by Brooks; second to Ruth Buffington of Palmer, "The day of judgment," by Phelps; boys—first to William Collins of Bondsville, "Toussaint L'Overture," by Phillips; second to Joseph Winer of Three Rivers, "Philip Nolan," by Hale. The prizes were $5 and $2.50 gold pieces.

A pleasing feature of the evening's program was the singing by the high school chorus under the direction of Miss Cantwell, musical instructor in the schools. The chorus numbered about 50 and was seated at the back of the stage. Several selections were rendered in a most pleasing manner. Another feature was a German song, "Still wie die Nacht," by Miss Doris Paine.

School Committee Meeting.

Supt. Hobson Re-elected. Plans For the Grammar School Graduation.

At a meeting of the school committee Tuesday evening Clifton H. Hobson was re-elected superintendent of schools for the coming year at an increase of salary.

The position of science teacher in the high school was permanently filled by the election of Clarence W. Lombard of South Portland, Me., a graduate of Bates college 1911.

It was voted to make a change this year in the graduation of the grammar schools. It will be a joint affair, as usual in recent years, but it will be held in the opera house. Another change will be that the program will be given by the pupils of the several graduating classes, being made up of recitations and other exercises, with music by the school chorus. Four pupils from each school will take part.

Plans are being made for an exhibition, May 16 and 17, of sloyd work, sewing and drawing, penmanship, and other work done in the schools. This will be in the several school buildings, and will be open to the public.

More Junk Licenses Wanted.

Claims That Only One Has Created a Trust; Want It Busted.

A petition asking the selectmen to depart from the custom of recent years, of granting a junk collecting license to one person only at a considerable sum, and to grant licenses to four persons, the total sum to be the same as previously, has been in circulation this week and has been generously signed. The petition states that the method now in vogue has been creative of a trust which has kept the price of junk at a low level, and that with competition higher rates would be paid. This is not a new complaint, but has been heard before. Just what basis there is for the statement it might be hard to determine, but the belief exists nevertheless. The recent holder of the privilege, who has had it two years, is naturally anxious to retain it, and is understood to be willing to pay as much as anyone for it.

Tuesday Club's Annual.

Luncheon Served and Officers For Next Year Elected.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Tuesday club was held at the home of Mrs. L. E. Chandler on North Main street Tuesday afternoon. Previous to the business meeting a co-operative luncheon was served, all of the members contributing. These officers were elected: President, Mrs. Kate S. Buck; vice president, Mrs. Emma L. Chandler; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Lizzie G. Hellyar; program committee, Mrs. Emily G. Rice and Mrs. Abbie M. Wing.

Palmer Town League Again

Officers Elected; Baseball Assured For the Coming Season.

There will be baseball in Palmer this summer unless the plans fail. The Palmer Town League has been organized, and these officers chosen: President, G. S. Holden of Palmer; vice president, John Donovan of Thorndike; secretary and treasurer, J. J. Conway of Bondsville. An adjourned meeting will be held to-morrow evening, when rules will be adopted and a schedule for the season drawn up.

An Up-stairs Shoe Store.

In another column will be found the announcement of the Palmer shoe store of Springfield, an institution which is already known to numerous Palmer women and is rapidly extending its acquaintance. It is up one flight at 374 Main street, and is easily reached by elevator. It makes a specialty of ladies' footwear, and numbers among its customers many of the most fastidious in this line. The difference in rent between down and up stairs (and this is a large item) is given to the customers in lower prices on the goods in stock, which comprise the best lines known to the trade. The place is certainly worth visiting.

New Store to Be Opened Next Week.

Edwin C. Gould announces the opening of his new store in the Caryl block on Wednesday of next week. He will carry a full line of stationery, periodicals, office supplies, fine confectionery, cigars, etc. A circulating library will be one of the features. Mr. Gould has purchased the newspaper business of the Bay State Drug Co., and will pay particular attention to prompt and regular deliveries on all routes. The store has been thoroughly refitted, and an effort will be made to make it attractive to customers.

Actions of Selectmen.

At the meeting of the selectmen last evening Patrick O. Murphy of Bondsville was granted a pool license. E. W. Carpenter and S. W. Lyon of Palmer were granted auctioneers' licenses. The contract for concrete walks was awarded to J. W. Rochford of Springfield. The telephone company was granted a permit to string wires on poles already in from the Point of Rocks to Shearer's Corner. The selectmen are ready to receive offers of land suitable for a public dump, as authorized by the annual town meeting.

Kitchen Shower For Young Couple.

A number of the people of the Baptist church organized a kitchen shower Tuesday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wells, at their home on the Brimfield road. The visitors took refreshments with them, and games helped to round out a pleasant evening for all present.

The annual meeting of the Palmer Historical society will be held on the evening of May 7. In addition to the election of officers there will be a discussion as to the policy of the society during the coming year, to be followed by a social.

YOUNG UNTIL THIRTY-FIVE

From That Time On Unmarried Women Are "Old Maids," Says Boston Y. W. C. A.

When does a woman cease to be young? Woman herself, for reasons that require no elaboration here, declines, as a rule, to fix the period. Masculine authorities, for the most part, are chary of venturing upon such dangerous ground. Hence the question has ever been involved in uncertainty and it would perhaps remain so were it not that a responsible authority—none other than the Young Woman's Christian association, the title of which indicates its competency—comes to the front with a decision which may fairly be accepted as conclusive. It is to the Boston branch of the association that the world is indebted for the solution of the problem. The occasion for solving it arose from the completion of a new home for the young women of the association in the Massachusetts city. In framing rules for this establishment, it was found necessary to specify precisely the limit of young womanhood, beyond which the benefits of the home could not be enjoyed. This has been fixed at 35 years. Up to that age a young woman comes within the meaning of the title as understood by the association and may enjoy the advantages of membership and residence in the home. On reaching her thirty-fifth birthday she must resign her quarters. On that fatal day her young womanhood ceases and the "old maid" label is placed upon her indelibly and irrevocably. Thus the matter is settled beyond further cavil or dispute.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Baby as Luggage. The latest style of baby carriages was seen in the Union depot recently. It is a simple affair—the baby, a board and several straps. At first glance the baby might be mistaken for a bunch of clothing bound together in an old fashioned shawl strap, but on looking closer you see that on the child's back a board was placed, and three stout straps bound the youngster to it. A leather added to its convenience.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Seeding Expense!

IF YOU DECIDE TO BUY

White Mountain Brand Seeds

to sow this season, the cost per acre will exceed the cost of last season by about $1.50 per acre, and will exceed the cost of five years ago by about $2.50 per acre; or in other words, this season's high prices, (due to the eternal law of supply and demand and the great scarcity of high-grade seeds), will only add about $1.50 per ton to the cost of a portion of your next hay crop.

It hardly seems possible to us that the farmers are unwise enough to try to save 87 1-2 cents per acre on seed,—this being the actual difference between the cost of seeding an acre with cheap, low vitality seeds and with WHITE MOUNTAIN BRAND SEEDS, the strongest and best obtainable.

Will You Stand Out For 87 1-2 Cents?

If your dealer cannot supply you, write to the HOLBROOK GROCERY CO., SEED DEPT., KEENE, N. H., and they will refer you to a seedman, who can.

"All of us were out hunting one day," said he, "and the Englishman shot at everything that moved. If the wind carried a cloud of dust upward, you could depend on 'is ludship to shoot at it. So it happened that he narrowly missed shooting a young woman, who, with her husband, was visiting on the ranch. When our party returned the husband, boiling angry, approached the Englishman and said:

"Look here, you damned stupid ass, you missed shooting my wife by an inch."

"Aw, missed her!" said the Englishman, either astonished or perplexed. "By an inch, by Jove? Well, old man, I'm sorry, very sorry."

Women

From Forty-Five to Fifty Are Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The "change of life" is a most critical period in a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, she may be predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of some organ. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared to meet the needs of women's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

Mrs. Estella Gillispie

ONE CASE OUT OF MANY TO PROVE OUR CLAIMS.

St. Anne, Ill.—"I was passing through the change of life and I was a perfect wreck from female troubles. I had a displacement and bearing down pains, weak fainting spells, dizziness, then numb and cold feelings. Sometimes my feet and limbs were swollen. I was irregular and had so much backache and headache, was nervous, irritable and was despondent. Sometimes my appetite was good but more often it was not. My kidneys troubled me at times and I could walk only a short distance.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I was helped from the first. At the end of two months the swelling had gone down, I was relieved of pain, and could walk with ease. I continued with the medicine and now I do almost all my housework. I know your medicine has saved me from the grave and I am willing for you to publish anything I write to you, for the good of others."—Mrs. ESTELLA GILLISPIE, R.F.D. No. 4, Box 34, St. Anne, Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Moynahan and children of Cambridge visited Dennis E. Leary Sunday, making the trip in their automobile. Mr. Moynahan will be remembered as the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Moynahan, former residents of Thorndike.

The Pastime Club are preparing for their May basket social in Union Hall Wednesday evening, May 8, and will leave no stone unturned to make the event a pleasing one. Flanagan's singing orchestra of Marlboro will play. Tickets are now on sale and may be had from members of the club.

In the long fight for righteousness the watchword for all of us is spend and be spent. It is of little matter whether any one man fails or succeeds; but the cause shall not fail, for it is the cause of mankind. We, here in America, hold in our hands the hope of the world, the fate of the coming years; and shame and disgrace will be ours if in our eyes the light of high resolve is dimmed, if we trail in the dust the golden hopes of men.

Theodore Roosevelt

Republicans of Massachusetts

The contest to be decided at NEXT TUESDAY'S PRIMARIES is not Theodore Roosevelt's. It is YOURS.

Roosevelt is the leader in YOUR cause, not his own.

It is your battle, not his.

Next Tuesday's primaries are your opportunity to express your will. No party boss speaks for you; your own ballot does it. ROOSEVELT MADE THIS POSSIBLE DESPITE THE MACHINE. He forced the primary law. IT IS NOW UP TO YOU TO MAKE THE MOST OF IT.

Roosevelt stands for the rule of the people.

Do you? Then VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT.

He stands against every crooked interest and every crooked political boss.

Do you? Then VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT.

He stands for rigidly enforcing the pure food laws he had enacted—not for driving out of public office those who, like Dr. Wiley, would enforce them.

Do you? Then VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT.

He stands for laws to protect the workingman's health and to compensate him for injuries.

Do you? Then VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT.

He stands against making the farmer pay for tariff benefits conferred on the trusts by reciprocity or otherwise.

Do you? Then VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT.

He stands for a protective tariff that will benefit the wage-earner, the farmer and the consumer in precisely the same degree as it benefits the manufacturer and IN NO LESS DEGREE.

Do you? Then VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT.

YOUR VOTE IS NEEDED NEXT TUESDAY IF THE PEOPLE ARE TO TRIUMPH IN THEIR STRUGGLE FOR HUMAN RIGHTS. YOUR ACTIVE SUPPORT IS VITAL TO THE CAUSE. HELP GET OTHER VOTES BESIDES YOUR OWN. ROOSEVELT'S FRIENDS IN THIS CONTEST ARE VOLUNTEERS. THEY HAVE NO MACHINE. EVERY MAN IS ON DUTY BECAUSE HE BELIEVES IN THE PRINCIPLES FOR WHICH ROOSEVELT STANDS, AND WANTS A CANDIDATE WITH COURAGE AND CONSCIENCE — ONE WHO INSPIRES AND COMMANDS THE FAITH OF THE PEOPLE.

Do you want to stand with Roosevelt? Then vote next Tuesday and get your friends to vote for Roosevelt and Roosevelt delegates.

PALMER, MASS., FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 3, 1912.

NUMBER 5.

LICENSES GRANTED.

Commissioners Hand Out Privileges Tuesday Morning.

SOME CHANGES MADE, AS PREDICTED.

Weeks House In Palmer Dropped. Bondsville Gets First Class and Palmer Fourth Class.

The board of license commissioners met Tuesday forenoon and granted the usual number of liquor licenses for the coming year. As was freely predicted, there are some changes from last year's holders. The list is as follows: First class licenses to W. F. Dunn & Co., the Elms House, Palmer; D. E. O'Connor & Co., Nassawoman House, Palmer; J. B. Dawson & Co., Converse House, Palmer; C. H. Burns & Co., Burns Hotel, Palmer; T. J. Clifford & Co., Clinton House, Thorndike; M. F. Sullivan & Co., Bondsville; D. J. Hartnett & Co., Three Rivers. A fourth class or wholesale license was granted to J. K. Sullivan & Co., to be exercised on Bridge street in Palmer, and the four hotels in Palmer were granted licenses of the fourth class, which allows them to sell in bulk to guests of the house to be taken away. The fees are $1200 for licenses of the first class and $400 for fourth class licenses.

Druggists' licenses were granted to J. P. Lynde, G. C. Kinsley, H. H. Bronson of Palmer, L. E. Keith of Three Rivers and J. F. Shea of Bondsville.

The new deal leaves the Weeks House in Palmer without a permit to sell, and makes changes in Thorndike and Three Rivers, besides granting a privilege in Bondsville, which was without last year.

Innholders' licenses were granted to C. H. Burns & Co., J. B. Dawson & Co., W. F. Dunn & Co. and D. E. O'Connor & Co., of Palmer, and T. J. Clifford & Co. of Thorndike.

The fee for common victuallers' licenses was fixed at $2, and these were granted; C. A. Royce, P. E. Bard, O'Neil & Kretchnien, T. A. Edmonds, Union News Co. of Palmer; C. R. Russell, M. F. Sullivan & Co. and P. C. Murphy of Bondsville; D. F. Hartnett & Co. and Wilfred Boissy of Three Rivers; John Crean of Thorndike.

Sunday licenses were made $1, and these were given: Charles Cordially and G. W. Barnes, Palmer; D. F. Leary and Camille Perreault, Thorndike; D. J. Sullivan, Three Rivers.

Minister Dismissed.

Council Votes to Accept Resignation of East Brimfield Man.

An ecclesiastical council was held in the Congregational church in East Brimfield Monday to advise concerning the resignation of Rev. F. S. Child, pastor of the church. The members of the council were: Rev. W. A. White and Dea. H. D. Haynes of the Sturbridge Congregational church; Rev. Martin Lovering of Holland; Rev. William Jennings and Dea. Edward Davenport of Brimfield; Rev. F. S. Brewer and Dea. C. W. Bennett of the Second church, Palmer; Rev. C. B. McDuffee and C. S. Geer of Three Rivers; Rev. F. A. Williams of North Wilbraham; Rev. C. B. Bliss of Hampden. An honorary member was Rev. L. B. Curtis, pastor of the Baptist church in Stafford, Ct.

Merritt S. Dunham, clerk of the East Brimfield church, read the resignation of the pastor and a report of the action of the church, accepting with deep regret the resignation, and appointing a committee to call a council. After an executive session during which the pastor was consulted, the council approved the action of the church in accepting the pastor's resignation, and appointed Rev. F. S. Brewer, Rev. Martin Lovering and Dea. Geera a committee to draw up a statement of the findings of the council.

Lunch was served by the women of the church at the parsonage, and during the intermission those present were interested in examining Mr. Child's large collection of books, curios and art treasures from different parts of the world, which formerly belonged to his father, Francis Child, Harvard's noted professor.

The report of the council was read, in which it was stated that they concurred with the action of the church in accepting the resignation of the pastor, and declared the pastoral relation terminated. They expressed the deepest appreciation of Mr. Child's work. After reading the report, prayer was offered by Rev. C. B. McDuffee, a hymn was sung and benediction was pronounced by the retiring pastor.

Boosters' Club Gets Busy.

Plants Many Maple Trees and Listens To Address On Their Care

The Boosters' Club of Three Rivers carried out last Saturday its planned program in celebration of Arbor Day. One hundred maple trees were planted by the members near the grammar school building and Pickering Hall; they were given by J. T. Geer. In the evening there was a gathering in Pickering Hall, at which there was an interesting lecture by Prof. Stone of the State Agricultural College. He is an authority on trees and talked on his specialty, illustrating with a stereopticon. He gave much useful information as to the planting and care of trees, treatment of wounds and diseases. D. L. Bodfish of Palmer was the next speaker and talked along the lines of village improvement. He especially urged the young people to use care in their treatment of highways and the adjacent property, and called attention to the possibilities of the school grounds. F. A. Upham also spoke and urged the young people especially to co-operate with the club in protecting the young trees and caring for them.

Palmer Center School Leads.

Holds Record Attendance for April; Only One Tardy Mark. Bondsville Grammar Highest Building, Thorndike Second.

Of the four grammar schools, for the school month ending April 26, Bondsville had the highest per cent of attendance, it being 97.54. The Thorndike grammar school was second in this respect with a per cent of 96.77. Each of these buildings had a case of tardiness. The best per cent by room, 99.79, was attained by the Palmer Center school. It is to be regretted that one tardy mark must be recorded against this unusually high per cent. The rooms next on the list are grades 6 and 7 in Bondsville, and grade 8 in Palmer, their per cents being 98.97 and 98.59 respectively. The record of the several schools in detail is shown by the following:

CROWD AT PRIMARIES.

Largest Attendance In History Of Town's Caucuses.

REPUBLICANS IN LARGE MAJORITY.

Taft Favored Over Roosevelt Almost Three to One. Only One-fourth Of Vote Democratic.

Massachusetts had her first experience with presidential primaries on Tuesday, and their desirability will of course be a matter of individual opinion in view of the small percentage of the voters who turned out. And yet there was every incentive apparently for the Republican strength to show itself, and the voters of this party far exceeded those of the other. The interest centered of course on the contest between Taft and Roosevelt. The result is that each gets 18 of the 36 delegates to the national convention. This in the face of a Taft lead of 4000 in the presidential preference vote. The man responsible for the even division of the majority of the Republican voters, is Frank Seiberlich of Boston. He insisted on running as delegate at large on the Republican ticket pledged to Taft. His name was printed by itself a little above the list of eight regular candidates. The voter was expected to mark eight names, but many marked all nine, including Seiberlich's, and these ballots were thrown out and not counted, there being no way of knowing which of the eight the voter preferred, although it was apparent that such a voter was emphatically a Taft man. In almost every voting place in the state this error was made, and thousands of ballots thus marked were not counted. In Palmer out of 325 votes, 55 were thus marked.

The results in this section will be of interest. Palmer gave Taft a rousing vote—213 to 78 for Roosevelt. Monson did as well, considering the number of voters, Taft getting 144 to Roosevelt's 86. Wales was impartial, giving each 16, while Brimfield preferred Roosevelt, 39 to 21. Holland apparently has no use for Taft, giving all of her 16 votes to Roosevelt. Ware went strong for Taft, and Wilbraham and Warren favored him by good majorities. Belchertown gave Roosevelt a majority of two, and Hampden helped him out with 23 to 11 for the president.

Never in the history of Palmer has there been so large a turnout at the caucuses in the fall, and seldom if ever has the number been equalled for the spring election. Special free electric cars were run to the town house from all the villages after 6 o'clock, and the voters of the Depot village were accorded 15-minute time until 8 o'clock. Automobiles were in use to carry distant voters to the cars, and there was more activity than has been known for years. As a result the total number of votes polled was 412—325 Republican and 87 Democratic.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Congregational church was held last Friday afternoon, Rev. C. B. Bliss presiding. The reports showed five additions and three removals from the church roll, making the number of members 73; $67.91 was contributed for outside benevolences during the year. The Ladies' Benevolent society raised $101 for home church expenses. The names of 18 persons who have contributed to the endowment funds of the church were read. The committee on incorporation recommended that the church be incorporated. A vote of thanks was given Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Burleigh for the gift of an individual communion set. Officers were elected as follows: Clerk, Dea. Alonzo B. Newell; treasurer, Herbert H. Thresher; Sunday-school superintendent, Deacon A. B. Newell. The Ladies' Benevolent Society held a short session and voted $20 toward the expense of repairing the house sheds.

The Hampden Baseball Club will play a game with the "G. B." Baseball Club of Springfield at Hampden Saturday afternoon.

ALMOST A FATALITY.

Child Nearly Loses Life In Burning Dwelling House.

CARRIED UNCONSCIOUS FROM ROOM.

Mysterious Blaze In Daytime In House Of Chief Summers. Boy Rescued By Maid.

The house of Chief Summers of the fire department, on Converse street, was seriously damaged by a fire which was discovered about 2.40 Tuesday afternoon. And only by an exceedingly narrow margin was the life of Stewart, the three-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Summers, saved through the courage and quick action of the maid of the establishment, Joan McKay; she found the little fellow on the floor of the room in which the fire started, unconscious and in the corner farthest from the door, the room being so filled with smoke that it was impossible to see a half dozen feet into it.

WARE.

Injured in Auto Accident.

Miss Beatrice Clifford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Clifford, was painfully injured Sunday afternoon in Leicester while on an automobile trip to Providence with Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Roche and family, who had been visiting at her home in Ware. They were returning home, accompanied by Miss Clifford, and when reaching Leicester one of the tires burst and the auto shot into a fence. The whole party was thrown out, but fortunately no one was seriously injured. Arthur Guyer, boss driver for the Gilbert Company, happened along at the time and volunteered to take Miss Clifford back to Ware. She was brought to her home and attended by Dr. D. M. Ryan, who found no bones broken. She was badly bruised and shaken up.

WHY WOMEN SUFFER

Many Palmer Women are Learning the Cure

Women often suffer, not knowing the cause. Backache, headache, dizziness, nervousness, irregular urinary passages, weakness, languor—Each a seeming torture of itself. Together tell of weakened kidneys. Strike at the root—get to the cause. Quickly give the help the kidneys need. No remedy endorsed like Doan's Kidney Pills. Recommended by thousands—Endorsed at home. Here's convincing proof from a Palmer citizen.

Mrs. Anna Smith, Park St., Palmer, Mass., says: "For quite a while I had attacks of backache and there were pains in my loins when I stooped or lifted, showing that my kidneys were at fault. This trouble was particularly bad in the morning and I was hardly able to get up. When I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills, I began their use and it did not take them long to bring me entire relief." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—DOAN'S—and take no other.

Seeding Expense!

IF YOU DECIDE TO BUY

White Mountain Brand Seeds

to sow this season, the cost per acre will exceed the cost of last season by about $1.50 per acre, and will exceed the cost of five years ago by about $2.50 per acre; or in other words, this season's high prices, (due to the eternal law of supply and demand and the great scarcity of high-grade seeds), will only add about $1.50 per ton to the cost of a portion of your next hay crop.

It hardly seems possible to us that the farmers are unwise enough to try to save 87 1-2 cents per acre on seed,—this being the actual difference between the cost of seeding an acre with cheap, low vitality seeds and with WHITE MOUNTAIN BRAND SEEDS, the strongest and best obtainable.

Will You Stand Out For 87 1-2 Cents?

If your dealer cannot supply you, write to the HOLBROOK GROCERY CO., SEED DEPT., KEENE, N. H., and they will refer you to a seedman, who can.

Trouble

It was evident that the young man was worried. Indeed, it was so evident that Loretta could not well ignore the fact. So after a few commonplace she asked him what was the matter.

"It isn't often that my friends are so evidently thinking of something else when I try my best to be entertaining," she said. "You have something on your mind and it might be a good idea to tell me about it."

"I don't see how you guessed it," returned the young man. "But the truth is that I am just about as worried as anything can be. I don't see how the thing can come out right."

"One never can tell," declared Loretta sagely. "Go on."

"You see," the young man began, "we live in a neighborhood that is half city and half country and not quite select enough to be fashionable. It's just as nice as it can be and we certainly enjoy our garden and our porch to beat the band. My mother almost lives out of doors. Well, there was a house built next door with a fine chicken yard and by and by the people moved in."

"It's a way people have of doing," murmured Loretta.

"There was a man and his wife and after a while a girl came home from college, having been graduated with honors. Gee, she's as smart as a whip! And, honest, it doesn't keep her from being pretty, either."

"I am really surprised," said Loretta. "Well, somehow we got to be good friends," the young man went on. "Too good friends for my comfort, it seems. Anyhow, I got interested in her chickens—which are really fine ones, you know, not the common kind at all. I could understand how proud she was of them. She was fond of any kind of pets and she had a cat that was a dream. It had a long, plumed tail and had taken a prize at every cat show for several years. She positively worshipped that cat."

"After a while mother's vegetables came up and a lot of flowers, for she's a master hand at growing things. Then, just as all luck would have it, something came and dug up her growing things. It certainly was the limit. Mother got so discouraged that she almost cried. I declared that I'd kill the creature that did it on sight, whatever it was."

"Reckless!" "Well, I never thought of the chickens," he proceeded, "till I found Lida Flanders kind of chilly toward me. I asked her over the fence one morning what the trouble was and she said very pointedly that her most valuable chickens were disappearing at the rate of one a night."

"Why didn't you tell her that you didn't know anything about her chickens?" "Tell her!" repeated the young man. "As if I didn't tell her! If I said it once I said it a thousand times. But do you think she would believe me with that chicken head lying at my feet? Not much! And you wouldn't have either, not after my silly threat to kill whatever it was that tore up mother's garden."

"What did you do about it after that?" "At first I didn't think there was a thing I could do," he sighed. "Lida wouldn't let me come near enough to speak to her. It made me wild to see her smiling at everybody else."

"I wouldn't have given her a second thought since she was so unjust." "Oh, yes, you would," the young man assured her. "It would have been all very well to talk like that in the spring, but it was too late for me to quit thinking of her then. Why, I lay awake nights trying to fix it up and it was not until last week that I had an idea."

"It was the very day she bowed to me as she was going out with young Saunders. You know, he squints or something. Well, bowing to me was more than she had done for so long that I sort of took heart and sharpened my wits. I had been so downhearted that I hadn't really tried before."

"As a result of that inspiration I made the finest trap you ever saw—neat, too, by Jove! It was sort of original, because I had to fit it against the side of the chicken house and make it large enough to squeeze a man's arm as well as a rat."

"I had it there two nights before it caught a thing and then when I went to look at it before going down to the office I found it had worked. There was a cat in it caught just as securely as you please and dead as a doornail." "Oh, how splendid!" Loretta cried. "That surely will please your fair neighbor."

The young man looked at her sorrowfully. "Do you think so?" he asked. "You see, it was her cat!"—Chicago Daily News.

Better keep the straw hat in hiding for a few days yet.

HINTS TO THE HANDICAPPED

Writer in Atlantic Monthly Tells Them How They May Make Best of Life.

Grow up as fast as you can. Cultivate the widest interest you can, and cherish all your friends. Cultivate some artistic talent, for you will find it the most durable of satisfactions and perhaps one of the surest means of livelihood as well. Achievement is, of course, on the knees of the gods; but you will at least have the thrill of trial, and, after all, not to try is to fail. Taking your disabilities for granted, and assuming constantly that they are being taken for granted, make your social intercourse as broad and as constant as possible. Do not take the world too seriously, nor let too many social conventions oppress you. Keep sweet your sense of humor, and above all do not let any morbid feelings of inferiority creep into your soul. You will find yourself sensitive enough to the sympathy of others, and if you do not find persons who like you and are willing to meet you more than half way, it will be because you have let your disability narrow your vision and shrink up your soul. It will be really your own fault and not that of your circumstances. In a word, keep looking outward; look out eagerly for those things that interest you, for persons who will interest you and be friends with you, for new interests and for opportunities to express yourself.—Atlantic Monthly.

DID MOSES MAKE MISTAKE?

First Chapter of Genesis Conforms in Many Instances With Late Discoveries in Science.

We have often heard "the mistakes of Moses" in the first chapter of Genesis commented upon, but what especially strikes us in that chapter is its contraventions of science, but its harmonies with late discoveries. How did the writer, many centuries before the story of the rocks had been deciphered, know that there was a beginning and then a pause before life appeared on the earth? Who taught the writer that the earth was "without form and void" before it was divided into continents? How came it that the long delayed, slow emergence of land should be set forth as it is? Was it mere guesswork that prompted the writer to say grasses were created before animals, and not for animals already existent? Is it a happy accident that life in the water appears before life upon the land? And ages before the scientist dreamed of paleontology we find man last in the series just as he appears today by his remains in the drift instead of in the stratified rocks? Further investigation may explain discrepancies, but what except inspiration can account for these coincidences?—The Advance.

Breaking a Wisdom Monopoly.
"I'm afraid the country suffered a great loss when they failed to send our eloquent and able friend back to congress." "Not at all," replied Senator Sorghum. "The sense of the plain people again prevailed. Why should the lecture platforms be robbed that the brainy men may be assembled to listen to one another, where instruction is superfluous?"

WARREN.
Dr. A. W. Phelps entertained the Bay Path Club Monday evening, and Charles D. Keyes of Roswell spoke upon his recent trip abroad. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

At a special meeting of the selectmen Monday, the following licenses were granted: Common victualers, G. C. Prindle & Co., A. E. Shumway, Charles H. Reim, William Downey and Ovil Ledaue; innholders' license, John W. Fountain & Co.; pool table licenses, Dennis Donahue and William Donahue; auctioneers' licenses, J. W. Maxim and H. M. Converse.

Mrs. Ellen Jenks suffered a stroke of paralysis Saturday evening. Mrs. Jenks, who had been in her usual health, was called to the barn during the evening by her chauffeur, M. C. Hoyle, who had discovered that some one had entered his room in the barn and stolen two suits of clothes, a raincoat, and several other articles of wearing apparel. On returning to the house she was stricken, her left side being paralyzed. She is as comfortable as could be expected.

PALMER NEWS.

E. C. Gould's New Store.

Attractive Addition to the Business Places of the Town.

The new store of E. C. Gould in the Caryl block was opened to the public Wednesday and proves to be an unusually pleasing and attractive place.
The general color scheme is a tint slightly off white, and the high ceiling gives a room with more than the usual amount of light. The stock is composed of stationery, periodicals, school and office supplies, and the usual variety of articles carried by such an establishment. One of the specialties is the Foss line of chocolates in three grades, 80, 60 and 35 cents a pound. Smokers' wants are supplied from a varied stock of cigars of the leading brands. A new feature is a circulating library of the latest fiction, which can be had at a small charge per day for each book. On one side a large space will be occupied by a Becker sanitary soda fountain, a new departure for this section, which was to have been ready for use on the opening day, but has been delayed in shipment. All the leading newspapers are carried, and particular attention is being paid to the delivery of these to customers in all parts of the town.

Junk Licenses Settled.

Selectmen Decide to Grant to Four Dealers Instead of One.

The selectmen disposed of the junk license question, which has been much in evidence the past two weeks, at their meeting last evening. Louis Green, the holder of an exclusive license the past two years, wished a continuation of the same, while there was a proposition to depart from the one-man plan and give licenses to four. Petitions in favor of both systems were circulated and presented to the selectmen. Last evening the selectmen received bids from eight men, each stating the amount the bidder was willing to give for an exclusive license, also what he would pay if three others were granted. The selectmen decided on the four-man plan, and made a selection from the eight. All were notified to make their payments to-morrow, so as to be ready for business on Monday. If any of the four decide to drop out the selectmen will fill the vacancy, but none of those granted licenses will be permitted to do business until the four have paid, thus securing the town the full amount.

Boy's Teeth Knocked Out.

But Are Replaced, and Reason to Believe They Will Grow.

Roger, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs.
George S. Holden of Central street, was painfully injured last Saturday while playing ball, four of his teeth being knocked out. A "fly" ball had been batted, and young Holden with another player was running for it from opposite directions. With eyes intent on the ball neither noticed the other until they collided, Holden's mouth striking the forehead of the other player. Two teeth were broken, two loosened and two knocked out. The missing teeth were picked up and Dr. S. B. Keith of Palmer, with the assistance of a Springfield dentist, replaced them in position and is of the opinion that they will eventually become fixed and as good as originally.

Gets Another Franchise.

Central Massachusetts Electric Company Will Light East Longmeadow.

The Central Massachusetts Electric company has secured a franchise to sell electricity for light and power in East Longmeadow.

A public hearing, well attended, was held Monday evening, and almost everyone present voted in favor of the company's proposition as presented by Manager H. M. Parsons. The acquisition of this new territory will keep the company more busy than ever with its work of construction and reconstruction.
A large force of men is still at work in Wilbraham changing the distribution system, where the improvements are fast becoming evident.

Real Estate Options.

Price Given Springfield Agent on Feeney
Property on Main Street.

It was reported last evening that the Feeney property on Main street, including all the land on Central street up to the opera house line, had been sold to Springfield parties. Investigation proves this to be slightly in error.
A price has been given the Henry M.
Clark agency of Springfield at which the property may be bought, and a time limit set when the option is to expire, but there is yet no assurance that the option will be taken up; in fact, it will be several days before a final decision is known.

In this connection it may be interesting to know that out-of-town parties some time ago took an option on the Converse property on the corner of Main and Thorndike streets, which will expire the 15th. The plan of the purchasers—if the property is transferred—is to move the house now on the property to the west side of the lot and convert it into tenements, and to erect a business block on the corner.

Death of Former Resident.

Mrs. Alice R. Butler, 39, died at the Wesson Memorial hospital in Springfield Monday evening after a several weeks' illness. Mrs. Butler was born in Wilbraham, but spent most of her life in Palmer, where she was well known. She lived in Centralia, Ill., for several years, returning East about four weeks ago because of ill-health.
She leaves one daughter, Gladys; two brothers, Jason and Howard Palmer, and one sister, Miss Carrie Palmer, all of Springfield. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at 1.30 in Springfield and the body was brought to Palmer for burial in the family lot in Oak Knoll cemetery.

Youthful Bandit Taken.

Officer Crimmins captured a combination of a 15-years-old lad, a bicycle, a rifle and revolver Tuesday evening,
on the suspicion that the kid had run away from home. The lad had made no particular trouble, but the combination seemed a good one to inquire into. The boy's parents were finally located in Connecticut and came for him Wednesday.

Absence of Name is Expensive.

Two peddlers—Paul Campo and Cologgers Maizullo—who were found attempting to dispose of their wares without having their name and license number conspicuously displayed on their packs, answered to the charge in the district court last Saturday. They were found guilty and fined $10 each, which they paid.

ported.

Central and Park streets.

The parsonage belonging to the Baptist church on Thorndike street is receiving a coat of paint externally.

The exterior of the Converse House block has been painted this week, the color being changed from red to buff.

A party of a dozen of the business men went to Ware Wednesday evening and enjoyed a lobster supper at Rohan's.

week.

and its services are greatly appreciated, especially by the merchants along Main street.

The firemen were called out at 5.16 yesterday afternoon for a brush fire on the road to Three Rivers. The blaze was not an extensive one.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs.
Daniel J. Fay, who died Wednesday evening, was buried yesterday morning in St. Thomas' cemetery.

their families from the Hastings house on Central street to W. E. Mc-Donald's house on Walnut street.

Two carloads of soldiers from Jefferson Barracks at St. Louis, Mo., passed

Wednesday morning en route to New London.

family from the Allen house on Pleasant street to the O'Neil place in Blanchardville, which he recently purchased.

The case of George Moses, charged with an assault on his wife, was called in the district court last Saturday.
Moses pleaded nolo, and the case was placed on file.

The high school party returned last evening from their Washington trip.

They report an excellent time, with pleasant weather except at Philadelphia for a short time.

There was a hard thunder storm last Saturday afternoon, about the first real hard one of the season. Quantities of rain fell for a while, and the roads and streets were washed badly in some places.

chinery.

P. S. C. E. society of the Congregational church will hold a social in the church parlors this evening. Flowers for the sick will be purchased with the money received.

The ladies of the Congregational church served their annual May dinner in the church Wednesday. There was a large attendance, and also a generous patronage of the sale of useful and fancy articles.

Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Holden and Mr.
and Mrs. Harrie M. Howe and E. E.
Brooks left to-day to join the Knights Templar excursion to Bermuda, sailing from New York by the Royal Mail Steam Packet line.

The billiard room of the Palmer Business and Social Club which has been undergoing renovation, is open for use once more. The other rooms in the second story of the block, as well as the halls, are now in the hands of the decorators.

About 100 carrier pigeons were received at the American Express Co.'s office Wednesday from Rhode Island, with a request to mark on tags which were attached to the birds the time they were liberated, and to let them go, which was done.

The Home missionary department of the Congregational church Ladies' Benevolent society is soon to pack a box of clothing for Grand View, Tenn., and solicits second-hand clothing of all descriptions for that purpose, but especially desires clothing for men.

Next Tuesday evening there will be a stereopticon lecture in the Baptist church at 7.30, on "Through the Holy Land of Palestine." One hundred views will be shown, half of which will be beautifully decorated. A silver offering will be taken. The public is invited.

There was a large attendance Wednesday evening at the reception given Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Palmer by the Baptist people in the church. Many of the townspeople other than members of the parish were present, speechmaking was in order and refreshments were served.

The Old Center Improvement society met at the home of Mrs. Alice Gates yesterday afternoon. This was the last meeting of the season. An interesting program was carried out and refreshments were served. The society has placed three seats in the common and two at the station.

tral street. The funeral will be held of the late Stillman Ellis, and had lived the greater portion of her life in Palmer.

No matter who is nominated by the Republican national convention at Chicago, there is fun in store for those who happen to be on hand when an election bet on the result is paid.
Two young men have wagered on the result of the convention, the forfeit being a wheelbarrow ride from Central street to Thorndike street and back, the loser to do the pushing and the winner to ride.

The annual meeting of the Histori-

WILL RUN IN THE FAMILY

Boy Gently Breaks to Father the News of His Expulsion From School.

"That boy will be the death of me some day!" declared the head of the family. "I'm sure I don't know where he gets all his impudence and self-assurance—surely not from me. He returned home from school the other day to spend the holidays, as I supposed, and, entering my office, he threw his hat on the floor, selected an easy-chair, put his feet on my desk, lit a cigarette, inhaled a few puffs, and then, turning languidly to me, he drawled:

"I say, dad, do you remember the time when you were expelled from school?"

"I did. There was no use denying it, for one day in a burst of confidence I had told him some of my escapades as a boy, and lived to regret that I had been so indiscreet.

"Well," said he, "history has repeated itself."

"What do you mean, you rascal?" I roared.

"Oh," said he, easily, "I've been expelled, too. Astonishing, isn't it, dad, how such things will run in a family?"

Crushed by a Caddle.

"It is not always safe to fish for compliments," says a Washington man, who travels quite a bit, "and I recently learned a lesson in this regard from a caddle attached to a golf club near this town.

"I was going round the links one afternoon and making a dreadful exhibition of myself. I did not, however, know that my caddle was fully aware of this, as he seemed so blissfully unconscious that anything was wrong. He was a nice, freckled little Irishman, and I took quite a fancy to him, especially as never a hint came from him that I was doing badly. At the end of the round, in the hope of a 'jolly' from the lad, I ventured to observe:

"I've been traveling for the last two months, and am dreadfully out of practice. That's why I'm in such bad form today."

"To which the caddle calmly replied: 'Oh, then you've played before, sir!'"

A Cooking Feat in the Air.

To cook a potato pie at the top of a chimney three hundred feet high by means of the heat generated in the fires below would seem an impossible task, yet such a feat was on one occasion accomplished by John Faulkner, a famous Lancashire steeplejack.

The incident was the outcome of a wager between Faulkner and the manager of a Manchester gas works, who doubted John's statement regarding the excessive heat.

A large iron kettle was procured, and this, being filled with necessary ingredients—sixty-six pounds in weight—was hoisted to the summit of the huge chimney stack. Faulkner placed the receptacle on the outer and coolest side of the brickwork, but despite this, the contents were found to be thoroughly cooked in one hour and twenty minutes, or ten minutes less than the stipulated time.

Faulkner won his wager and the pie, which, it is said, was slightly burned at the bottom, was afterwards distributed among the poor of the district.—Bystander Curious Superstitions.

Some curious superstitions gathered around even so eminently practical a thing as beer. In Scotland it used to be the custom to throw a handful of salt and a little dry malt into the mash to keep the witches from it; and the cautious housewife, in houses where they brewed their own beer, used to throw a live coal into the vat to save the liquor from the frolicsome interference of fairies. The addition of salt, by the way, to keep beer in the course of brewing, was supposed to be for the unholy purpose of exciting thirst. It may possibly have been used to this end by the unscrupulous, but the real reason was legitimate. Salt moderates the fermentation.

Fix up the old chair by applying a coat of Campbell's Varnish Stain. You will be surprised and delighted with the effect you can produce. The cost is only a trifle and it is a pleasure to do the work yourself. Ask C. N. Ellithorpe & Son for color card.

Springfield Music Festival.

Mary Garden Will Sing May 10 and 11. Numerous Other Stars.

It has rarely been the good fortune of the management of the Springfield music festival to secure a singer the very mention of whose name brings everyone to attention. Every person who can read or listen has heard or read about Mary Garden, the famous prima donna of to-day, an artist whose appearance always excites enthusiasm. She is easily the commanding figure of the opera stage, and in the few large cities where she has hitherto appeared people have literally flocked to see and hear her. Miss Garden is to sing in the miscellaneous concert program of Friday evening, when she will sing arias from two operas in which she has made her greatest successes, and also a group of songs with piano accompaniment, thus giving her Springfield audience a generous opportunity to enjoy her versatile art. In addition to Mary Garden, the other artists will be Harold Bauer, the pianist; Kathleen Parlow, the phenomenal young violinist; Claude Cunningham, the superb baritone; Lambert Murphy, the splendid tenor singer; Louis Shenk, American baritone and Mildred Potter, contralto.

Death of Fred S. Peck.

Fred S. Peck, 43, died at his home on the Stafford road Saturday night at 11.30 o'clock after a short illness. Death was due to internal injuries caused by an accident less than a week previous to his death. He was at work on his farm removing stones and was using a piece of timber for a lever. The lever slipped and the end hit him in the stomach. At the time it did not bother him, but on Friday night he was taken ill with cramps and a physician was summoned. He continued to grow worse and Saturday night he died. Mr. Peck was born in Monson October 5, 1868, and was a son of Martin L. and Sophia E. Peck. He was educated in the public school in this town and since his father's death he had conducted the farm. In 1902 he was married to Miss May Allen of Brimfield, who died the following year. His only survivor is his mother with whom he lived. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Abram Conklin of the Universalist church officiating. Burial was in No. 1 cemetery.

The weavers asked for an increase of 10 per cent a week ago, and on Monday a notice was posted that this increase could not be given. The weavers then stopped work and left the mill. Tuesday a conference was held with Mr. Ellis and he submitted a change of schedule that offered an increase of about 9 per cent, which was not only given to the weavers but to all the help in the mill. This schedule was accepted by the weavers and they all returned to work on Wednesday morning.

The Bungalow Shop's first May breakfast and dinner amply demonstrated that institution's ability to provide appetizing things to eat, and in abundant variety. The room was prettily decorated with spring flowers, and music was furnished by an orchestra from 12 to 2. A party of 22 was present at breakfast at 8 o'clock, and at noon all the tables were filled; several auto parties were present during the day, and a total of 136 people were served. All spoke in highest praise of the menu and the service. Among the good things on the menu were broiled shad, roast turkey, broiled spring chicken, spring lamb chops, strawberry shortcake and ice cream.

Cheap Mode of Living. With no rent to pay, no street car fares or other of the usual unavoidable city expenses to meet, the barge and canal boat men of the Netherlands live possibly the most frugal lives of any of the urban working classes in Europe. They, with their families, exist in the hulls of their craft. The rooms are small, with little ventilation, and necessarily low to enable the boats to pass under the bridges. The decks form the children's playground. Chickens are sometimes kept on the boat and consume the garbage.

An Event in MILLINERY

A Sale of Untrimmed Hats and Trimmings at Fractional Cost

It's an event of most timely proportions. Price-giving in Our Home Millinery Department smacks of a clearance. Offerings are a third and less than regular prices. As with all events here, there's a good sound reason. It has been a very unfavorable season for millinery selling. The outcome is a naturally an unwarranted stock accumulation. It must be reduced. There's but one alternative, the price lever. To make it quick and decisive we've used it most effectively. So in a visit here--if you're at all handy with the needle--you can fashion a becoming and most exclusive style at less than the ordinary price of the shape.

$1 and $1.50 Strand Sailors

After the Wedding

"Well, what did you think of the wedding?" cried Miss Connelly as she bounced into the car. "Beg pardon, Stell, for steppin' on you," she continued, stumbling over Miss Larson's feet and lunging into a seat next to that young person.

Miss Larson opened one sleepy eye. "Oh, did you step on me?" she droned, yawning widely and undisguisedly. "I didn't know it."

"Sure I did," responded Miss Connelly. "I thought I'd better wake you up and tell you about it. You can go to sleep again now."

Miss Larson opened the other eye. "I wasn't sleep, Nell Connelly," she said, indignantly. "I guess a person's got a right to shut their eyes if they want to. My eyes ain't very strong and the light hurts 'em."

"Don't let's waste our perfectly good time fightin' with each other this morning," said Miss Connelly. "If we do we won't have any time left to knock the wedding."

"Say," began Miss Frizkie eagerly, "didn't you pretty near die over the way Mame's hair was fixed? Honest to goodness, when I get married I'll have a hair dresser fix my hair up swell if I don't have so much as a pork chop to eat for a year."

"I thought her hair looked pretty good for Mame," said Miss Larson, sleepily. "It always looks like she's slept in it."

"Her dress was a peach, though, wasn't it?" said Miss Frizkie. "At least it would have been if it had any fit to it. All that hand embroidery and that bead trimming must have cost a pile."

"Hand embroidery!" ejaculated Miss Connelly. "That's all you know about it, Jen. I was over to look at Mame's clothes Tuesday evening and felt of it good, and it wasn't no more hand embroidery than nothing."

"Well, she must 'a' got a corner on this year's crop of beads," said Miss Frizkie. "What do you think I said to the lady that was standin' next to me when Mame came into the parlor? I give her a dig with my elbow and I says, 'Say, I says, 'Mame must have got mixed in her dates and thought she was a Christmas tree.'"

"My! The lady got as red as anything. I designed that gown," she says, sniffing up her nose at me, mad as she could be. It's modeled after a gown that was imported straight from Paris and you couldn't find its duplicate in Chicago. I'm a high-priced modiste," she says, besides being Miss Peterson's own aunt."

"Land! I just faded away like I'd been blown off the landscape."

"It's a pity you couldn't learn not to have such rude manners, Jen," said Miss Connelly.

"I guess if I could just learn to shut up and keep shut up it would help some," agreed Miss Frizkie, good-naturedly.

"Mame didn't have such an awful lot of presents as I thought she would," Miss Larson opened her eyes long enough to remark. "I kind of thought she'd have a lot more'n what she did."

"Some of 'em was expensive, though, I guess," said Miss Frizkie. "Now, I bet that cut glass pitcher and them glasses cost twenty dollars."

"Nix on that," said Miss Connelly, decidedly. "I picked up every one of 'em and run my finger over 'em, and they wasn't sharp like cut glass ought to be. They was real smooth."

"Well, that shows how you can fool me," Miss Frizkie admitted. "But then I'd a whole lot rather have a showy set like that than some little dinky piece that wouldn't make no show at all."

"Same here," said Miss Larson. "Anybody would, of course. I guess Mame's ma's folks are pretty well fixed anyway. Her ma's brother gave her that dandy set of knives and forks that was layin' upon the dresser with the plates with the hand painted fruit design up 'em."

"Nothin' much to them," said Miss Connelly. "I guess they didn't cost more'n about five dollars. They was plated and it wasn't first-class plate, either."

"Plated?" cried Miss Frizkie. "How do you know they was plated?"

"Why, I took 'em out and looked at them," replied Miss Connelly, placidly. "You can't fool me. All the silver things there was plated except that little pickle fork that the two Ryan girls gave her."

"My! I'd hate to give such an awful little thing, anyway," murmured Miss Larson. "I think it was a lot better to club together like us girls did and give her something big. Our silver tray looked like it could have bought up everything else she had."

"Includin' the feller she married," said Miss Connelly. "Say, wasn't he the farmer, though? I bet he rented them clothes. He was afraid to sit down in 'em, and the way they fit was a fright. Did you pipe how he kept hitchin' one shoulder all the time the preacher was talkin'?"

"No," said Miss Frizkie. "I didn't. I was too busy tryin' to count the beads of Mame's dress."

Miss Larson stuck her hands deep into her muff and yawned once more. "Well, I'm glad I went," she said, "but don't know as it was worth the money we put into that tray, even if it did look so grand. The ice cream I got wasn't no bigger'n a silver dollar."

Procrastination, the thief of time.

Harvest Hands

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press)

They wanted harvest hands in Indiana, Iowa, Kansas—all over the west. They wanted them so bad that very high wages were offered and agents sent east to talk and advertise. It was free fare out, with keep on the road, and then $3 per day and the most liberal board for weeks and weeks. It was the greatest chance for the students working their way through college, and scores of them took advantage of it.

Dwight Carleton, of Columbia, looked upon it as a special interposition of Providence. In six weeks he could earn sufficient to take him through the winter term. He had no wealthy father to back him.

Fourteen hours per day in the harvest field, and the farmer carrying a grouch because he could not make it fifteen! A bed on the hay in the barn, and every man still hungry as he arose from the "liberal table!"

The husky workers groaned and perspired and stood it. Those who had never roughed it kept on as long as they could, and dropped out and were paid off and told to go. And when Dwight Carleton was handed his wages, after ten days of back-breaking work, he found them insufficient even to pay his railroad fare back as far as Chicago. And then some one stole his spare clothing, and when he "hit the pike" he had nothing to carry in his hands.

There came a day to Dwight Carleton when he had to sit down by the roadside and wonder if he could ever make another mile. Exhausted with hunger and tramping and exposure, and a fever burning him, he sat with his head in his hands and his courage all gone. And then the children from the country school, a quarter of a mile away, came along on their way home and stopped to look at him and make comments. And a little later came the schoolma'am in her pink sunbonnet and clean calico dress.

"You are ill," she said as she glanced at the young man. He nodded his head.

"Well, come back to the first house. That's where I live. My father is a farmer, but I'm teaching this school this term. You are ill and weak. Take my arm."

"But I'm penniless," replied the exhausted harvest hand with a rueful smile.

"Come now, and we'll walk slowly."

It was after the patient had got to the house and found a bed and the telephone had summoned a doctor, that the farmer came up from the field to say to his daughter:

"For the last two years you've been trying to turn this house into a tramp hospital, and now you've done it! That feller is playing 'possum on you. He's got to get out of this and move along!"

The father was taken into the bedroom of the half-asleep, muttering young man and shown the palms of his hands. They were blistered.

"Guess he's been at work somewhere and played out, but it ain't for us to pay his doctor bills and nurse him."

"I can pay, father, from my school money."

"Humph! And when he gets able to go, he'll steal my best horse!"

It was two weeks before the patient was able to leave his room, and two more before he was moving around outdoors. Before that he had told his story and written a letter to be mailed to New York city.

"Trying to get through college—humph!" was the farmer's reply. "Ma, our Susie's soft as butter. She believes every word that feller says, and you keep your eye out that they don't clope together. That letter to New York was only a blind. It'll never be took notice of."

But it was. There came an answer and a big money order, and young Mr. Carleton was to get some clothes and come on as soon as he could. He owed something to the farmer. At a family council the farmer reckoned that $50 would be about right.

"I shall never pay it, father!" exclaimed the daughter as the red blazed up in her cheeks.

"Then who will?"

"I will! I told you so in the beginning. That money is only a loan from a friend."

Out in the orchard, the day before he left, the ex-harvest hand tried to pay the money to his nurse, but she held her hands behind her and said she wanted to be his creditor.

"For how long?" he asked.

"Till you—you—"

"I shall come back some day to pay my debt. When I do I shall ask for something I dare not speak of now. How long will you wait?"

"Isn't cash in thirty days the rule?" she blushing asked.

One spring day three years later the mother ran down into the field to say to the husband:

"Oh, pa, but it's all happened—it's all happened!"

"Was that dinged smokehouse tipped over?"

"No. but that young man has walked home from school with Susie—and he's through with college—and he's got a place that pays thousands a year—and he's paid back her money and wants to be married right away—and—and—"

"Wall, I allus said 'twould come!"

Good for American Detectives.

Detectives who discovered a copy of Oliver Wendell Holmes' poems in the suit case left behind by a burglar decided that they had a good clew to the man's identity. They figured out what a man who read Oliver Wendell Holmes' poetry would probably look like, and when they saw a man who answered their mental picture they examined him. Of course, it was the very man. American detectives lead the world.

Valuable Jamaican Woods.

The most valuable of the Jamaican woods are the yaca, the bully tree, ironwood, hahoe, juniper, cedar, mahogany, lignum vitae, ebony, fiddlewood, yoke, prickly yellow, broad leaf, soapwood, cashew and calabash. Hardwood is used principally for railway sleepers, telegraph poles and fence posts, cedars used chiefly for native shingles and furniture, and other woods are used in building houses in the highlands. Unfortunately the streams are not large enough to log them to the coast, but there is no reason why portable engines and sawmills should not be utilized so as to turn these woods into the market.

MAY NOW GATHER JUNK.

Privileged Four Pay Up and Secure Their Permits.

TOWN GETS $450 FOR THE RIGHTS.

Which is $150 More Than Last Year. Splitting Up Expected To Raise Prices.

The four men who were granted junk licenses by the selectmen at their meeting last week "came across" with the money Saturday and received documents which permit them to go about gathering junk until May 1st, 1912, unless the privilege is withdrawn for cause previously; this the selectmen have a right to do if the holder conducts his business in an objectionable manner. This is not likely to happen however, in view of the amount paid for the privileges.

The town has received $450 for the junk collecting privilege this year. Last year the sum was $300, and the privilege was held by one man. There has been some complaint that with a one-man monopoly the prices paid for junk have run extremely low. In order to make it possible to secure higher prices the selectmen decided to grant privileges to four dealers. The plan may not have the desired effect, but the selectmen feel that they have created the opportunity, at least.

The holders of the licenses are Harry Gold, Jacob Gold, Sam Goldberg and Louis Green, the latter holding an exclusive privilege the last two years. No other licenses will be granted during the present year.

First Game To-morrow. Rules Adopted, Officers Chosen.

Plans which were begun last fall toward the organization of a baseball league among the grammar schools of the town were completed this week, and the league will open the season to-morrow with games in Thorndike and Three Rivers. Superintendent Hobson has taken a large interest in the matter, and the outlook is good for a warmly-contested series of games.

The league has adopted a set of rules as follows:

1. The league shall be known as the Palmer Grammar School League.
2. Each grammar school shall be represented by one team only.
3. The officers shall consist of a president, secretary, and a board of directors. The board of directors shall consist of one member from each school. The secretary shall attend all meetings of the board, but shall not be allowed to vote.
4. Every member of the team must be a pupil of the school that the team represents. The manager must present before each game a written statement from the principal to this effect.
5. No swearing or foul language shall be allowed. Any player indulging in such shall be removed from the game by the umpire. Removal for a second offense of this nature shall result in the player being suspended from the league during the present season.
6. Every player who unnecessarily kicks or continues to kick who indulges in rough play, or deliberately breaks the rules of the league, shall be removed by the umpire. A second offense shall cause the member expelled to cease to be a member of the team.
7. All protests shall be made by the captain of each team. Under no conditions shall a captain take his team off the field. If he does not secure satisfaction, in his opinion, he shall enter a formal protest with the president. The president shall call together the board of directors, who shall decide the matter upon its merits. The decision of the directors is final and must be abided by.
8. The president shall appoint all umpires.
9. The number of games and the schedule shall be decided upon by the directors.
10. Any team failing to appear ready for play within one-half hour after scheduled time shall forfeit its game to the team present.

The season's schedule is as follows:

- | | |
|--------|--|
| May 10 | Bondsville vs Thorndike at Thorndike. |
| May 14 | Palmer vs Thorndike at Palmer. |
| May 17 | Three Rivers vs Bondsville at Bondsville. |
| May 21 | Thorndike vs Bondsville at Bondsville. |
| May 24 | Palmer vs Thorndike at Thorndike. |
| May 28 | Thorndike vs Three Rivers at Three Rivers. |
| May 31 | Bondsville vs Thorndike at Palmer. |
| June 4 | Palmer vs Thorndike at Three Rivers. |
| June 7 | Three Rivers vs Thorndike at Bondsville. |

Every game must be started not later than 4.30 p. m. Whenever the managers can arrange an earlier hour for a game, such arrangement may be made, provided the hour is agreeable to both.

These officers have been chosen: President, Superintendent Clifton H. Hobson; secretary, John Moriarty of Bondsville; directors, George MacMahon, representing the Palmer school; James O'Dell, Bondsville; Bernard Loftus, Thorndike; Rex Rugles, Three Rivers.

School Exhibit Next Week.

Parents to be Given Opportunity to See Work Being Done.

The elementary schools of the town will hold an exhibition of school work in the various school buildings on Thursday afternoon, Friday afternoon and Friday evening of next week. An attempt will be made to give parents and citizens some idea of the work done in the schools the past year; also, to show how these results are accomplished.

An extensive display of the work in drawing, sloyd, and sewing will be shown. Specimens of work in arithmetic, grammar, history, spelling, geography, and penmanship will be in evidence. In all of these subjects, specimens of the pupils' work at the beginning of, during, and towards the end of the present school year will be shown.

In addition to this, in every room a special program will be carried out for the benefit of visitors. This program is designed to exhibit the regular school work—to show and not "show off" the regular school work. In the lower grades work in phonics, reading, story-telling, music, penmanship, and arithmetic will form the program. In the upper grades the program will consist of work in arithmetic, reading, spelling, music, penmanship, etc.

The school authorities feel that marked progress has been made in mental arithmetic and penmanship. These special programs will be in operation on both Thursday and Friday afternoons, beginning about 2 o'clock and continuing until the close of school. An especially warm and cordial invitation is extended to all who are or should be interested in the schools.

In order to afford the fathers and voters who are employed during the day an opportunity to see the work in penmanship and mental arithmetic, one room in each of the village schools will return on Friday evening for about an hour's work. This is an experiment. Not only does it offer an opportunity to the citizens to see the work, but also it affords one to determine just what real interest the citizens have in the actual schoolroom work.

Special invitations, written by the pupils, will be sent home to all parents. Much time and effort will be expended by teachers and pupils to make the exhibition a success, and no parent or citizen can afford to miss it.

Programs similar to these will be in operation:

Phone Warns of Brush Fires.

Lookout on Steeple Rock in Brimfield Spots Fires in Palmer.

Palmer fire fighters were warned last Saturday of a bad forest fire in Three Rivers from the state's watchman on Steeple Rock in Brimfield. The blaze was on Baptist Hill, originating from a fire started to burn brush under permit from Forest Fire Warden Summers of Palmer given to R. C. Newell of Three Rivers. Chief Summers took the auto truck and a few men, but found the fire a serious one and had to return for additional help. He had barely arrived in the village when word was sent that the fire was close to the house, and the truck and men hustled back as quickly as possible, managing to save the buildings.

While the truck was out on this trip Assistant Engineer Taylor was telephoned about a fire in the north part of the town. Investigation proved that this was a brush fire under control, a farmer having secured a permit to burn brush.

The work of the watchman on Steeple Rock is appreciated by the forest fire wardens and by property owners. Fires are located about as soon as they get a start, and by use of the telephone with which the station is equipped help is available much sooner than was formerly the case. Within five days last week five fires were located and reported within the town of Palmer.

NEW STREET CAR RULES.

Protection and Comfort of Passengers Aimed At.

COMPLAINTS OF CLOTHING DAMAGED

Bulky, Oily or Sticky Packages Not Allowed Now. No Dogs Unless in Boxes in Laps.

The conductors of the street railway have been busy the past two weeks absorbing the new rules and regulations which are now governing their running of the cars.

Of principal interest to the traveling public is the new regulation concerning bundles and packages on the cars. Heretofore almost any old thing was allowed to be carried on the cars, and many complaints were registered as a consequence. Passengers objected to having their clothes ruined by contact with pails of paint, and packages containing various sticky and dauby materials. The size of some of the packages was also a decided nuisance. This is now corrected by the new rule, which, in effect, is that nothing larger than the size of a dress suit case is to be allowed. The rule in its entirety reads:

"Passengers must not be allowed to carry bulky or dangerous packages aboard the cars and must not hang articles on the brake handles. Passengers will be permitted to carry with them only such small packages, and bundles as do not exceed the size of an ordinary dress suit case. Commodities of an oily or liquid nature, placed in open receptacle, will not be permitted aboard the cars. Such material must be placed in tightly closed packages and otherwise wrapped so as to avoid contact with the clothes of passengers or staining of car."

Dogs, animals and fowls are not allowed in cars unless in boxes or crates, and then must be carried by the passenger who has them, and every care will be taken to protect the rights and garments of other passengers. Bulky packages, such as large crates, bundles of lumber and bass violas are not carried under any circumstances.

There is also a new rule regarding children, the free fare age being lowered from 7 to 5 years. It is also provided that if a child under the fare age occupies a seat when passengers are standing a fare shall be collected for the child. The matter is left to the discretion of the conductor however, and he is to be governed by the conditions of his car.

Palmer Fire Truck Helps.

Called to Assist at Fire in North Wilbraham Monday.

The sand sifting plant owned by Dunn & McCarthy, opposite the Minnechaug farm at North Wilbraham, was completely destroyed by fire Monday afternoon about 1 o'clock, causing a loss of about $25,000. The origin of the blaze is unknown, but is supposed to have been caused by an overheated stove in the building. The fire had gained such headway when discovered that little could be done with the apparatus available. Help was at once called from Palmer and Springfield. The Palmer fire department responded with a hose and chemical wagon at 1.25 o'clock, and at 1.49 a fire engine from the Indian Orchard station and an automobile hose wagon from the Margaret street station, in Springfield, responded. It was impossible to check the flames and although the men fought all the afternoon the blaze was not completely extinguished until about 7 in the evening. The screening plant was a four-story wooden building, containing considerable machinery. It had not been used for some time, but Monday morning a fire was started in the stove. It is thought the stove became overheated, igniting the woodwork nearby. The building was 100 feet long by about 50 feet wide.

Found Dead On Road.

Wales Man Discovered Sunday Morning in Heart of Village.

Henry Cornell, about 60, who had been employed in the mills at Wales for several weeks, was found dead beside the road near the corner of Main and Church streets in Wales early Sunday morning. Death was probably due to alcoholism. Cornell was seen lying beside the road late Saturday night apparently intoxicated and he was moved to a place farther away from the highway by two men passing by. Early Sunday morning Edward Rood, watchman at the Germania mill, found him dead. The body was removed to the Wales town hall, where it was viewed by Medical Examiner Dr. J. P. Schneider of Palmer. It was later taken by a brother to Coxsack, N. Y., for burial.

WATCH FOR BRUSH FIRES.

Lookout Being Maintained by State on Steeple Rock.

MAN ON GUARD EVERY PLEASANT DAY

From Steel Tower on Top of Mountain Wide Section of Country is Carefully Searched.

It is probably not generally known—or has been forgotten—that on one of the highest points of land in the town of Brimfield—"Steeple Rock"—from about 8 in the morning until 4 or 5 in the afternoon of every pleasant day, a watch is kept for forest fires by a man stationed in a small room at the top of a tower built for that purpose. The job is not a "cinch" in any respect. The watcher is not expected to while away his time with reading, naps or any other diversion; instead he is expected to be on the watch every minute of the time so as to detect forest or brush fires as soon as possible after they start.

This is one of several stations established by the state forestry board; it was arranged for last fall but was not established until this spring. On the top of the mountain on which Steeple Rock is located, 1000 feet above sea level, a steel tower 30 feet high has been built. This tower is 12 feet square at the base and eight feet square at the top, contains a single room with large windows on each side. On a table in the center of the room is fixed a chart showing the locations of the several towns which can be seen from that point. Powerful glasses assist the eyesight of the watcher, who is expected to "spot" a smoke about as soon as it starts upward. Having discovered a fire he trains an arrow—mounted on a pivot in the middle of the chart—on the spot, and estimating the distance away is able to locate the blaze pretty accurately. He then calls up the nearest forest fire warden by telephone and notifies him of the trouble. The territory covered from Steeple Rock is a large one, the height commanding a view for many miles.

Last Saturday was a busy day on the tower, about 20 fires being seen. At one time they sprang up faster than the authorities could be notified. The watcher is George W. Sherman, on whose land the tower is built. He or someone responsible to him is on watch every pleasant day, but are not on duty foggy or stormy days. The station will be maintained until November at least, and the condition of the ground and the weather will determine the time of closing.

Dangerous Underpass Lighted.

Lights Installed at Blanchardville. Monsoon House Lights Better.

Two new lights are to be placed at the underpasses beneath the Boston and Albany tracks at Blanchardville by the Central Massachusetts Electric Co. Manager H. M. Parsons, to co-operate with the selectmen, has had the company stand the expense of lines to this point for the installation of the lights. These have been very dangerous places, and the installation of the lights should do much toward eliminating the hazard.

The company is receiving much favorable comment from Monson, where the complete installation of the "booster" transformers has improved the house lights. Both here and in all the towns served, Mr. Parsons is having the street lights patrolled by a man who repairs the damage as soon as found. This constant watchfulness should keep the lighting system in excellent condition. Mr. Parsons says that as soon as the arc lights are removed in Palmer there will be a noticeable improvement in the service.

Women Burned to Death.

Three Lost Their Lives in Tenement Fire in Gilbertville.

Three women were burned to death in a serious tenement fire in Gilbertville Saturday morning at 3.20 o'clock. They are Misses Rosie Zarodowny, 19, Victoria Mira, 17, and Zophie Swedens-kite, 22.

The fire was discovered by Joseph Bojdak, an occupant of the building, who awakened all the tenants, and then as both stairways were on fire, he was obliged to jump from the lower story of the fire escape and placed a ladder for the convenience of his fellow roomers. Both companies of the Gilbert Manufacturing Company responded to the alarm which was rung in, and the fire, which had gained much headway, entirely destroying the right side of the house, was quickly extinguished. Before the arrival of the firemen the occupants tried to save as

RECKLESS AUTO SPEED.

Fire Truck Nearly Run Down From Rear.

CLOSE CALL AT 50 MILES AN HOUR.

Car Whizzes By on Inside of Curve, Then Driver Complains Truck's "Recklessness."

Chief Summers of the fire department, with the auto truck and a crew of men, had a narrow escape from being run down from behind while on the way to a brush fire last Saturday, and on Tuesday the chief received a complaint charging him with reckless driving, the tone of the letter being decidedly "nasty" in view of the circumstances as related by the chief and the men with him.

The truck was answering a hurry call to the Graves farm on Baptist Hill, a fire which had been attended once by the men having broken out again and approached close to the house. Just west of the Overlook farm, while on a down grade and a left curve, with a reverse curve just ahead and the road in plain sight, Chief Summers, who was driving, was "letting her slide" along about 35 miles an hour. He had just reached the foot of the grade when a gray runabout flashed by on the inside, going at a speed which made the fire truck appear to be standing still. It missed the truck only by the narrowest kind of a margin, and the speed and the closeness made cold shivers run down the backs of the chief and those who grasped the situation, particularly a man who was standing on the running board of the truck on that side.

Tuesday morning Chief Summers received a letter dated at 87 Milk street, Boston, and signed by C. S. Stillman, charging the driver of the fire truck with reckless driving. The writer claimed that when he approached from the rear he signalled the men on the truck to let him pass; that the truck drew to the right and then, when he was alongside, suddenly drew to the left again, crowding him into the ditch. The writer said he had intended to protest to the chief of the department on his return through town Sunday, but was "informed that the fire department was closed." Nothing but a lack of time, he assured, prevented his stopping over to swear out a warrant on the charge of reckless driving.

Mr. Summers made careful inquiry of every man on the truck at the time, and found two who saw the gray car before it passed. One said that he saw it only when close to the truck, that he saw no signal of the driver and that a single blast of the horn was given when the car started to pass the truck. The other man saw it when it was about 20 feet distant. The speed when it passed was so great that none of the firemen were able to catch the number, but Chief Summers learned later that the car was probably the same which figured in a collision on Main street earlier in the day.

Wilbraham Academy Fund Swelling.

The first of a series of informal luncheons was held Monday at Cooley's Hotel in Springfield by former students of Wesleyan Academy at Wilbraham, and plans were discussed for the raising of money to build the new Academy. Of the necessary $40,000, $25,000 was raised. G. W. Douglass, the new principal, gave an enthusiastic talk, as did also Dr. W. R. Newhall, a former principal. Senator Winthrop Murray Crane and his brother, Zenas Crane of Dalton, each pledged $500 toward the $50,000 on the condition that it be raised by to-morrow and the trustees pledged collectively $7200.

"Um-hum!" the operator smiled. "That'll be a peach. It'll give you a nice big head and bring the forehead out beautifully! It'll quite hide your smile with your nose, which will be large enough for any modes

Something Had to Happen

If the Windlers' flat had been commensurate in size with the Windlers' popularity as evidenced by their wedding presents it would have been so big they never could have afforded to pay the rent.

It was an ideal flat for a family that was short on furniture and bric-a-brac, but it was a trial to people on whom their well meaning friends and relatives had showered ten times as much stuff as they could use up in the course of a normal lifetime. After nearly acquiring brain fever trying to dispose their possessions about the place without having their home look as though it was about to choke to death on a superfluity of furniture and miscellaneous wares they gave up and put three-quarters of their wedding gifts in the basement storeroom. Then their troubles began.

"Mercy!" Mrs. Windler cried one evening just before her aunt and uncle were due for dinner. "Jimmy, we'll have to get that carved oak hall chest up here before Aunt Cornelia arrives or she'll never forgive us! It cost a small fortune and she won't understand why."

The rest of Mrs. Windler's remarks were irrevocably lost in the tumultuous rush of the Windlers to the basement.

Mrs. Windler's pale rose gown was soon hopelessly soiled and Windler's temper was ruined for the whole evening, to say nothing of his cuffs. The hall chest was barely thumped into place with the help of the subsidized janitor and the Windlers were still breathing hard when Aunt Cornelia and Uncle Jabez arrived. The former peered sharply at her gift.

"Seems to me you don't do much dusting of your things," she said, rubbing a finger across the chest and leaving a deep depression in the grime that had settled on it in the storeroom. "Seems to me you don't care much about my gift, Louise!" When Aunt Cornelia rebuked one in that tone the situation was serious.

After the visitors had departed the chest had to be lugged down to the basement again, because there was no other place for the bookcase.

The two large paintings were the worst. When Cousin John's folks were coming the Windlers hung up the picture of the Lombardy poplars and the sheep. Then they took it down when the Philipsons were due and put in its place the picture presented by the Philipsons showing the garden scene. This worked all right until Sue Sanders, who could always be depended upon to say the wrong thing, burst out in the presence of all the Philipsons: "Oh, you've changed your pictures! Why, you have a new one! What did you do with the cute one of the sheep and poplars that has always hung right here till now?"

That threw a coldness upon the Philipsons that never was eradicated.

"They acted," stormed Mrs. Windler helplessly after they were gone. "as though it was our fault that we didn't have five walls in this room instead of four! I hate their old picture, anyhow!"

The silver, however, created the most trouble, because there was so much of it.

However, they knew they were using the wrong teaspoons the night the Smiths dined with them by the peculiarly cold manner in which Mrs. Smith regarded the ones at her plate.

They realized that they had made the wrong selection in silver bread plates when Uncle Hiram pointedly inquired who had given them the plate that they preferred to his gift. He said he had hoped when he devoted a week to selecting it that he had picked out something they really would like. Altogether, the Windlers had a terrible time smoothing down Uncle Hiram. They thought it odd that the more money a relative had the more easily and deeply his feelings were injured.

When any of the girls gathered at her house in the afternoon for cards Mrs. Windler nearly lost her mind. If she used Sadie's tea cloth instead of Amy's when Amy was present the latter was so hurt that it was painful, and if Angeline didn't see her cut glass vase anywhere about her eye brows speedily announced the fact.

"It isn't a home!" Mrs. Windler wailed one night. "It's the inside of a kaleidoscope! I'm so nervous for fear I'll get the wrong thing out when the right person comes—or for fear two of 'em'll land here together and pull each other's hair because one's gift is on view and the other's isn't that I'm a total wreck, Jimmy!"

"Cheer up!" said the haggard Jimmy, who was hastily changing a bronze head for a Barye lion, the Gettlers being due that evening. "It can't go on forever—something'll happen!"

It did. The building burned down while the Windlers were at the theater and they returned to ashes, glowing embers and complete desolation.

"All your lovely things, Mrs. Windler!" one of the neighbors mourned.

"All your perfectly lo-o-o-vely wedding presents gone! I don't see how you bear the blow so bravely!"

"Well," said Mrs. Windler, struggling heroically to conceal her happiness, "it is wrong to give way to one's feelings and, besides, there are always compensations in everything."—Chicago Daily News.

Harold W. Robinson has been appointed a member of the board of registrars of voters. He succeeds his father, Henry O. Robinson, who has served as a member of the board for over 25 years.

Officers of the Grip Coupling Company were elected Monday morning as follows: President, H. T. Merriam; clerk, H. W. Hill; treasurer, H. E. Jenks; directors, H. E. Jenks, E. A. Cudworth, H. W. Sibley, H. T. Merriam and H. O. Mooney.

Kathleen, the three-years-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Haley of Castle street, died Monday morning at the home of her parents after a short illness with spinal meningitis. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon and burial was in St. William's cemetery.

Senator John H. Schoonmaker has introduced a substitute bill calling for an appropriation of $10,000 for the improvement of the road between Ware and West Brookfield, which received a large vote in the Senate. This action was taken by Mr. Schoonmaker as a result of leave to withdraw having been reported on his previous bill asking for an expenditure of $25,000.

A recount of the vote cast for delegates-at-large on the Republican ticket at the recent primary was held Monday afternoon in the district court room, the recount being asked for by 15 voters in behalf of the Taft League of Massachusetts. It was held under the direction of Town Clerk E. P. Morse, Registrars Alton Bonnayer and H. W. Robinson, with William B. Kelley and Fred Sharpe Jr. as counters. Under the recount the group headed by W. M. Crane lost two votes and that headed by Baxter gained one. It was found that there were 45 instances of a voter marking the names of the regular Taft delegate and also that of Frank Sieberlich, while two voters marked for Sieberlich and the Roosevelt delegates.

Men Wanted At GOOD PAY

To Act as Salesmen

The demand for our goods is increasing.

The interest in New England fruits and farming is growing.

We haven't men enough to cover half the towns in the state of Massachusetts.

Inexperienced men are making over $20 a week, while our experienced men go as high as $40.

Our line is the most complete, our goods the highest quality, and our treatment of customers and salesmen the most liberal.

Let us write you about it at once.

Lon's Catch

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press)

Lon Herrick was up in the hills trapping that week. Therefore it chanced that out of the whole community at Three Cheers he was the sole male absent when Mrs. Buss arrived. She came without warning, even as a stray cat, and had settled herself in the inglenook of Three Cheers' heartsome hearth by the time Lon came back.

"She's a fine specimen of a woman, Lonnie," said Noonan tentatively, yet with a sort of submerged enthusiasm. "About thirty-eight, maybe."

"What did she come after?" asked Lonnie, who was a sober and cautious individual.

"To make a living, same as the rest of us. She's opened up a sort of home bakery."

"It's the first hook they put into us," said Lonnie. "Is she fat?"

"She's what an onlooker might call nicely distributed," said Noonan, blithely.

It happened that Lonnie was away most of the hunting season, and only came into camp at intervals. In the spring, when the water burst the ice on the rivers, he came home, and the long wait had only made Mrs. Buss more indifferent to his existence.

"Is that him?" she asked, when Noonan pointed him out, stalking leisurely up the main street of Three Cheers, his old coonskin cap, with its dangling tail, hiding his face from sight, his three hounds at his heels.

"The poor fellow."

"And why do you call him that, Mrs. Buss?" queried Dan, tenderly. "He's a fine figure of a man."

"I'm thinking what a lonely life it is he leads," said Mrs. Buss. "And dangerous, too, no doubt."

"The lumber trade is more so. I've been shaking hands with death all winter long and no body to sympathize with me."

"Go 'long, you artful creature," laughed back Mrs. Buss, merrily. "You haven't missed a day coming down here. Go tell Lon Herrick I want to see him."

"He won't come."

"Try him."

Dan carried the message and brought back the answer dutifully. It was simple and withal uncompromising.

"He says he does his own cooking," Mrs. Buss' lips set firmly and then parted in a laugh. And her answer was enigmatical.

"He doesn't know me," she said.

"Where do the trappers and hunters around these parts sell their pelts?"

"There's a fellow comes through about this time and buys them up—from Laramie. I can get his name if you want it."

"Get it," said Mrs. Buss.

About a week later Three Cheers was startled to find an announcement in Mrs. Buss' window. It stated that therein was the agency for Barclay & Burden, furriers, of Laramie, followed by a tempting list of prices for pelts.

Lon considered the situation from all points. It looked strategic to him, and yet he was a modest man, and knew not the limit of a woman's patience. Several times he spread out his season's catch and looked them over—deer, bear, fox, wolf, otter and coon skins. He resented Mrs. Buss' assumption of authority. It had been part of the yearly excitement, the visit of the buyer to his cabin, and the swapping of stories over the sale. Yet the second week after the sign appeared in the bakery window he went down to the camp bearing his catch with him and a look of resignation.

He had purposely chosen mid-afternoon for his visit. The other men would be up in the timber then. He wanted as few witnesses as possible. "Come right in!" called Mrs. Buss cheerily, as his long shadow fell across her threshold. She lifted a smiling, contented face from her knitting. "Why, hello, Lonnie," she said. "Got a pretty good catch there, haven't you?"

Lon said nothing, but he dropped the pelts.

"Shut the door, dear," added Mrs. Buss. "And don't get nervous. I'm not going to hector you a bit. Sit down and talk."

"Hadm't we better look the pelts over first?" asked Lon bewilderedly. "Plenty of time. I only took the agency so as to make sure you'd have to come here to see me. The day I got here, and found out you were away, I just switched round and changed my name and went to work. Lonnie, don't you get lonesome?"

"I do my cooking!" Lonnie started to explain, then out of the corner of his eye he caught a glimpse of the table with its freshly baked pies and cakes, and huge loaves of white bread.

"Not this kind. Mostly corn cakes and bacon."

"You could go hunting in the season," began Mrs. Herrick, late Buss. She glanced up, met Lon's eyes, and blushed slowly. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself to make me set all the traps. Why don't you say something?"

Then Lon rose awkwardly, and reached toward her.

"There ain't anything to say, honey," he laughed. "I never heard a caught creature that was given to conversation. You've got me alive."

Marriage is a desperate thing.

Boy Hit By Bridge.

Was Riding on Freight, But Little Can Be Learned of Accident.

A boy or young man who was riding on the top of a freight train going east between 5 and 6 o'clock Monday evening was struck by the Breckenridge bridge over the tracks east of the village, but whether he was hurt to any extent or not has not been learned here. There were four in the party, and as the train passed under the bridge the conductor of the work train, which was passing west, saw the boy struck by the bridge and knocked down. He signalled the conductor of the freight as the buggies passed, but the freight kept on east without stopping, and nothing more has been heard of the matter here.

The Red Marshes

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

Beyond the red marshes lay the sea, in the gray November days it was a tumbling sea, with the waves topped with white foam, and coming in heavily through the rusty marsh grass.

But it was at low tide that Marta's little dory slipped down the silver pathway of the streams that cut their way through the marshes.

Sometimes she met Sim Gregory coming back with lobsters from the early morning catch, and Sim would shake back his black lock, and would ask in his surly way, "What good things are you taking to your dad this morning, Marta?" and Marta would pipe up with her clear note, "It's fried clams."

For Marta's father worked on the new causeway, helping with his labor to make a permanent way to the rocky promontory which was cut off from the mainland at high tide.

Sim Gregory, or, as the people of the town called him, "Black Gregory," did not work on the causeway. He preferred the free method of earning his living in the sea. He sold his lobsters to the summer hotels, and in winter sent them to the city. Sim cared little for money. Perhaps that was the reason he had the name of being peculiar.

It was because Marta carried her father's dinner down the silver highway that Sim Gregory came through the marshes with his morning's catch rather than land at the docks in deeper water.

Sim loved Marta. Every day he brought her some offering from the sea. Sometimes Marta refused the gifts. "I can't take them," she said to Sim, one morning, as he held out to her a pair of shining mackerel.

"Why not?"

Marta looked away from him as she answered. "Mother says it isn't right. She wants—she wants me to marry Edward Pond, Sim."

Sim leaned far over and drew her dory close to his own with a strong hand.

"Marta," he said, with a sharp intake of his breath, "Marta, are you going to marry Ed?"

She shook her head. "No, no, I don't love him, but mother has set her heart on it."

"Why does she want to—sell—you?"

Marta raised her head quickly. "Don't you speak of it that way. Mother doesn't realize—she only thinks that Edward is prosperous."

That night the wind blew away the fog, but it also blew itself into a strong gale, which increased as the day advanced, until, at sunset, sky and water showed the blackness of a storm.

It was not until midnight, however, that the people of the town began to be afraid. Then it was learned that a half-dozen of the boats that had gone out early in the morning had not come back. The men from the life-saving station were on the watch, and fires were lighted and bells were rung.

Up and down the beach went the people whose sons and husbands and fathers were at sea. Mothers wept for their boys, children for their parents.

But nobody wept for Sim. Only Marta, straining her eyes through the blackness, hoped that he might be safe—that he might come back to her.

A shout went up, as somewhere, out in the leaping blackness, there shone a light like a star. The lifeboat, working its way against wind and wave brought back five men.

"Everybody is safe," said some one near Marta.

Marta, searching the bronzed faces, asked, "Did you—did you find Sim Gregory?"

"We saw him just as the storm broke," said one of the men. "We shouted, but he was too far away to hear us—we haven't seen him since."

All night long the life guards patrolled the beach. All night long Marta strained her eyes out to sea. When dawn came the eyes died, and the sun came up, rosy red above the horizon. And as it rose it showed far out on the tossing waters a black speck.

"It's a boat!" said Marta.

"And there's a man in it, miss," said one of the guards.

Then Marta fled homeward to hear the reproaches of her mother.

It was nearly noon when Marta went across the red marshes with her father's lunch.

When she met Sim Gregory she dared not look up.

"Marta," he called, and brought his boat close to hers, and his voice was eager as he spoke, "they told me, on the beach, that you waited all night for news of me."

She answered him as she had answered her mother, "Surely a man has right to have one heart cry out for him when he's at the mercy of the wind and waves."

"Did your heart cry, Marta?"

In spite of her self-consciousness, she told him the truth. "If you had died my heart would have died with you, Sim."

No one could have called him "Black Gregory" if they could have seen him at that moment. His face was melted into tenderness.

"I think I came back because you called me, Marta," he said. "There was one moment when in the blackness I lost hope, but something seemed to urge 'Marta's waiting,' and so—I came."

ALWAYS DEMAND FOR TEETH

One of Pawnbrokers' Best Lines, and Incidentally a Boon to the Poor of Big City.

A ghastly little heap of false teeth, both upper and lower sets, lay in a corner of the pawnbroker's window, amongst second-hand shoes, rusty flat irons, old clocks and so on.

"Any sale for second-hand false teeth?" the pawnbroker cried. "Why, no, there ain't a more saleable commodity going. I'll advance money on a good upper set of false teeth as quick as on a gold watch."

Just then an old woman in a dingy black shawl entered.

"Let me look at the false teeth in the window—an upper set," she said.

The pawnbroker, with a wink at the rep ter, brought out three double han. uls of teeth. These the poor old woman placed, one set after another, in her sunken mouth. The sixth set she pronounced a good fit. Paying for it with dimes and nickels out of a worn purse, she departed contentedly, the teeth wrapped in a piece of news-paper.

"Oh, I tell ye," said the pawnbroker jubilantly, "there's nothin' like second-hand teeth. I only gave 30 cents on that set, and I got one and a quarter for it. Not bad profits, hey?"

Motoring at Its Best.

Few motorists know of motoring in all its fullness. They drive along country roads for a hundred miles or so, through towns so closely set that they virtually run through one long village, and they think they have motored.

They cross the ocean and enjoy the perfect roads of France and Switzerland, and imagine they have experienced all there is in life in the motor car; but no one has ever been brought to a full realization of what motoring really is, or what the wonderful modern machine of man's creative genius is really capable of doing until they have sat in a racing car side by side with an expert driver and tasted the sport as it is under such conditions.

Lord Byron once wrote: "What a delightful thing is a turnpike road, such a means of speeding the earth as scarce the eagle in the broad air can accomplish." He certainly spoke in prophecy of the motor car, and especially of the racing machine, which defies distance and shrinks space into the most tiny proportions.—The Columbian.

The Rose Cure.

Roses, as a curative agent, are advocated for many of the aches and pains of life which frequently arise from overwrought or disordered nerves. It has been discovered that the rose will cure a headache. Its perfume acts as a medicine upon the nerves. Its color—particularly if deep red—soothes the senses, through the eyes, and its cleanliness and medicinal properties generally act upon the system not only as a curative, but as a tonic.

By using the Campbell Varnish Stain Graining process you can produce a fine effect over any old discolored floor. First apply the Ground Color, then the Surface, going over it with the Graining Roller; finish with Campbell's Varnish Stain, Light Oak or any desired shade. It wears like iron. Ask C. N. Ellithorpe about it.

SEED OATS

Since good and poor Oats look so much alike, and can only be told by an actual test,

HOW SHALL A FARMER KNOW
WHEN HE IS GETTING HIS MONEY'S WORTH?

The chances are that 80 per cent of the Oats offered for seed will not germinate over 30 per cent. In other words, seventy out of every one hundred seeds are DEAD, or too weak to grow a large crop.

WHITE MOUNTAIN BRAND PURE SEED OATS have been through several crucial tests and have shown that over 97 per cent will germinate—STRONG at that. Besides they are 99 per cent pure.

Another important feature is—at the selling price of $1.25 per bushel delivered to the farmer, they are not only the best, but the cheapest.

Sow WHITE MOUNTAIN BRAND SEED OATS this spring and learn for yourself.

Annual Meeting of Fire Department.

The annual meeting of the Monson fire department was held in No. 1 engine house Tuesday evening. It was voted to petition the selectmen for a raise in salary. At present the firemen get but $2 per year and 30 cents per hour for actual service. They will petition for $15 per year and 30 cents an hour for actual service. If this request is not granted by the selectmen the firemen will lay the matter before the voters at a special town meeting. It was also voted to have a turkey supper in the fall instead of the clam bake, which has been the custom for several years. It was voted to hold the annual concert and ball in January. The foremen of the different companies were elected as follows: Hook and ladder, Otto Ritter; chemical No. 1, A. B. Norcross; chemical No. 2, D. D. Meaney; hose No. 1, Henry Nobart Jr.; hose No. 2, D. D. Meaney Jr.; hose No. 3, William Bedard.

Small Blaze.

The fire department was called out at 11.15 o'clock Saturday night, the blaze being in the card room of Ricketts & Shaw's woolen mill on Bliss street. It was extinguished before any serious damage was done. The fire, which was due to spontaneous combustion, was discovered by the night watchman, who rang the mill bell and then ran to the nearest fire alarm box at the corner of Bliss and Main streets, only to find that the box was out of order. The condition of the box is said to have been caused by men working for the Central Massachusetts Electric company, who are changing over the lines and putting in new poles. The box had been removed to the new pole, but the mechanism had not been restored to it, and what is inexcusable is the fact that the fire engineers had not been notified of the condition.

May Hold Special Town Meeting.

It seems probable that a special town meeting will have to be held in the near future. The petition of the firemen for more pay may be one reason for a special meeting; the question of sewerage will also be brought up. At present this is a very important subject. The Legislature recently passing an act whereby the town was authorized to constitute a system of sewers, it is thought by many that there can be nothing gained by any delay and that the town should take immediate action. Another thing that will be brought up if a meeting is held will be an appropriation for spraying the elm trees, and also an appropriation for repairing and resurfacing several of the concrete walks for which no money was appropriated at the annual town meeting this spring.

Fool's Name Lives.

The last struggle of the Moors against the power of the Catholic kings has been the topic of many a romance and poem, and Boabdil, the misadventured rebel, the tool of men, the traitor, has become a hero at the expense of his brave father and still braver uncle, merely because it was he who surrendered the keys of Granada to Ferdinand and Isabella, and because as he looked for the last time upon the towers of the Alhambra, he stood "crying like a woman for the kingdom he could not defend like a man."

What a pitiful successor to the great Abdur Rahman Almoraz, or even Al Ahmar, the founder of Boabdil's house! Yet the average reader, if he knows of the Moors at all, knows of Boabdil. The great names of Moorish history have been forgotten that the name of the rebel and traitor may live.—H. C. Chestfield Taylor's "The Land of the Castanets."

Banks Guarded by Soldiers.

Like the Bank of England, the Bank of France is now guarded every night by soldiers, who do sentry duty outside the building, a watch being likewise kept inside its precincts. But within quite recent time the officials at the French bank resorted to a very novel method of protecting their bullion. This consisted in engaging masons to wall up the doors of the vaults in the cellar with hydraulic mortar as soon as the money was deposited each day in these receptacles. The water was then turned on and kept running until the whole cellar was flooded. A burglar would be obliged to work in a diving suit and break down a cement wall before he could even begin to plunder the vaults. When the bank officials arrived next morning the water was drawn off, the masonry torn down and the vaults opened. Curiously enough, within a few months after this obsolete manner of protecting the bank's cash was done away with, burglars did actually get into the vaults and decamp with about $45,000 in gold coin.—Strand Magazine.

The Broken Heart.

"The party will recover from this check," said Mayor Craig of Covington, apropos of a temporary setback. "They say the party will be broken. I'd reply that it will be about as much broken as young Lansing's heart."

"A chorus girl who had refused young Lansing said to a friend: 'I have broken his heart, I fear.'"

"You have. You certainly have, the friend replied, 'You've broken it right in half.'"

"In half? What do you mean?"

"I mean that he takes two girls' out to supper every night now."

Looking For A Hero

Mary Mastin was going to see the great football game between the home university and the Wisteria university. Her brother was a Wisteria alumnus of both the college of arts and the college of law. Being a romantic and ingenious young person of 18, Mary had informed Jim that she was sure going to fall in love with some football hero.

"The handsome Greek god, who, when all seems lost, saves the day for old Wisteria or the slender boy whom the rest thought too light for the game who gets around the end and scores for old Illigan, and when he doesn't rise where he fell in making the touchdown they find he has been playing the last quarter with a broken rib—oh, I shall fall in love with some one of them," said Mary, with dancing eyes.

"Bosh," said Jim, stolidly. "There were no handsome Greek gods on any team I ever saw."

"Well, there'll be one hero, certainly, and when he's carried off the field, suffering terribly, but not a word of complaint escaping his lips, and I'll send him some flowers and he'll bury his face in them, tears starting from his eyes."

"As the girls do in those fierce yards purporting to be college stories. To my notion a football game affords about as much chance for a real story as a game of chess," declared Jim. "I never read a football story that wasn't punk. Hi, look at that now!"

The visiting contingent of Wisteria undergraduates, 1,100 strong, headed by their band, was progressing around the track that encircled the gridiron, in an astonishing choragic dance. It was at once a cake walk, a minuet and gigantic quadrille. With their steps in ordered rhythm, their hands brandished aloft in triumphant gestures in unison with the cadence of their high lifted feet, they wound in and out.

"Why, it's charming. No, it's awe inspiring!" exclaimed the girl, looking through her field glass. "Who's that leading them? Isn't he handsome?"

"That's Bill Howard, the hottest alumni rooter of them all."

"And look at those people in the box down there! How excited they are! Alumni and their wives, of course. Isn't it fine to see the alumni so enthusiastic and loyal!"

"Alumni nothing," growled Jim. "That's a bunch of brokers with big bets on the game, probably on the visiting team, for fellows like that would be likely to back a university outside their own state."

Suddenly there burst forth from the bleachers where Wisteria students were massed a huge roar of inarticulate, mindless sound. The Wisteria team had hulked out on the field. All possible comeliness of face and form was hidden by the ungainly garb, so Mary hardly looked at the players. Her glass swept the line of yell-masters, picturesque, well-tailored slim youths, gay with ribbons, waving pennants in a frenzy.

"That one in the middle is such a dear," she said.

"That's Red Robertson," said Jim. "He roomed with me when he was a freshman and I a senior law. He's the head yell-master."

"Does he ever play?"

"Play? He's too pretty to play. A man who ties a necktie the way he does wouldn't play. He hasn't the beef, anyway."

"He's awfully graceful, and so quick. I know he could play if he wanted to."

Illigan won. It didn't matter much to Mary, for Red Robertson at the close of the game had sought them out, anxious to see Jim, though he hardly noticed Jim after he had been presented to Mary. He steered her through the multitude. Some football men passed. They moved heavily, awkwardly. Quick enough on the field in action, they seemed out of their element now, like crabs on land.

"Hackaday is bowlegged in his arms as well as in his legs, isn't he?" said Jim. "Good player, though. Where'd they get him?"

"Bill Hands, '96, when he was up hunting two years ago, saw him poling logs in the river, and got him down here," explained Robertson.

"Bill is the man who got Dike, too. Dike was driving a cab in Denver. A corking good alumnus, is Bill."

"What! Do colleges still hire professional players?" asked Mary.

"No. But there are still organizations called Alumni Students' Aid associations that loan money to men whom they want to see get a college education and the men they want to see do that are liable to be fine athletes."

"Are there no football heroes?" demanded Mary. "No boys who weep over the defeat of their team? Nobody for me to give my roses to for him to weep into?"

"Yes, there are some real students on every team and perhaps some day they'll all be real as they used to be in the old days. But the fellows who weep over defeat are mostly on the bleachers. I've lost a big bet and I'd like to weep. Won't you give me the roses?"

"It's a dreadful disillusionment," said Mary. "I meant them for half back, not a yell-master, but here are the roses."—Chicago Daily News.

Wit and wisdom are born with a man

Across the Aisle

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press)

"That's Eagle's Nest pass, now," said the man across the aisle, eagerly. "Mighty pretty in this sunset light, eh?"

Jess opened her eyes. She had been drowsing for the last hour. The view was gorgeous from the car windows. She leaned forward, and looked out at the great encircling mountains, the still, dark lake far below the track, the vast, outstretching distances beyond the pass itself. Somewhere over toward the golden sunset lay her brother's ranch, and the new life that had swept her out of the rut down east. After ten years of school teaching in the country, it seemed like enchantment that she should be out here, skimming over the last ridge of the Rockies.

"It won't be all easy work, Jess," Tom had written, "but I've got the upper hand of things here now, and I think you'll like it."

The man across the aisle was talking to his fellow passenger, a sleepy old man, who had been dozing comfortably, and refused to warm up to the glories of the scenery.

"I wouldn't give a hand's breadth of this country up here for all Manhattan."

"Where you from?" growled back the other.

"Deerfoot, sir. Finest section and richest out here. Come into the smoking compartment with me and let me tell you about it."

He rose impulsively, a tall, strong-limbed youngster, with all the vivid assurance and hope of the west in his face. Suddenly he hesitated and looked across the aisle at the girl there. Their eyes met. He almost smiled, and reached for a handbag in the upper rack.

"Could I leave this with you just while I step into the smoker?" he asked. "I won't be more than half an hour."

Jess bowed her head assentingly and he slipped the bag in beside her own suitcase on the floor. It seemed very heavy. After he had gone Jess threw her fur scarf over it and wondered who its owner was.

Not ten minutes later the train slowed up. There was the sharp hiss of air brakes. The wheels seemed to grate and grind along on the rails. Almost instantly shots sounded up forward. Some of the men passengers rose. Jess held her breath and wondered if, after all, she was not to reach her new life.

The doors at the end of the car swung open. Two masked, armed men entered.

"Hands up and shut up, and nobody'll be hurt," said one tersely. The other started systematically to search. At Jess' seat he reached for her suitcase and saw the girl had fainted. Her pretty head lay back on the roll top of the seat, white and death-like, and it checked him. He glanced at the suit case, back at her face, and passed on. Under her skirts rested the leather satchel unobserved.

When she came to some one was bathing her face in cold water.

"Plucky? Well, rather. That's better. It's all right now. We're on our way and the gang didn't get what it wanted after all," he leaned nearer; "thanks to you."

"I don't know what you mean," faltered Jess.

"Of course you don't, but I'm mighty obliged to you just the same. They passed by the smoker and missed me, and didn't look for my belongings in your seat, that's all."

"You mean the satchel?"

"You didn't try to lift it, did you? It's full of solid gold. I think you deserve to know, don't you? Do you mind if I sit here? We'll be into Eagle View in 20 minutes, and I leave the train there."

"So do I," said Jess, shyly.

"Where bound?" There was no mistaking his eagerness.

"To the Sawtooth ranch. It's my brother's."

"Tom McQuaid's? Why, we're neighbors. It's a queer little jiggler's ball that we dance on this world, isn't it? I'm Raleigh Sayres, superintendent at the Deerfoot works. Why, when I first spoke to you, and you looked at me, I—why, I just felt as if we must know each other. Don't you know what I mean?"

Jess' long dark lashes drooped downward.

"I know," she said. "I'm glad too, that you will be near—Tom."

"But do you know what you've done this day? Why, you'll be the heroine of the whole valley! We pay off in gold up there. So, well—the gold is in that satchel, and back yonder in the pass there's a band of train robbers wondering who gave the wrong tip that the Deerfoot money was to go through on this train. Do you see now? It rested safely right here under your blessed feet."

"But I fainted. I wasn't a bit brave," protested Jess.

"And made doubly sure thereby," he laughed.

The train was pulling around the last mountain curve into Eagle View. He helped to slip her long cloak about her and fold the dark furs close about her throat. Then he reached down for the satchel and her suit case.

"I think Tom will meet me," said Jess, demurely. "But you may come, all the same—soon."

WHAT FOZZLED THE NEWSBOY

He Didn't Understand Primary Cause of Trouble, but Motorman Could Have Told Him.

It was a very busy hour on Forty-second street, and the traffic "cops" were having their hands extremely full, relates the New York Sun. Just as things were starting along, after a complicated blockade, a little newsboy dropped a quarter, and darted out into the street after it, under the nose of a motorman who had just started his car.

The indignant motorman threw on the brakes with a jerk. As the car came to a sudden stop an automobile directly behind it turned sharply to one side to avoid a collision. It skidded, the hood coming under the startled noses of a pair of dray horses. One of the front tires blew up with a loud report.

This was too much for the horses, and they jumped forward together. In another minute the heavily loaded dray was careening down the sidewalk, the people scattering in terror.

A lamp post was knocked over, and the dray, thrown violently in the other direction, upset, flinging a couple of heavy boxes through a brilliantly lighted display window.

The broken electric lights fizzed for a minute, then the flimsy trimmings of the window caught fire, and in a few minutes the clanging of the fire department was added to the uproar, and the crowd extended for a full block in either direction.

When the fire was out, and the wreckage was being cleared away, the newsboy, with his quarter safe in his pocket, turned away and started down the street, murmuring to himself: "Gee, I wonder what began all that fuss!"

Good Mental Tonic. As appearance means so much to the average woman, mentally as well as socially, the question often arises, "Is she justified in aiding or improving nature if she sees fit?" Many of our well-known medical men think that "make-up" is as good a mental tonic as anyone can take, and greatly advise its use, especially for the girl who has some slight personal defect—a scar, a poor complexion or bloodless lips, for the knowledge of her defects makes her shy and oftentimes sulky and miserable.

Lifting Fire Hose by Elevators.

The latest idea for raising water for fire-extinguishing purposes to the uppermost floors of tall buildings is to lift the hose by means of the passenger or freight elevators. A simple attachment is provided for affixing the hose to the floor of the elevator, the pipe being coiled up in the bottom of the shaft so as to be easily raised.

In a recent demonstration at Memphis, Tenn., says Popular Mechanics, it was said that the water arrived at the sixth floor of a building practically as soon as the floor was reached by the elevator, and the fire chief of that city recommended the compulsory adoption of the device by all buildings provided with elevators. The hose is inserted in the attachment about two sections behind the discharge nozzle, these sections being coiled on the elevator floor.

Keep Hope Alive. Never abandon hope. Remember that no earnest effort is ever lost. Get away from the habit of looking on the dark side. Nothing will so completely paralyze the creative power of the mind as a dark, gloomy, discouraged mental attitude. It keeps multitudes of people from obtaining the very things they most desire.

The Palmer Journal.

VOLUME LXIII.

PALMER, MASS., FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 17, 1912.

NUMBER 7.

OFFICIALS CRITICISED.

Judge Dillon Scores State Inspectors of Weights.

DISCRIMINATION IN PROSECUTIONS?

Rumored That Many Violations Were Found Recently, But Only Two Prosecutions Brought.

Two Polish merchants from Bondsville were before the district court on Monday charged with violating the laws of the commonwealth regarding weights and measures. One was charged with using an unsealed scale. He admitted this, but stated that it was a new one, costing him $125, which he had just installed to take the place of one costing $75 less than a year ago which he had been forbidden to use; the installation was so recent that he had not had time to get it tested and sealed. The other was charged with using an unsealed scale, and also with selling a quart of beans—the common "Boston baked" kind before they are baked—by liquid measure instead of by weight. The complaints were brought by representatives of the state sealer of weights and measures.

Representatives of this official were in town last week, and it is currently reported that they caught "almost everybody" in some way or other. Not that the dealers are willfully using wrong weights or measures, but that in some little thing they were "lame," especially in connection with the requirements of the new law passed March 14 and in effect April 15. In view of this situation Associate Justice Dillon, who was on the bench, took occasion to express his opinion of the manner in which the law was being enforced. After stating his full sympathy with an impartial enforcement of the laws intended to secure to the purchaser a full value for the price paid, he intimated that the actions before him seemed not to reflect credit either on the state or the department represented by the complainants. It was evident that the standing of the offender made a difference as to prosecutions, and it is this kind of law enforcement which makes Anarchists of good people. In view of the recent inspection and the reported number of violations found it was strange that only two delinquents appeared in court, and both should belong to the class least familiar with our laws and language and least expected to know what is expected of them. He also commented on the harshness of prosecutions brought under the circumstances under a law which was not passed until March 14 and became a law only April 15, and of which he himself was ignorant until shown a printed copy of it in court. In no uncertain terms he announced that any effort to select certain ones to be made examples of, allowing the rest to go, would not meet with the favor of the court so far as he had authority in it.

At the end of the arraignment of their tactics the inspectors had not a word to offer, but after court had adjourned they made the statement privately that until recently they had confined their work to efforts to induce the local inspectors of weights and measures to enforce the law, but as this had failed they had now taken it upon themselves. They realized that the job of securing satisfactory evidence against all offenders was difficult, but were making an effort to impartially enforce the law.

The two men complained of pleaded guilty to two counts each. Each was fined $5 on one count, the other being continued until December 1.

New Electric Lines.

High Tension Lines to Several Towns, With Other Improvements.

The Central Massachusetts company is making arrangements with the contractors for the building of high tension lines to, and low tension distribution systems in the towns of Granby, East Longmeadow, Brookfield, West Brookfield and Warren. Franchises have recently been secured in the first four towns by the new management of the company, and the work of building systems there has to be done from the beginning. In Warren and West Brookfield the distribution systems are to be improved and the present low tension supply lines replaced by high tension feeders which will cause a vast improvement in the service. The work of improvement here has resulted in much favorable comment. Manager Parsons states that a number of people have expressed their appreciation of the tungsten cluster street lights which are replacing the old arcs.

Maj. and Mrs. John Anderson found on their return from Europe Saturday that their house had been entered during their absence. Entrance was gained through a window in the ell part. Every room in the house had been ransacked. The house was filled with choice bric-a-brac and articles of value, with souvenirs of the Civil war of value to a retired army officer. A bag of valuable and rare coins was among the things taken.

The new spraying outfit for which $1500 was appropriated at the annual town meeting, arrived this week. It is composed of a large tank, with a gasoline engine and pump in the rear, which has sufficient power to throw a spray over any tree in town. The apparatus is mounted on a heavy running gear with four-inch tires and is designed to be drawn by a pair of horses.

There was an exciting runaway on Main street Tuesday morning between 7 and 8. A horse owned by John Nevins, who lives about two miles south of the village, had been hitched to a democrat wagon and John Geraty, accompanied by Lena Nevins, the eight-years-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nevins, made a start for the village. While a short distance from the house and going down a steep hill, the harness gave way and let the wagon on to the horse. The driver turned the horse into the gutter to stop him, but the wagon was overturned, throwing out its occupants. The horse with the wagon continued toward the village, passing through Washington, East and Main streets toward West Warren. In passing Main street he narrowly escaped hitting several teams. At or near West Warren the horse turned around and started back, but in the square he turned sharply under the railroad bridge, where the wagon came in contact with an electric light pole and did not go any further. The horse was stopped on Southbridge street by James Dailey, after he had made a run of about seven miles. The wagon and harness were badly demoralized, but otherwise there was little damage, although on the return the square was filled with milk wagons.

ANNOUNCE A STRIKE.

Central Mass. Employees Call On Manager Saturday.

MR. PARSONS TREATED TO A SCARE

Men Threaten to Quit, Then Present Him With Valuable Reminders Of Birthday.

Manager H. M. Parsons of the Central Massachusetts Electric company faced the problem of a strike of his entire construction gang last Saturday evening, and that too just as he needed every man he could get for the new construction work in the towns nearby where the company has recently secured franchises. The men presented themselves in a body and the spokesman began his "tale of woe." He made things look pretty black for a time, but was unable to keep up the farce very long and the smiles broke through, then broadened to a whole ocean of merriment and good feeling as he presented Mr. Parsons with a handsome gold stickpin and pair of gold cuff buttons, all set with diamonds, as tokens of good will from the employees in remembrance of the birthday of "The boss."

DEAD AT AGE OF 102.

Decease Of Brimfield's Oldest Resident Saturday.

ALWAYS LIVED IN THIS VICINITY.

Mrs. Laura Griggs Moore, health and faculties wonderfully preserved To Year Ago.

Mrs. Laura Griggs Moore, who passed her 102d birthday April 16th, died Saturday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Sanford Booth, in the Dunhamtown district of Brimfield. Mrs. Moore suffered a shock last June, but was not confined to her bed until last November, when she was prostrated by a severe cold, from the effects of which she never recovered.

Up to last June Mrs. Moore's health and faculties had been wonderfully preserved and on her 100th birthday she received calls from friends throughout the day. She was always a very industrious woman and kept employed with various kinds of handiwork until her health failed. The last work she was able to do was the braiding of rugs a little more than a year ago.

Mrs. Moore was born in Union, Ct., April 13, 1810, and was the daughter of Elisha and Sara (Booth) Griggs. Her father was the eldest of the 14 children of Joseph Griggs, who removed from the Rockmeadow district in Union to Brimfield in 1800. Elisha remained in Union while others of the family went with their father to Brimfield and had homes and reared families in that town. The marriage of Laura Griggs to Dexter Moore of Union took place July 4, 1839.

The couple lived in Staffordville and afterward returned to Union. There Mr. Moore was killed November 5, 1884, by falling on to the circular saw in his saw-mill. Mrs. Moore lived with her son, Malone Moore of Stafford Springs, after her husband's death until about 12 years ago, since which time she had made her home with her daughter in Brimfield. It was at the time of her changing her residence that Mrs. Moore traveled alone at the age of 90 to visit relatives in New York state, a trip that necessitated changing cars three times.

Mrs. Moore joined the Congregational church in Union as young woman and maintained her relationship there, so that she had been a member of that church for 80 years. Mrs. Moore was endowed with a cheerful disposition and a sense of humor which caused her conversation even when a centenarian to be enlivened by playful remarks.

Mrs. Moore leaves three children. They are Ellen A., the widow of Sanford Booth of Brimfield, Malone G. Moore of Stafford Springs and Emerson O. Moore of Sidney, N. Y. There are seven grandchildren, Charles and Miss Ethel Moore of Stafford Springs, Herbert Moore of California, Elmer E. Booth of Brimfield, Mrs. Nathan Bradley of Wales, Milo D. Booth of Jamaica Plain and Milton S. Booth of Palmer. There are three great-grandchildren, the children of Milton Booth of Palmer.

May Stop Limited Electrics.

Springfield - Worcester East Cars Not Profitable, 'Tis Said.

Announcement is made by the officials of the Springfield street railway company that the Springfield-Worcester limited cars, which have been run through the summer for the past three years, may not be put on this year, the reason being that the patronage has not proved sufficient to warrant the expense. Two trips daily have been run in each direction, the cars leaving Springfield at 9.30 a. m. and 2.30 p. m., and making the trip to Worcester in three hours, against three and a half for the regular cars. The cars used on the limited have been finely upholstered, with broad windows, but carry a small number only. In the summer the regular cars are open, and carry 75 people, and it is thought these can take care of the traffic without inconvenience to passengers.

Palmer Bowlers Winners.

Carpet Mill Team Defeats Worcester Team. Baseball Match Next.

The bowling team of the Whittall carpet mill journeyed to Worcester last Saturday evening to try conclusions with the Worcester team of the same company, and was victorious by a margin of 37 pins. The match was rolled on the White & Monsey alleys, and was followed by a banquet at the Putnam & Thurston hotel, there being 17 in the party. Richard Beams of Palmer acted as toastmaster, and Arthur Brotherton presided at the piano. Michael Hopkins, captain of the Palmer team, issued a challenge to the Worcester aggregation for a baseball series of three games, the first to be played in Palmer, and the dates to be arranged later by the captains. There has always been a strong rivalry between the two mills as to which had the best material in the line of sports, and as Palmer has beaten the Worcester team twice in bowling, some hard work in baseball may be expected. EAST BRIMFIELD.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lombard moved to Nashville, Tenn., last Tuesday, where they will live with their son, Homer Lombard. Mr. Lombard about three months ago resigned as night watchman for the Snell Mfg. Co., where he has been employed for the past four years. Before he became night watchman he tempered all of the tools the Snell Mfg. Co. manufactured here in East Brimfield and he held that position for about 20 years. Mr. Lombard is 73 years old and his wife is 70 years. They will be greatly missed from the little Congregational church on the hill, directly opposite which Mr. and Mrs. Lombard have lived for the past 34 years. Mr. Lombard was the Elder Deacon here and Mrs. Lombard was a Sunday school teacher.

John McBride has broken ground for his new house on Central street.

NEW MARKET LAW.

Numerous Wares Changed From Measure To Weight.

QUART OF STRING BEANS IS 12 OZ.

Peanuts, Greens, Peas, And Numerous Other Saus Must Be Weighed Or Counted.

It is not generally known, but the present Legislature has decidedly "upset" the long established method of measuring by which many commodities have been sold for years, and that hereafter numerous things which were formerly sold by the quart, peck or bushel are now sold legally only by the pound. The new law was enacted March 14 and went into effect 30 days later. It reads as follows:

All fruits, vegetables, and nuts, as herein-after otherwise provided, shall be sold at retail by dry measure, weight or by numerical count, and all fruits and vegetables for which a legal weight has been established shall be sold at retail only by weight or numerical count. Whoever violates any provision of this section shall forfeit a sum not exceeding $10 for each offense.

Under this statute a large number of fruits and vegetables are transferred from the peck or quart to the pound method of selling. Included in the list are peas, greens, apples, beets, etc. If mama wants a quart of beans for Saturday's baking, Mamie or Willie, if sent to the store for them, doesn't get a tin or wood measure heaped full and emptied into a paper bag. Instead, if the grocer—if he lives up to the law—weighs out 30 ounces and collects the quart price. Shell beans are listed at 14 ounces to the quart, and string beans at only 12. Beet and dandelion greens must be sold by the pound, and 6 ounces are considered equivalent to a quart; no mention is made of cowslips. The toothsome peanut, so much in demand, if roasted, counts 10 ounces to the quart.

The law, as quoted above, favors no one, and peddlers of "garden truck" are expected to provide themselves with scales and a knowledge of how much they must give of each vegetable or fruit when a quart or peck is demanded by the customer.

Entertainment Course.

Arrangements Being Made For Fine Array of Talent Next Fall.

It has been a long time since the citizens of the town have had an opportunity of attending a course of entertainments of a high order, but unless all plans fail they will be given such a privilege next fall. A number of citizens interested in the matter met in the high school building Tuesday evening to consider the proposition and to make plans. After discussing the situation thoroughly it was decided to arrange for a course next fall, the dates and talent to be selected later. An organization was effected as follows: President, Clifton H. Hobson; secretary and treasurer, Louis E. Chandler; H. M. Howe. The following committee was chosen to select the talent: Clifton H. Hobson, Dr. H. C. Cheney, Dr. G. A. Moore, Rev. Otto S. Raspe, Samuel Stewart. They are to hold a meeting this evening and the definite selections will be made early next week. It is the plan of those interested to provide entertainments of a high order, even though few in number, rather than a larger number of lighter calibre; of offering something educational and instructive as well as pleasing. It is planned to make course tickets only $1 and those interested are sanguine that the project can be made a success along these lines.

Death of Miss Margaret Collins.

Miss Margaret Collins died at her residence on Central street Wednesday forenoon at 11 o'clock after an illness of pneumonia. Miss Collins was born in County Cork, Ireland, but came to this country about 45 years ago. She went first to Otisco, N. Y., but after three years there came to Palmer, where she had since lived. She leaves three sisters, Mrs. Catherine Connell, living in Ireland, Miss Ellen Collins of Syracuse, N. Y., and Miss Esther Collins of Palmer. Funeral services were held this morning in St. Thomas' church, with burial in St. Thomas' cemetery.

Hampden House And Barn Burned.

The house and barn owned and occupied by David P. Brown in Hampden were completely destroyed by fire Tuesday afternoon, as was also most of the furniture. The fire is supposed to have started from a defective chimney. Mrs. Brown and some of the children were away from home at the time. It is understood that the insurance on the building had expired, and the fire has left the family quite destitute. The loss is estimated at about $1500.

An auto party, consisting of Phillip Powers, Charles Tift and James Smith of Springfield, spent the week-end at the Brimfield hotel. They report fine fishing.

A Springfield party of about 40 chartered a car and came to Brimfield one evening this week, stopping at the hotel for supper. Music was furnished by the Hitchcock Free Academy orchestra.

George K. Hitchcock, the rural mail carrier, had a narrow escape Thursday, when his horse became frightened by the music of the Hitchcock Free Academy band. The horse started for Warren at a good clip, throwing Mr. Hitchcock very heavily to the ground as he was just getting into his team. The animal continued toward Warren until it came up against a tree head-on, bruising its head quite badly and breaking both shafts. It was then taken in charge before it could do any more damage.

Wanted to Sell Her Leg.

Willing, she asserts, to sacrifice a finger, foot, arm or leg in an effort to relieve her poverty, a woman, whose name was not divulged, living in Govans, has written to the physicians of Franklin Square hospital with an unusual and pathetic appeal for financial assistance.

The letter conveys, say the physicians, a sad story of much suffering as the result of poverty by a woman who was once in good circumstances, but who has recently been reduced to abject destitution. She named no specific price for her sacrifice, according to the doctors, but asked for an early reply if her offer was to be considered. The only restriction that she made was that her name be kept a secret.—Baltimore Evening Sun.

BOUND TO LAND SOMEWHERE

Mr. Manheim's Roundabout Way to Find Some Place Where He Could Get "Rights."

There may be a little exaggeration in this bit of alleged court news from the Troy Times, nevertheless, the tale rests upon the important fact that wives need no longer complain that the law fails to protect them against their husbands. The "rights" of women in this respect seem more secure than the "rights" of men in the corresponding case.

Simon Manheim, holding ice to the side of his head appeared in court and commanded a summons for Mrs. Manheim.

"I am a good husband," explained Simon, "but my wife is peevish. See what she will do to me."

The clerk expressed sympathy at the state of Mr. Manheim's eye, but declined to issue the summons. "This court," said he, "is for women that are not supported by their husbands. Go up-stairs to the police court."

Mr. Manheim went up-stairs. The magistrate looked at him coldly. "This court is for wives who are abused by their husbands," he said, "not for husbands who can't take care of themselves."

Mr. Manheim, obviously puzzled, started downstairs again. He called on the clerk of the court of domestic relations. "Aber I don't take care of mine wife, do you git me?" he asked.

"We surely do," said the clerk. "Here's where you do full justice to women, but we don't care a white bean for men."

Mr. Manheim started out. In an hour he was back in the police court under arrest, but with an air of mental repose. The magistrate wanted to know the charge against Manheim.

"He threw a stone through the window of the Woman's Rights Clubroom," said the policeman.—Youth's Companion.

Financier Insists on Rest.

There is a celebrated financier in Wall street who can never be got between three and four o'clock of any fine, warm, sunny autumn afternoon. He will not even see more celebrated financiers then. The great public is told that he is "very busy." But to intimates there is no secret about it.

Regular callers ask for Mr. So and So and then watch the office boys. One listens at the private office door. Another listens at the telephone board. "Can you hear him?" asks the boy at the door. "He's not stirring." "Yes, I hear him," replies the office boy at the switchboard. "He's still snoring. It's very clear today."

The financier sleeps in the sun which pours through a great window. His bed is a long couch. Near it is a telephone with receiver down.

Before he sleeps he takes off his boots. When the office boys hear him bustling around to put on his boots they know that in a few minutes callers may get their names sent in.

When a King is Ill.

And there is this curious psychological fact to be remembered: A serious illness or a death advertises the doctor exactly as a hanging advertises the barrister who defended the person hanged. Suppose, for example, a royal personage gets something wrong with his throat, or has a pain in his inside. If a doctor effects some trumpery cure with a wet compress or a peppermint lozenge nobody takes the least notice of him. But if he operates on the throat and kills the patient, or extirpates an internal organ and keeps the whole nation palpitating for days while the patient hovers in pain and fever between life and death, his fortune is made. Every rich man who omits to call him in when the same symptoms appear in his household is held not to have done his utmost duty to the patient. The wonder is that there is a king or queen left alive in Europe.—G. B. Shaw, "The Doctor's Dilemma."

Finds Profit in Toys.

A woman, who, after five years of married life found herself with an invalid husband and no source of income, made toys, such as she had seen in Germany, and a good market was found for them in the department stores. She showed the toys first to children and profited by their comments upon them. She says dolls are especially profitable.

WHEN HER BACK ACHES

A Woman Finds All Her Energy and Ambition Slipping Away

Palmer women know how the aches and pains that come when the kidneys fail make life a burden. Backache, hip pains, headaches, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, all tell of sick kidneys and warn you of the stealthy approach of dropsy or Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only. They attack kidney diseases by striking at the cause. Here's proof of it in a Palmer woman's words.

Mrs. A. Sherman, 24 Park St., Palmer, Mass., says: "All I said in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills when I publicly recommended them in August, 1908, still holds good. It would be hard to fully describe the misery I endured from kidney complaint. I was rarely free from a dull bearing down pain in my back, and I was subject to chills and dizzy spells. My head ached, my appetite was poor and I had a feeling of languor. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I obtained a box at Lynde & Gould's drug store, and they helped me from the first. As I continued taking them I steadily grew better until my trouble was a thing of the past."

BACKACHE NOT A DISEASE

But a Symptom, a Danger Signal Which Every Woman Should Heed.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Woodall's experience.

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-Page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it to-day. Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

He Came Back

Willaber heard the door of his private office open and was conscious that some one had crossed the room and stood at his elbow, but he finished what he was writing without looking up. Then when he had carefully blotting the line he swung about in his chair. A thickset man with a pale face and close-cropped hair stood before him nervously twisting his hat. "Dick!" cried Willaber. He sprang from his chair, grasped the visitor's hand and shook it warmly.

"So you remember me, do you, Fred?"

"Remember you? As if I could forget you! Why, man, there has not been a day for the last two years that I have not thought of you!"

"Yes, it has been two years. Two long—"

"Say, do you remember Knowlson's white cherry tree? And Lents' peach orchard? I certainly am glad to see you again! Sit down. You must go to lunch with me! I want to talk over old times! Say, was there a worse pair of boys in the whole village than we were?"

"The neighbors didn't think so, Fred. But I don't want to talk over these times."

"How does it happen—"

"The governor made me a present of a pardon. I was turned loose New Year's morning."

"Well, isn't that fine! It was a shame you were ever imprisoned. I knew you were not guilty. You couldn't be."

"Yes. I was guilty, Fred."

"You—what?"

"Yes," said the other, a note of hopelessness in his voice. "I only got what was coming to me."

"Why, Dick!"

"Well?"

"I—I am sorry. But never mind, you are free now. You will never do such a thing again."

"Do you believe that?"

"I know it! Have you seen your wife?"

"It was the first place I went, of course."

"Have you told her?"

"That I was guilty? Yes."

"How old is the little girl now?"

"Claribel is three now."

"That's great! And you're going to start all over again and the three of you will be just as happy as those in a barrel."

"That is what I came to see you about, Fred."

"I'm mighty glad you thought of me the first thing. Tell me what I can do."

"I answered an advertisement for a place in a grocery house this morning, and the job has been promised me provided I can get a letter of reference. I asked if a letter from you would do, and the manager told me it would be as good as gold. The place will be held open until noon."

"Did you tell him—"

"That I had been a convict? You don't understand. That would queer me in a minute. I have got to have a chance to prove that I am on the square before I let that be known."

"I—see."

"You will recommend me, Fred?"

"What can I say?"

"Don't you believe me to be honest?"

"I certainly do."

"Then, you'll do it! By George, you always were the squarest—"

"It wouldn't be right."

"Oh, well, I suppose you know best. I was a fool to hope that you would help me. You are like all the rest. A man whose foot has slipped ought to reform and lead an upright life and all that sort of thing, but you won't help him do it. But I'll show you!"

"Show me what, Dick?"

"Show you that I will make good in spite of you and your kind."

"Wait a minute, old friend—"

"Wait? To hear a sermon and get a package of advice? No, I'll go home and tell Nellie that the old friendship from which I had hoped for so much never really existed. I must make my own chance."

"I don't want to preach to you, old boy. Here, let me read you what I was writing when you came in: 'Wanted—Assistant to superintendent in large factory; must furnish references; apply at office of Wilfred A. Willaber.' Do you see, Dick? I couldn't ask others to do what I wouldn't do myself. That ad was going into tomorrow's paper, but I believe I'll tear it up now."

"Fred, you don't mean—"

"Can you go to work tomorrow, Dick?"

"Fred, I—"

"That's all right. I think I am mighty lucky to get a man I know and can trust. Come, put on your hat and go to lunch. Do you know, only yesterday I was thinking of you, and the time you got hung up by the trousers in Knowlson's cherry tree!"

Ring Seems to Be Real Hooodo.

The head of the Paris Morgue is responsible for the statement—and it is vouched for by the late chief of the Paris police—that five times within his experience dead bodies brought to the morgue were found to be wearing a ring of Oriental make, and bearing these words in Oriental characters: "May whosoever wears this ring die a miserable death."

Men's League Annual.

A Beefsteak Supper Served—Officers Elected—Plans Made.

The Men's League of the Congregational church held its annual meeting in the vestry of the church Wednesday evening. A beefsteak supper was served, and after this had been given due attention the business meeting was held, the members sitting around the tables. These officers were elected: President, Clifton H. Hobson; vice president, Alfred Swann; secretary, Theodore Norman; treasurer, Rufus Flynt; executive committee, F. A.
Smith and A. L. Roper, and the officers. Plans for the coming year were discussed, each member in turn giving his views as to the best means of enhancing the work of the club in the future. The meeting was the last of the season, no more being held until fall.

In the discussion of the prospective work of the league it was decided that more and better work could be done by affiliation with other church organizations of a similar nature in the village, and it was voted to attempt a federation of such to work for the civic and social betterment of the town.

Local Sunday School Activities.

Local supporters of the religious institutions should be interested in the new activities of the District Sunday School Association, of which Rev.
Frank S. Brewer of Palmer is president. For the first time in many years a working constitution has been prepared by the executive committee, adapted particularly to immediate conditions. This will be submitted to the 47 schools of the district for their consideration. A scheme of visitation has been inaugurated. Already the schools of North and West Brookfield have been visited. Next Sunday the schools of Belchertown will hold a conference which is to be officially conducted by a district representative. Other invitations will be accepted as soon as possible. The expense of this visitation is being met through special contributions made by a few persons who value this form of Christian service.
The interchange is in line with the policy of the State Association and is important in the large acquaintance secured, the closer affiliation of the schools, and the increased intelligence in methods and teaching. While the summer vacations will soon defer greater activities the executive committee is already considering the features of the September convention, and it promises to be attractive and valuable.

The Missing Suitcase

"I know you had a perfectly delightful time at your house party," said the girl who was calling.

"Indeed, we did," said the hostess. "It is too bad that you could not be there."

"I was heart-broken because I had to miss it. But tell me everything. I want particularly to hear about the girl your brother is engaged to."

"Oh, Alice. She's the dearest thing!"

"Nice looking?"

"She's a dream! Tall and slender and willowy."

"One of the staid and dignified type?"

"Not at all. That was what we feared, but she's nothing of the sort. I laughed so much during the week she was here that if I never laugh again I can't complain that I haven't had my share."

"You might pass round some of the fun."

"Well, you know it is not a long journey here from Middle Junction, where Alice lives, so she decided not to bring a trunk."

"Not bring a trunk?"

"No, she decided to put everything in her brother's suitcase."

"But what in the world can a girl get into a suitcase?"

"You would be surprised to know all that Alice got into that suitcase. It must have been as big as a box-car."

"Didn't you see it yourself?"

"Indeed I didn't. That is the part that is so funny. She sent the suitcase over to the checking room at the railroad station and then she went around and gathered up the other stuff she wanted to bring. There was an armful of gifts for the children and things of that sort. Then she thought she would bring a dozen oranges. So when she climbed aboard the train, with her cloak and her umbrella and her oranges and her suitcase, she was pretty well loaded down."

"There was not enough room in the rack over her head for all her belongings, but she turned one of the seats over and piled most of her plunder on the seat opposite her. The suitcase she slid in between the two seats which were back to back. After a while she leaned her head on something and went to sleep."

"Well, when Alice's train pulled into the station Alice woke up, put on her hat and gathered together her thousand and one belongings, then she reached in between the two seats for her suitcase, and withdrew her hand full of empty air. She stopped over and looked—the suitcase was gone!"

"Mercy!"

"Yes, while she had slept in her seat someone had deliberately taken her suitcase and climbed off at one of the way stations with it. You should have seen her when she arrived for a week's visit with no clothes but those she stood in and with no baggage but a dozen oranges and a bundle of gifts. She was tragedy personified."

"Well I should think so!"

"When we had heard all about the suitcase I took Alice up to her room to fix up as best she could, and there was barely time to get ready for dinner. But she said she would just curl her hair a little and wash her face, and make her traveling dress do until she could send home or do some shopping. So I sat down while she was preparing herself before the glass. The first thing she said was: 'Oh, dear! My curling iron is in the suitcase!'"

"How provoking!"

"Wasn't it? But I said: 'Never mind. You can curl your hair with my iron.'"

"At that a sudden thought struck her and she fell back on the bed and screamed with laughter."

"What was it?"

"That was what I wanted to know. When I approached her she reached for me and pulled me down on the bed with her and cried: 'Jennie, I can't curl my hair!'"

"Why not?" I asked her.

"'Because,' she gasped, 'my hair is in the suitcase, too!'"

"We just clung to each other and laughed until mother heard us and came running to see what it was all about. Then when we told her she screamed with laughter, too."

"It broke down all barriers of reserve between Alice and us and we had a perfectly lovely time."—Chicago Daily News.

Interest in Fossil Beds.

The fossil beds of the west that have furnished such wonderful specimens of gigantic animals of former ages, such as, for instance, the diplocodus, replicas of which have recently been placed on exhibition in several of the great European museums, sometimes yield fossils, which, if not so large as the great saurian mentioned above, are nevertheless of paramount interest to men of science. During the summer of 1909, the remains of several fossil turtles were collected by members of the United States geological survey, and from a study of these Prof. O. P. Hay has been able to describe eight new species of fossil turtles from west of the one hundredth meridian.

How Tourists Economize.

A comedy of economy is reported from St. Moritz. A stout couple, accompanied by a son and daughter who were also "thick," as the Germans translate stout, entered a crowded hotel at the busy time of lunch and ordered one lunch at table d'hôte. The father sat down and finished two helpings of soup and all the bread near him and left the table, his place being taken for the entrees by his wife, who had been waiting with her children in the hotel corridor until her husband appeared.

The young man then took his mother's place to attack the joint, and he was followed by his sister for the sweets, all doing justice to the menu. In the crowd the tourists did not notice the unusual lunch, but the head waiter did, and when asked for the bill presented one for four lunches. The paterfamilias grumbled a good deal—and paid!

B--h Delighted.

Two elderly gentlemen, both decently clothed in sober black, were sitting side by side in a Euclid avenue car, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Each was reading a morning paper. Suddenly one of the men uttered an exclamation of pleasure and the other peered at him over his glasses.

"I see here," explained the first with a beaming face, "that Mr. B., who died last week, has left his entire fortune to various charitable enterprises. This will be a surprise to his many relatives. It is me a glad surprise in my case, for I am the pastor of a church to which he has left $10,000."

The second man looked at the article and his face, too, became wreathed in smiles. "God bless him!" he exclaimed heartily. "All to charitable institutions in spite of his relatives! Ah, sir, I like to see money left like that. I do, indeed!"

"Are you also a clergyman?"

"No, sir, I am a lawyer."

Don't.

Don't permit the wild demonstrations of temper, the screaming and kicking which one sometimes—in fact, too often—witnesses in the little one. They demoralize both parent and child. They need never be if the very first demonstration is controlled and checked. Mothers and fathers, don't forget that in nine cases out of ten, if you have a spoiled, disagreeable child to deal with it is your fault. Begin as soon as the babies are born to train them in the right way, and they will grow up happy, healthy and wise.—Exchange

SEED OATS

Since good and poor Oats look so much alike, and can only be told by an actual test,

HOW SHALL A FARMER KNOW WHEN HE IS GETTING HIS MONEY'S WORTH?

The chances are that 80 per cent of the Oats offered for seed will not germinate over 30 per cent. In other words, seventy out of every one hundred seeds are DEAD, or too weak to grow a large crop.

WHITE MOUNTAIN BRAND PURE SEED OATS

have been through several crucial tests and have shown that over 97 per cent will germinate—STRONG at that. Besides they are 99 per cent pure.

Another important feature is—at the selling price of $1.25 per bushel delivered to the farmer, they are not only the best, but the cheapest.

Sow WHITE MOUNTAIN BRAND SEED OATS this spring and learn for yourself.

Barn Struck By Lightning.

The barn of Henry Lindge near the quarry was struck by lightning during the electrical storm last Thursday evening and prompt work prevented what might have been a serious fire. The lightning struck one end of the barn, tearing off the gable, and traveled through the building on the hayfork track, passing out the other end of the barn. The lightning passed through and did considerable damage to two stalls that are usually occupied by two mules, which fortunately at the time were not in the barn. The hired man was in the barn and was momentarily stunned, but recovered quickly enough to call for help to extinguish the fire, which had started in the hay. The damage to the property was about $100. A valuable cow owned by the W. N. Flynt Granite Co. was killed by lightning in the company's pasture near the quarry.

Woman Attempts Suicide.

Makes Two Gashes in Throat With Razor, But Will Recover.

Mrs. Charles Whitney made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide by cutting her throat with a razor at her home in the Norcross block on Main street Monday morning. Fortunately the wounds were not deep and as help was at hand immediately her life was saved.

Mrs. Whitney has been suffering for some time from a nervous breakdown, and of late has been afflicted with melancholia resulting from her ill health. A trained nurse has been in attendance of late. Monday morning about 8.15 the nurse left Mrs. Whitney alone in her bedroom for a few moments, and on returning found that she had inflicted two severe gashes in her throat with a razor. The nurse at once called for help, and fortunately Dr. C. W. Jackson happened to be in the building; prompt and skillful work, in which he was assisted by Dr. G. E. Fuller, resulted in saving the woman's life.

in Chicopee Sunday morning at 8.30, with high mass of requiem in Holy Name church at 9. Burial was in Calvary cemetery. Mrs. Carmody leaves beside her husband, one daughter.

The annual exhibition of school work was held yesterday and to-day and will also be held this evening in the school building. Much hard work has been put into this exhibition by both pupils and teachers and it is hoped that many of the townspeople will avail themselves of the privilege of seeing the work of the pupils of this village. This is the first time the exhibition has been held so early in the year, but for various reasons it was thought best to hold it at this time.

Mrs. Samuel Beauregarde and daughter Catherine were guests Monday of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thomas in Three Rivers, who for many years were residents here. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas were married fifty-five years ago Wednesday and now reside with their daughter Lena in Three Rivers. There was no public celebration, they having celebrated their fiftieth anniversary five years ago. They still enjoy good health and have a large family of children and grandchildren living.

The annual supper held at the club house Tuesday evening was well attended, there being nearly 50 present. One of the best suppers ever served by the club was served at 6.30 o'clock. Following the supper an entertainment which was much enjoyed was given with the following program: Solos by Mrs. Michael Sullivan; piano solos by Mrs. Vernon Faunce; several readings by Mrs. Alice Johnson of Springfield; violin solos by Herbert Canterbury, and C. D. Holden entertained by his magic. Following the entertainment the rest of the evening was given over to singing and dancing.

FOR MURDER OF CHILD.

Three Rivers Woman Sentenced To Year In Prison.

MADE A CONFESSION OF HER CRIME.

Belonged to Ignorant Class And Did Not Realize the Enormity Of Her Act.

Mrs. Ludwika Dymon of Three Rivers, who was charged with the murder of her new-born baby on March 31, was sentenced in the superior court in Springfield last Friday to one year in the women's prison at Sherborn. The original charge was second degree murder, but this was changed to manslaughter. Efforts were made to induce the woman to confess, but she stolidly maintained her innocence until the last moment, when she admitted her guilt.

In imposing sentence Judge Crosby stated that he was induced to leniency because of the fact that the woman was one of the most ignorant class, and that she understood but little the significance of the act she committed. It was evident that she had suffered all that she could suffer since her confinement, and on that account the sentence would be the lightest the court could impose. When the judge concluded the woman, who had sat with bowed head all the time she was in the court room, burst into a torrent of sobs. When the sentence was interpreted into Polish her cries were redoubled, ending in hysterics, incoherent cries and vigorous struggles as she was led from the room by the court officials. She recovered sufficiently later to ask that relatives be allowed to accompany her to Sherborn.

Moses Goes Up For Assault.

Man Who Pounded Mother-in-law Must Serve Nine Months.

George Moses of Palmer was found guilty in the superior court this week of assaulting his mother-in-law, Mrs. Jane Colburn, in Palmer on the evening of April 15, and was sentenced to nine months in the house of correction. Moses was tried in the district court in Palmer April 22, was found guilty and sentenced to one year, but appealed. The jury Tuesday was out only an hour and found him guilty, but in view of the fact that he has been in jail since the appeal from the lower court Judge Crosby made the term he still has to serve only nine months.

Moses, who is 35, married on March 18 Mrs. Colburn's daughter, who is 18, after the mother had driven him from her residence. The husband did not get along well with his mother-in-law, and Moses and his wife lived in Palmer for a time, where they had a difference of opinion later and Mrs. Moses returned to her mother. On the evening of April 15, as the two women were on their way home from an electric car, Moses met them at the "underpass" near the electric power plant at Blanchardville, about half a mile from their home. The story of Mrs. Colburn and her daughter was that their first knowledge of Moses' presence was when he jumped from the side of the road with a club in his hand and a threat to kill Mrs. Colburn, at the same time striking her several blows on the head and arm. Moses claimed that his mother-in-law attacked him first after he had asked his wife to accompany him. The evidence hardly supported this statement however, and Judge Crosby, in charging the jury, stated that a person had no warrant for using a dangerous weapon unless he honestly believed his life was in danger. The weapon used by Moses was a club about two inches in diameter and five feet in length.

Forest Lake Memorial Day.

Will Open For Three Days With Big Theatre Attraction.

Forest Lake will open Memorial Day—next Thursday—as usual, and will remain open for three days after, closing Sunday night until the regular season's opening about the middle of June, depending on the weather. The new theatre will be used for the first time, and there will be a big vaudeville program of five acts, sent by the American Vaudeville Circuit of New York, which is to furnish the shows again this year. In addition to the three shows in the theatre—at 2, 4 and 8 p. m.—there will be dancing all day, and the usual other attractions.

Accidentally Stabbed Himself.

Moses Cline of Three Rivers accidentally stabbed himself while at work in Thorndike the first of the week. He was attended by Dr. S. O. Miller and removed to the Mercy hospital in Springfield.

New Theatre at Forest Lake.

Fine Structure Replacing One Burned Recently. Open Next Week.

The theatre-going patrons of Forest Lake this season will be sure to be pleased with the fine new theatre building, now nearly completed, to replace the one burned last summer. It stands on the site of the old one, and while it is like that in many ways, it is so changed and improved that it is hard to imagine how it could be improved upon.

The auditorium is large and finer than can be found in any suburban park in this section, and is surpassed by few in the larger places. It is 60 by 80 feet, covered, with an open space at the rear 20 feet wide, making the enclosure 60 by 100. The building—all but the last 20 feet—is covered by a roof supported that there are no posts in the auditorium inside the side aisles, affording a clear view of the stage from every seat. The roof is open at the sides to permit a circulation of air, and the open space at the rear is expected to materially aid in keeping the place cool in the hottest weather by permitting the breezes free access. The floor is planked over the entire surface, with broad aisles on either side and in the center. New folding seats of an improved design will occupy the lower half of the floor, the old seats saved from the former building being utilized for the remainder of the space. These are arranged with an unusual amount of space between the rows, so that late comers can reach inside seats without unduly crowding those whom they are obliged to pass. There is a drop of six inches in each row, affording all a good view of the stage.

The stage is amply large to accommodate any traveling company, and any scenery carried by any troupe. The section of the building occupying it is 40 by 40 feet, and 18 feet from the stage floor up to the eaves. The stage itself is 40 by 20 feet, with a proscenium opening 28 by 16 feet. Regulation footlights and overhead lights have been installed, and five sets of new scenery provided. The theatre is lighted by electricity, and all stage lights are controlled by numerous switches in one corner of the stage at the front. At the rear of the stage are four ample dressing rooms. A water pipe has been extended from the large tank on the hill above the theatre to the stage and a fire hose installed for instant use in case of need. Automatic sprinklers are also to be put in. The entrance to the theatre is in practically the same location as the old one, and an exit is provided at the top of the hill, as before.

The theatre is the result of plans made by Manager E. D. Atkins of the electric road, and William Rohan of Ware, who has the lease of the lake property. They visited various summer theatres and adapted the best features of several for the Palmer building. The structure was built by Mr. Rohan, he giving his personal supervision to the work.

The shows will be continued the rest of the week, performances being given at 2:30 in the afternoon and 8 in the evening. The usual attractions will be in order during this time, and there will be performances in the theatre Sunday, after which the grounds will close until the season's opening later.

Admitted 60 Cent Larceny.

And Got 60 Days in Consequence. Was An Old Offender.

Because he was not strictly truthful in his statements regarding the disposal of merchandise, Joseph St. Martin is now working for the county in Springfield for a couple of months. In the district court Tuesday morning he was charged with the larceny of 60 cents; he pleaded guilty and was sent up. It was shown that he went to the store of E. J. Foskit in Monson during the absence of the proprietor and left two dozen eggs, which he said Mr. Foskit had ordered, and collected 60 cents therefor. Mr. Foskit denied ever ordering the eggs; besides eggs are not commanding that price at present. Other witnesses gave evidence that St. Martin defrauded other Monson people by various methods a few months ago.

Explosion on Locomotive.

Fireman and Engineer Hurt at West Brimfield Last Saturday.

Engineer Arthur Lawrence and Fireman Joseph O'Pray of the Boston and Albany road were injured in an accident at West Brimfield last Saturday. A flue in the locomotive of a west-bound train blew out, blowing open the door of the firebox and badly scalding O'Pray, besides inflicting numerous bruises. Engineer Lawrence had an arm broken. O'Pray was brought to Palmer and given medical attention, and later removed to the Worcester hospital.

BURGLARS MAKE HAUL.

House of Samuel Winer at Three Rivers Entered.

CASH AND A GOLD WATCH MISSING.

Thief Entered by Window, Left by Front Door. None of the Family Aroused.

The home of Samuel Winer on Main street in Three Rivers was entered by burglars during Saturday night or early Sunday morning and $350 in cash and a gold watch stolen. Mr. Winer did not discover his loss until he arose in the morning and is sure the burglary took place after midnight. The watch, which was recently purchased, cost $55. There is no clue to the thieves.

Mr. Winer owns a clothing store on Main street and lives in the same block. He had taken the $350 from the store to his home. His bed room is on the ground floor of the building and a light was burning there all night. Neither Mr. Winer nor his wife heard any sound. His son Joseph, who sleeps in an adjoining room, was also undisturbed.

A window in the bed room was open and it is believed that the thieves entered through that, as there was no break. They left evidently by the front door, which was found unlocked in the morning, although it was locked the night before when the family retired. Nothing else in the house was disturbed and the ease with which the haul was made indicates familiarity with the house and the habits of the family. The loss was promptly reported to the police, who immediately set to work on the case.

Plans For Memorial Day.

Union Service Sunday Evening. Usual Routine on Thursday.

The exercises of Memorial Day will begin next Sunday evening, when, at 8:30 the members of the Grand Army post, the Sons of Veterans and the Woman's Relief Corps will meet at Grand Army hall and attend a union memorial service in the Universalist church, when the pastor, Rev. Otto S. Raspe, will preach.

The members of the Woman's Relief Corps will meet in Memorial Hall Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons to make wreaths for use in decorating the graves on Memorial Day, and will be very glad for contributions of flowers on Wednesday. Wednesday afternoon the Corps will hold its memorial service for deceased members. On Wednesday afternoon the schools of the town will be visited by delegates from the Grand Army post, who will give patriotic talks.

Thursday morning the Grand Army post, Sons of Veterans and invited guests will gather at Memorial Hall and, escorted by the Thorndike band, march through Main to Thorndike streets, where cars will be taken for the cemeteries in Three Rivers, Four Corners and the Catholic cemetery at Palmer Center. After the graves there have been decorated the graves in the Oak Knoll cemetery in Palmer will be decorated, and there also will be held the service in memory of the unknown dead. These concluded, the company will march to Memorial Hall, where the Woman's Relief Corps will serve dinner. The single grave in the old Palmer Center cemetery will be decorated by the school children there.

The Memorial Day address will be delivered in Memorial Hall at 2 in the afternoon by Rev. Otto S. Raspe of Palmer, and the public is cordially invited to attend. His subject will be "The New Nationalism."

His 24th Time in Court.

Drunkenness the Cause of Narrow Escape From Death.

Patrick Crimmins was before the district court Tuesday morning on a charge of drunkenness, and the records of the court showed that he had been there on a similar charge just 23 times before. Judge Dillon, who was on the bench, sentenced him to the state farm at Bridgewater. Crimmins was found in the middle of the highway Monday night by the crew of the last Bonds-ville car, utterly incapable of action.

Will Build New Church in Wilbraham.

An adjourned meeting of the First Congregational church in Wilbraham was held Monday evening. It was voted that the building committee be instructed to build a church according to the plans presented. Committees were also chosen to purchase an organ and bell, consisting of Ethelbert Bliss, C. P. Bolles and Elias Keyes, and for the bell E. C. Powell, L. L. Stone and C. B. Hitchcock.

AUTOS IN COLLISION.

Two Come Together on Springfield Road Wednesday.

COLLIDING CAR NEGLECTS TO STOP.

But Was Held Up At Palmer. Driver Claimed Tire Burst And His Car Skidded.

An automobile accident which contained all the possibilities of grave results, but which fortunately ended with no serious damage to either cars or occupants, occurred near the Moran bridge on the Springfield road Wednesday afternoon.

Henry K. Hyde of Ware, having with him Rev. George B. Hatch of the same place and three women, was driving his car toward Springfield. Near the Moran bridge a Stevens-Duryea car traveling east, containing one passenger besides the driver, collided with Mr. Hyde's car and damaged it slightly, breaking a lamp and otherwise marring it. None of the passengers were injured.

The collision was not of a nature to stop the Stevens-Duryea car, and it kept on its way, the occupants making no effort to learn the amount of damage to the other car or its passengers. Mr. Hyde telephoned to Palmer, and the car was stopped at Lewis' Garage on Main street; the car was also followed to Palmer by William Rohan of Ware, who happened to be near in his auto. The register of the colliding car was 0170N, and the driver was Thomas J. Blanchfield, holding license No. 43046; his passenger was a Chicopee undertaker. Blanchfield claimed that he had a flat tire and that his car skidded in passing that of Mr. Hyde, but he gave no excuse for not stopping to investigate. It is not unlikely that some action will be taken in the matter, as the regulations regarding stopping in cases like this are strict and the penalties severe. The matter was reported to the state highway commission.

Strike On New Railroad.

Six Men Start Trouble At Red Bridge. But It Was Soon Over.

Sixty laborers employed by the Woronoco Construction company at Red Bridge went on a strike Monday morning, owing to the employment of a man they did not like.

The strike was instigated by six men who are the leaders of the gang and who refused to allow the others to work pending the discharge of the newcomer. The foreman refused to discharge the man, so the others started to maul things generally and refused to leave. It was decided to telephone to Justice Birnie in the village for aid.

About 3 o'clock Chief of Police W. H. Conedine with Officers B. Hebert, O. L. Huot of the Orchard squad and Special officer George McIntosh, drove to the camp in a team and informed the ringleaders that they had one-half hour to decide whether to return to work or be locked up. At the end of the end of the half hour they showed no inclination to work so the six were placed under arrest and driven back to town, charged with intimidation, to await trial.

The difficulty was satisfactorily settled later and the work is now going along smoothly.

WARE.

McGrath-Dillon.

The marriage of Mary Agnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. McGrath of Vernon street, and George William Dillon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Dillon of Storrs street, took place in All Saints' church Monday morning. Miss Julia McGrath, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and Dr. James Edward Dempsey of St. Vincent's hospital, Worcester, a classmate of the groom at Holy Cross, was best man. Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for a trip to Boston, Worcester, Hartford and New Haven, and on their return will live on School street, where their home is already furnished. Both the bride and groom are well known in Ware, the latter being district correspondent for the Boston Globe.

Skeleton Found at Ludlow.

Discovered in Sandbank. Bullet Hole in Skull. A Mystery.

Road Surveyor Ashley N. Bourcier of Ludlow discovered a skeleton with a bullet hole in the skull while taking out gravel from the hill on what is known as the Howard lot on Howard street in Ludlow Saturday afternoon. The men had dug about two feet when the skull was unearthed. The bones were taken to the police station.

Upon inquiry it was related by old residents that a strange man living in a hut in that vicinity disappeared 18 years ago and the finding of the skeleton Saturday with a bullet hole in the skull leads the people to believe that this man was murdered and buried in this hill. It will, however, in all probability remain an unexplained mystery.

Court Indian Leap of Foresters bought this piece of land several years ago from the late Charles F. Howard, who was master mechanic in the Ludlow manufacturing associates, and during the past winter the pine trees on the lot were cut off and the Foresters advertised the place for sale, as they did not intend to build.

Sporting News.

Palmer Town League.

Palmer 11—Three Rivers 10.

"Pete" Brouillette and "Grinnie" Brouillette were responsible for pulling a victory out for Palmer last Saturday. In the ninth, with two out, "Pete" smashed a long hit to center which Holt failed to connect with; after the fumble "Grinnie" scored from second by a rapid sprint. "Pete" then stole third and scored on a passed ball. Gorman did good work in the box for Palmer. The score:

A NEW FIRE DISTRICT.

Three Rivers Will Provide Its Own Protection.

SPECIAL MEETING, UNANIMOUS VOTE.

Will Have Fire Department Consisting of [Three Engineers] And Fifteen Men.

A meeting of the voters of the village of Three Rivers was held Wednesday evening for the purpose of organizing a fire district.

The meeting was called to order by Town Clerk J. F. Foley and John Wilson was chosen moderator. It was voted to form a fire district within the bounds prescribed in the warrant under which the meeting was called, to be known as the Three Rivers fire district, and to establish a fire department here.

Alfred F. Camerlin was elected clerk of the district and duly sworn. It was voted that the fire department shall consist of a chief engineer, three assistants and 15 firemen. A committee comprising Charles S. Ruggles, John Wilson and Alfred F. Camerlin was appointed to make an estimate of the money that will be needed and to confer with Town Counsel George D. Storrs of Ware as to how to raise and pay the fund.

A committee comprising J. J. Barber, J. J. Manning and T. P. Prendergast was appointed to prepare a ballot containing the names of candidates for three members of a prudential committee, a treasurer, a chief engineer and three assistants. Names of candidates are to be placed on the ballot on petition of five voters. Both committees are to report at a future meeting to be called by the clerk. The 15 firemen will be appointed by the board of engineers.

Must Help His Family.

Won't Do It Voluntarily, Court Fixes It. So He Will.

Men who can but won't support their families might take warning from the fate of Charles Guilette of Three Rivers, who is sojourning for six months in the house of correction in Springfield, the county meanwhile paying 50 cents a day to his family. Guilette was arrested for non-support at the instigation of the overseers of the poor of Palmer; he was found guilty in the district court and given a sentence of six months, from which he appealed, but in the superior court in Springfield Monday Judge Crosby confirmed the sentence, ordering payment to be made under the new law as long as the man is confined.

Buried a Half Hour in Sand.

Workman on New Hampden Railroad Has Narrow Escape Monday.

Edward McGerra, 18, of Three Rivers, a laborer in the employ of the Hampden railroad, was buried in a cave-in of sand and gravel in a 15-foot hole at Red Bridge Monday. He was in the sand fully half an hour before he was rescued by Foreman Thurston and a gang of laborers.

The man had the presence of mind to pull a sweater which he had on up around his head, which saved him from being suffocated. Dr. A. J. Treichler, who was summoned, arrived just as McGerra was dug out and attended him. McGerra was removed to the Ludlow hospital, and it was found that he was considerably bruised about the body, but no bones were broken.

WARREN.

Death of Mrs. Alice F. Kuntz.

Mrs. Alice Frances Kuntz, wife of Peter J. D. Kuntz, died suddenly Monday at the home of her father, E. Allen Day, on Coy's hill. Mrs. Kuntz had been in failing health for over a year from consumption, but it had not been thought she was in so weak a condition. Mrs. Kuntz was born in Warren, April 29, 1866, the daughter of E. Allen and Frances L. Day. After graduating from the high school and Wellesley college, she taught in the high schools in Hornell, N. Y., and Springfield. She was married to Mr. Kuntz on February 7, 1894, and since that time had lived in Springfield and New York. She was a member of the Congregational church in Flushing, L. I. She is survived by her father, E. The Camp Rio club held its annual meeting Saturday evening. Carl M. Blair was elected president and Charles E. Comins secretary and treasurer. They expect to open their camp at Walker's grove to-morrow and Fred L. Booth of Worcester has been engaged as steward.

Repeated Sermons.

The prejudice against the repetition of sermons is not universal. A good book repays re-reading and a good sermon should be all the more valuable on second hearing. Dr. John Watson ("Ian MacLaren") openly preached his sermons when minister of Sefton Park, Liverpool, and found that his congregation approved of the practice. They insisted, however, that the repetition should be exact, and were impatient of variations. In his "Life" of the preacher-novelist, Sir William Robertson Nicholl tells how on one occasion, after listening to a "repeated" sermon, in which occurred a simile of a pool, one of the congregation said to Dr. Watson: "Last time you described it as a 'turgid pool,' and I was so afraid you were going to use some other adjective, and that would have spoiled the whole picture. I was so thankful when you said 'turgid' again."

It Made A Difference

"Here!" burst out the young man suspiciously after his sister had knocked at his door the sixth time to ask if there wasn't something she could do to help him get ready for the party to which he was going. "What's the matter, anyhow, Em? Do you think I'm so decrepit that I'm not able any longer to attire myself or is it that you love me so you can't keep away from me?"

"I think you're horrid and rude," said the young man's sister, opening the door and entering. "Of course I'm fond of you, Jimmy. Fonder than you realize. I always have your best interests at heart."

"Is it a touch?" he asked surprisedly. "So soon after the holidays, too?"

"Jimmy," said his sister, seating herself and shaking her head at him sorrowfully, "you haven't a bit of sentiment or any of the finer emotions, have you? I don't want a thing! I just wanted to talk to you. Why don't you get married?"

The young man laid down the clothes brush he was using and, leaning toward her, stared. "Don't you feel well?" he asked with solicitude in his voice.

"Do you think you are funny?" she asked, indignantly.

"Mostly," said the young man, going on with his brushing, "a fellow's mother and sister throw spasms if he suggests matrimony for himself and the whole family has hysterics, so I don't understand you."

"I'd just love to see you married, Jimmy," his sister declared, eagerly. "Honestly! Nothing would please me more than to have you pick out the right sort of girl and settle down in your own comfortable little home. Think how nice it would be for me to have a sister and what fun she and I could have together and how glad I would be for you—"

"Would you really feel that way, sis?" the young man asked, with interest. "I hadn't any idea—I thought you'd cut up a terrible row if I did such a thing!"

"That's all you know about me, Jimmy," his sister insisted, sweetly. "You don't appreciate the depth of my affection in the least! Why, I would be a selfish, horrid creature if I didn't want you to be happy! I can't imagine why you should have got such an idea in your head! And you're such an all around fine boy, too, that you deserve a mighty fine girl, let me tell you!"

"I am astonished," declared the young man, seriously. "All these revelations are overwhelming. Particularly after the years of sisterly lectures on which I have been brought up! I thank you!"

"Oh, be mean if you want to," said his sister. "Only I hope you'll be on your best behavior the next two weeks because I have a guest coming. Of course, I don't expect you to give up your engagements to help me out, but if you could find time to be a little nice to Harriet I'd be obliged. You've heard me talk of her—tall and a ravishing beauty and the family has heaps of money and she refused a millionaire the year she—"

"I see it all," said the young woman's brother. "You want me to fall in love with Harriet and marry her!"

"Now, Jimmy!" protested his sister. "How absurd of you! As though I didn't think you could manage your own affairs without my help! You'll be perfectly crazy about her complexion and she is the sweetest—but I wouldn't have you think, not for the worlds, that I had any notion like that in mind. I was just speaking in the abstract. Just in a general way. You are such a suspicious person!"

"I see," said her brother, searching out his dress muffler. "It is merely that you feel it is time for me to marry and settle down and you have no ulterior motives—you'd be perfectly happy if you could be sure that I was happy—is that it?"

"Of course," said his sister. "I'm surprised that you could think anything else. Harriet certainly has a way with her. And they have I don't know how many automobiles and a place on Long Island and she'd be the loveliest sort of a girl to have in the fam—"

"You don't know how relieved I am," interrupted the young man, reaching up for his silk hat box, "to find you have such warm hearted sympathy and so much interest in my future. It makes it easier to tell you that I've just got engaged to Marion Brooks—the one we went to school with!"

"James Henry Ward!" gasped his sister, as she fumbled for her handkerchief. "That girl! That insignificant, poor as poverty, ordinary girl, when—and I don't see why you want to get married, anyhow—aren't you perfectly comfortable here at home? Men are such idiots!"

Discrepancy Somewhere.

Aviators are popularly supposed to be men of iron nerve and perfect physical condition. Yet the great Vedrines was rejected for military service on account of physical shortcomings and a special arrangement has had to be made by which his services as an aviator might be utilized during the French maneuvers.

Cesar and the Empire.

The reason "why the Roman empire succeeded the republic" was that there was felt to be an urgent need of a strong central power. For many years the republic had been desolated and the cry of the whole people was for peace—peace almost at any price. Now, peace could be secured only by the ascendancy of a single man, ruling with absolute and irresistible sway. So the people acquiesced in the change. They even hailed it with joy. A few patriots like Brutus and Cato gave up in despair, but most men were pleased with the revolution which made Caesar supreme. Not that they were monarchistic at heart, but that after the devastating strife they wanted peace, even though it be at the sacrifice of some of their liberties.

In The Shoe Store

(Scene—A shoe store during a marked down sale. The customers are being marshaled in order by urbane managers. Wild eyed clerks are trying to wait on three times as many persons as they can really satisfy by their attentions.)

Young Girl (after gazing five minutes abstractedly at a bronze satin boot on her foot, during which time her clerk has told five women that he is busy)—"I don't know whether I want it or not. It'll go well with the green, but whether it'll look all right with my blue velvet I—"

Young Girl's Friend (jumping to her feet as though shot)—"Where is it? Oh, I can't have lost it! It was right here—excuse me, madam, but will you get up?"

Woman Next Her (frostily)—"I don't know what you've lost, but I assure you that I haven't it! I've got plenty of my own."

Clerk—"What have you lost?"

Young Girl's Friend (pawing among the shoes on the floor)—"My card-case. Jessie, you saw me have it, didn't you? You know I had it at the other store and now it's gone!"

Clerk (soothingly)—"If your cards were in it possibly it will be returned to you."

Young Girl's Friend—"No, they'll keep it! It was a silver one! I must have lost it! I'm going back to the other store."

Young Girl—"I'd go with you, dear, but I've just got to decide on these bronze boots! Do you think they'd look well with the blue—"

Young Girl's Friend—"Uncle Jim gave it to me and I had it right on my arm in the other store. I'm going back there—"

Woman Next Her (sharply)—"Well, that's my miff you're grabbing up. It's funny the sort of people they let come into this shop!"

New Customer (to clerk)—"Can't you wait on me next? I've been standing here a half hour if I've been a minute! I just want to leave an order—"

Manager (soothingly)—"Seat right over there, madam, please!"

Woman Grenadier—"I shall stand right here till this young man has finished! I cannot waste all afternoon in one place. I wish to be waited on immediately!"

Manager (in strupy tones)—"At once, madam! Just be seated!"

Young Girl (still dreamily)—"Perhaps if you'd try on one a little narrower I'd like the bronze after all."

Young Girl's Friend (gasping from the labor of elbowing through the crush)—"What do you think—just as I got to the corner I saw a woman with a silver card case hanging on her wrist exactly like mine and naturally I grabbed her and said it was mine and she was perfectly frightful! She said she would call a policeman! I'm all in a tremble! I came back to rest a minute!"

Young Girl—"Why, that's a shame, Mary. If I'd only brought along a sample of my blue dress—"

Young Girl's Friend—"Now I must go and find my silver card case. If Uncle Jim—"

Woman Next Her (grabbing at the friend as she starts out again)—"I'll call the manager! That's the second time you've picked up my miff! You've had your eye on it all the time! I—"

Young Girl's Friend (distractedly)—"Oh, I hate your old miff! I thought I laid mine there! If Uncle Jim finds that I've lost that card case I'll die!"

Newly Arrived Customers (all clamoring)—"Isn't there a soul in this place to wait on anybody? I've stood here an hour! I just want to see that pump in the window!"

Manager (swooping down as the clerks begin to paw the air)—"Just be seated, ladies, and I'll have some one here at once! Be seated—"

Woman Grenadier—"That's what you said thirty-five minutes ago. I'll not sit down! I shall stand right here till this young woman makes up her mind about that bronze boot!"

Young Girl (quite unhearing)—"Maybe I'd better get a black satin. You can wear black satin with everything. Only they wear out so soon. Haven't you any that don't wear out?"

Woman Grenadier (to nobody in particular)—"I shall stand right here!"

Clerk (to woman who has tried to abduct him by main force)—"No, madam; can't you see I'm busy?"

Would Be Abductor—"I shall report you to the manager! Of all the impudence—when I've waited hours!"

Young Girl's Friend (gasping for breath and waving the card case)—"I found it! I found it! I'd put it in my coat pocket!"

Young Girl—"How nice, Mary! (To clerk) What did you say is the price of these bronze boots? Seven and a half, marked down from ten! My goodness! Why didn't you tell me that before? At a marked down sale I shouldn't dream of paying over $5 for anything! Here I've wasted all this time! It's most annoying!"

Clerk (gritting his teeth as he faces the woman grenadier)—"Now, madam, I can attend to you!"

Woman Grenadier—"Well, it's about time! I've shopped all my life and I never had to wait like this! I want two pairs of 10 cent shoe laces."

Children and Firearms Again.

Little Anna Quinn, fourteen years old, was instantly killed the other day at Lowell, Mass., by the explosion of a revolver held by her playmate, Thelma Borg, aged twelve years. The two children, with Sonia Borg, a sister of Thelma, and another play-fellow, were playing about the Borg home when they discovered the revolver. After all had looked at it, Anna playfully held it against the heart of Thelma Borg. "I'm going to kill you," she said, smilingly. The trigger was pulled, but the revolver failed to explode. Once more the weapon was examined by the children and then Thelma Borg took it and placed it close to the Quinn child's head. Playfully she exclaimed: "You killed me; now I'm going to kill you." She fired. This time the weapon exploded.

Canny Mother-in-Law.

"My future mother-in-law is really a bit too careful. So that my fiancée shall know what to buy after we are married, she takes us both with her to the market every morning." "Well, but what use are you?" "Oh, I pay." —Fliegende Blaetter.

Excellent Cough Remedy.
A good old fashioned cough remedy is made of slippery elm, sugar and flaxseed. Soak a gill of whole flaxseed in a half pint of boiling water. In another dish put a cup of broken bits of slippery elm and cover this with boiling water. Let them stand for three hours, then strain them separately through a thin cotton cloth into a pan containing a pound and a half of granulated sugar. Squeeze out all the liquor possible and stir into the sugar until all is melted. Now boil it until it turns to candy. After it has cooked ten minutes add the juice of two lemons. When candied turn out into a well greased pan and mark into squares before it hardens. The children like it.

Sample of Animal Instinct.

"When I was a barefoot lad," said Mr. Dustin Stax, "I had to spend a good deal of time minding the stock on father's farm. I'll never forget the day when father told me to take a rope and hold a couple of bull calves."

"What did they do?"

"They scorched my hands with the rope and turned around and stepped on me."

"Unruly disposition?"

"No. Wonderful instinct. They recognized me at a glance as a small stockholder."—Washington Star

Thomas lodge of Masons of Palmer held a most enjoyable meeting Monday evening, when it had ten of the twelve past masters of the lodge present to work the first degree on three candidates.

Those present were Dr. J. K. Warren of Worcester, the oldest living past master, S. H. Hellyar of Palmer, W. A. Weld of Mansfield, Ct., C. T. Brainerd of Palmer, Dr. G. H. Wilkins of Newtonville, D. L. Bodfish of Palmer, B. Woodhead of Palmer, E. B. Taylor of Palmer, T. A. McCrea of Palmer, J. F. Davis of Thorndike. The two who were not present were H. W. McGregor of Hamilton, N. Y., and W. H. Norton, now of Canada. The present master is Charles L. Waid of Palmer.

The attendance was large, as might be expected from the nature of the event, about 150 being present. A pleasing feature of the program was violin selections by Arthur Hanson of Worcester. After the work a collation was served and a social time enjoyed.

Conference on Highways.

Town Committee Has Talk With State Highway Commission.

The committee appointed to build the macadam road for which the town voted to expend $50,000 had a conference Tuesday in the business club's rooms with Frank D. Kemp and Division Engineer Johnson of the state highway commission concerning the roads the town is to build. As a result it has been decided that the state commission will take charge of the preliminary surveys, the work to be done by an engineer selected by the commission. The board will also prepare the specifications for the work and advertise for bids. The committee hopes to be ready July 1 to advertise for bids, and to complete the entire work this summer. The various kinds of road were discussed but no decision made as to what to build, as it is very likely that the kinds will differ in different localities.

Officials' Salaries Raised.

Judge and Clerk of District Court to Receive More Pay.

Governor Foss signed on Tuesday a bill increasing the salaries of judges of certain district courts. The district court of Eastern Hampden is included, and the provisions of the bill increase the salary of the judge from $1200 to $1500 per year. Special justices, when serving, will receive $4.91 per day instead of $3.93, and the salary of the clerk of courts is increased from $720 to $900 per year.

Will Have Ladies' Night.

Quabog council, Royal Arcanum, at its meeting Tuesday evening voted to have a ladies' night in the near future, members of the order only to be supplied with tickets. The program is not fully made up, but an entertainment will be provided by members of the order, and refreshments will be served, in addition to which there will be whist. At the meeting Tuesday evening Dr. G. A. Moore gave a very interesting and instructive talk on "How to keep well, or conservation of health."

Departing Physician Given Reception.

Dr. Frederick W. Guild, who has left the Monson state hospital after a service of three years to take up private practice, was given a reception at the hospital Saturday evening by the graduating class of the training school. He was presented with an initial desk set in brass. Refreshments were served, and there was music by Orcutt's orchestra. Dr. Guild has gone to Grafton, where he has taken the practice of the late Dr. Warren B. Maxwell.

Will Start Sprayer Monday.

Tree Warden Keith plans to start spraying for browntail moths next Monday if the weather is propitious. While the trees are leaving out rapidly Mr. Keith finds that there is a great difference in them, some being very far advanced while others have hardly started. The sprayer has been tested and found to be in prime condition.

W. H. Shaw is painting his house on Knox street.

The pupils of the high school are to publish a school paper and are soliciting advertisements for the same.

A petition is being circulated among the merchants asking them to close the stores Wednesday afternoons during June, July and August.

The cemetery commissioners have had a force of men at work this week cutting the grass and trimming up the cemeteries for Memorial Day.

Many invitations have been sent out for the high school dance given by the Junior class in the Memorial Hall this evening.

An auction sale of the Weeks House, the Blanchard house on the corner of Knox and Highland streets, and a woodlot at Blanchardville is announced for next Friday.

The Boston and Albany railroad has filed a petition with the county commissioners asking permission to make some changes in the bridge over Bridge street. It is desired to make the bridge about two feet wider, to increase the size of the iron beams supporting the tracks, and to install a floor of concrete which will prevent the leakage of water down into the roadway beneath.

Mrs. Katherine McGowan, widow of Michael McGowan, a member of Co. F, 57th Mass. Vol. Inf., died yesterday morning at the town farm from the effects of a shock sustained only a short time before her death. She enjoyed a small pension, but had been a boarder at the farm for a number of years. The funeral will be held to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock from Phillips' undertaking rooms.

The street railway company is put in a turnout at Randlett's, on the Brimfield line between Fosket's Mill and the village of Brimfield, next Sunday. This will greatly facilitate the making of time on that line when a car happens to be a few minutes late between Brimfield and Palmer, allowing them to pass at Randlett's instead of holding one at Palmer or one at Brimfield, as is necessary now.

At the regular meeting of the selectmen last night Edward E. Reed was appointed special officer. Sworn weighers were appointed as follows: Charles W. Darling, Albert Fenton, Philip Mauraseau, Louis Morin, Emil Bengle, Daniel Hartnett Jr. and Thomas A. McCrea. Permission was granted to the Palmer, Three Rivers, Thorndike and Bondsville baseball associations to play games and charge admission for same, this action being required by law. The next meeting of the selectmen will be held next Wednesday evening instead of Thursday, on account of the holiday.

The street railway will make a special effort to cater to the holiday riding next Thursday, Memorial Day. Half hour cars will be run on the Springfield line, beginning at 8.15 a. m.; and on Ware and Monson lines all day. Hour cars will be run to Bondsville and Three Rivers in the morning and half hour cars in the afternoon. The first car will leave Brimfield at 7.45 a. m. Extra cars and double-headers will be run on the Springfield and Ware lines as the travel warrants. On account of Forest Lake being kept open Friday, Saturday and Sunday following Memorial Day, half hour time will be run to Ware on the afternoons and evenings of these days.

On Flossie's Advice

"Yes," said young Mrs. Tomlinson as she poured a glassful of water into a shallow bowl filled with blooming bulbs, "they did bloom at last and they are pretty. But don't you ever let any one tell you what Flossie told me about them, for it isn't true."
"Chinese filices or narcissus?" asked her visitor, as she slipped off her pin-less hat and warmed her blue tipped fingers against the tea cozy, all set for gentle brewing.
"I'm sure I don't know. I bought both kinds of bulbs and they got mixed, and now every bowl has some flowers with yellow centers and some that are white and everybody tells me a different story about which is which.
But that doesn't matter nearly so much as the rest of it." Young Mrs.
Tomlinson sank into her wicker chair and began to arrange the delicate tea cups, and after that she uncovered a pile of cheese sandwiches.
"It is all lovely," exclaimed her friend. "All tea, cheese, sandwiches and flowers. I am cold and hungry, so hurry the tea, and do tell me what Flossie said that wasn't true."

"None of it was true—about the bulbs," declared young Mrs. Tomlin-son, sternly. "And she started me on them, you know. She was here last summer when we gave our rubber plant to Aunt Sophie because Harry said it was too big to live with and fussed so about it. I was sorry to see it go, for it was the only thing I ever made grow, and I have spent a fortune on ferns and various kinds of plants. They die the minute I touch them. So Flossie suggested bulbs.
They were quite cheap, she told me.
"Just get some cheap, plain glass bowls," said Flossie, "and you can gather enough pebbles this summer to fill them. Then get the bulbs—at 25 cents a dozen—and you have flowers for the entire winter. Plant them two weeks apart and then keep them in the dark for two weeks. In six weeks they bloom and you can keep taking out your bowls as the old flowers die.
It sounded delightful, so I decided to try it."

"That was in July. We were going north for the rest of the summer, so I just made a note of it and watched for pebbles. Whenever we were in swimming or were walking by the lake I made everybody pick up pebbles for me. Harry said his pockets were full of stones all summer long, and he got awfully mad once because I emptied the cigars out of a new cigar box to put stones in, though I covered up the cigars and they weren't hurt a bit."

"I brought back four boxes of stones —perfect beauties, blue and white and yellow and pink. Then I began to look up bowls. Flossie said the bowls would cost almost nothing at all, and I began to look for plain glass bowls.
The cheap ones were dreadful pressed glass things and the only pretty ones were $1 each, so I got two of those and then looked at pottery.
Harry says that there's where I lost my head, but I looked on the bowls as an investment. And I got some beauties. They cost more than the others, but I thought they were worth the money, and the Japanese clerk was such a dear about choosing them.
"Then I got the bulbs. And instead of costing 25 cents a dozen they were three for a quarter. Flossie said I went to the wrong place, but I didn't know that, and I had bought six bowls, so I had to have plenty of bulbs."

"About October 1 I began to set them out so they would begin blooming about November 15. I never have got over this part of it. Harry has always given his cigar boxes to a neighbor boy and he came over to play in our basement one day and found my pebbles in those boxes and threw them all into the alley!
"Harry wasn't at all sympathetic.
He simply refused to go and gather more pebbles by the lake, which he might have done to save expense, and so I had to go back to the bulb store and buy little ugly, commonplace stones for ten cents a quart.

"I finally got one bowl started in the dark in the coat closet. There Harry found it before it was a week old and spilled it all over the silk lapels of his new tuxedo. Of course, his tailor could fix that, but he insists on counting it in as part of the expense. He never seemed to care for my bulb ambitions."

"That bowl was broken, and of course it was the nicest, and the little tender sprouts were harmed, so I had to begin again. I took all the things out of the closet and had the janitor put up some shelves, and it didn't cost much and was a splendid place for the bulbs."

"But all winter Harry has said that he hasn't been able to find a thing in its proper place. He quieted down a bit after the bulbs got to blooming—until he got his newspaper in a bowl one night, and then you really should have heard him rave, though it was just his own carelessness."

"Of course, I have learned a lot about bulbs. I tell Harry that next year, since I have my equipment, everything will go much better. It is an investment, you see, so I must go on, for there are only the bulbs to buy."

"If you ever want to try them, dear,
come to me, or ask Harry. We know.
Do have another sandwich."

HAD TENDER SPOT FOR HORSE

Washington and Grant Alike in Their Fondness for the Noble Friend of Mankind.

The disposition of the late President Grant to talk horse was a great cause of offense to certain prim people. If they had consulted history they would have learned that horse talk was also a characteristic of that distinguished soldier and fine old Virginia gentleman, George Washington by name, declares a writer in the Army and Navy Journal "I found," wrote the artist Gilbert Stuart, "that it was difficult to interest Washington in conversation while I was taking his portrait. I began on the revolution, the battles of Monmouth and Princeton, but he was absolutely dumb. After a while I got on horses. I had touched the right chord." Washington was then president of the United States and resided in Philadelphia, where he had a stable of six and twenty horses. He used to say that he needed but one good quality in a horse and that was to go along, for he could always keep his saddle, provided the animal could keep his legs.
After the surrender at Appomattox Grant had not a word to say about the stirring events through which he had just passed, but as he sat over his campfire that night he turned to his quartermaster and said: "Ingalls, do you remember that old white mule
So and So used to ride in Mexico?"
Of course, under the circumstances
Ingalls was prepared to remember that or any other experience that pleased his chief. He probably would not have cared, however, to remember just then the disastrous speculation in raising potatoes in which he was Grant's partner when they were stationed together in Oregon.

An Incident of the Road.

"Stop!" cried the man in the road.
"You are exceeding the speed limit."
"That's all nonsense," retorted Binks, bringing his car to a standstill.

"That's what they all say," said the man in the road, climbing into the car.
"You can tell your story to the magistrate at Hinktown—jest seven miles up the road. Start along, please."

They drove on in silence to Hink-town, where, as the car drew up in front of the courthouse, the man in the road got out.

"Much obliged for the lift," said
he. "You can settle that matter of speed with the magistrate if you want to. As a stranger in these here parts
I don't think my word would go for much."

Delightful Travelling, But—

Henry Clews, at a dinner in Newport, said of American travelling:

"It is delightful to travel in America, but I think that American porters handle our baggage a little too roughly."

"Once, at a certain station, I was amazed and pleased to hear a uniformed official shout to a burly porter:

"'Hi, what are you knockin' them trunks about like that for?"

"The porter had been lifting great trunks above his head and hurling them down onto the floor furiously;
but now he stood stock still in astonishment."

"What's that, boss?" he said.

"What do you mean by knockin' trunks about like that?" repeated the official. "Look at the floor, man. Look at the dents you're makin' in the concrete. Don't you know you'll lose your job if you damage the company's property?"

Wants a Brother.

Keeper Bob Murton found a piece of paper tied with blue ribbon in the pelican cage in Central Park in New York the other day. On the paper was written in a childish hand this appeal:

"Dear, dear, Mr. Stork. Please bring us a baby boy and don't forget.
I am going to put some sugar on my window so that you will know where to come."

The note was signed "Helen Frankel, 115 East 104th street."

Little Miss Frankel has two sisters, but no brother alive. Her brother died three years ago. She is 8 years old. She wants a brother to protect her when other children slap her, she said to a visitor at her home.

The Tale of BACHELORS' FRIEND

The hose that's up to every test,
And walks away from all the rest;
The hose you do not have to mend—
It really is the Bachelors' Friend.

Here is the stocking of your dreams,
There are no knots or welts or seams;
You've comfort when you walk or wend
If you will wear the Bachelors' Friend.

It's reinforced at heel and toe,
Just where it's needed most, you know,
It cannot ravel, rip or rend
If it's the real Bachelors' Friend.

The money placed in this good sock,
Is better put than in bank stock;
You get good interest in the end,
And money's safe in Bachelors' Friend.

Some stockings are not worth a darn—
This never needs one, that's no yarn,
It breeds no holes, and you'll depend
On tough elastic Bachelors' Friend.

Here is the smoothest hose that's out.
The kind good dressers talk about;
Sea Island Cotton Threads transcend
All others—These make Bachelors' Friend.

The hose that's silky to the feel,
With silky shine that is ideal;
For present to accept or send
The highest prized is Bachelors' Friend.

Here are the dyes that hold their own,
The longest lasting colors known,
And there's no hose they make or vend
That's half as good as Bachelors' Friend.

A Pretty Wedding Saturday Afternoon. Couple Will Live in New York.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Flynt on High street last Saturday afternoon, when their daughter, Miss Ruth Burleigh Flynt, and John S. Marshall of New York city were united in marriage. The single ring service was used, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. G. A. Andrews of the Congregational church. Miss Ruth Hibbard played the wedding march.

The maid of honor was Miss Eudocia Dewey of Springfield, a cousin of the bride. The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Cushman of this town and Miss Olivia Flynt, a sister of the bride. The best man was Robert H. Flynt, a brother of the bride. The ushers were Kenneth Woodward of New York and Roy Wheeler of Hartford, Ct. The flower girls were Caroline and Harriet Cushman, cousins of the bride. The decorations were principally apple blossoms and were under the directions of W. H. Pease.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. Out of town guests were present from Cincinnati, New York, Boston, Providence, Hartford, Springfield and Palmer.

The bride is very popular with the younger set in Monson. She graduated with high honors from Monson Academy in the class of 1907 and attended Smith College and Simmons college in Boston. THE BEST PROOF

Palmer Citizens Cannot Doubt It

Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they cured.

The story was told to Palmer residents.

Time has strengthened the evidence. Has proven the cure permanent. The testimony is from this locality. The proof convincing.

W. C. Sheldon, 84 W. Main St., Ware, Mass., says: "Weak and disordered kidneys caused me misery for years. I tried remedy after remedy, but relief did not follow. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage and always attended with a burning sensation. My back ached constantly and was weak. On a friend's advice, I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills and began their use. The first few doses relieved the pain and before long my kidneys were restored to a normal condition." (Statement given August 15, 1908.)

A LATER ENDORSEMENT

On June 15, 1911, Mr. Sheldon was interviewed and he added to the above: "All I have previously said regarding Doan's Kidney Pills was correct, and I am glad to confirm my former statement. This remedy is certainly an effective one."

BEWARE OF THE APPLEJACK

Grave and Dignified Jurist the Victim of Pleasant but Deceitful Beverage.

One of New York's judges took a little vacation not long ago. He visited a friend who owns a country place in New Jersey. The friend had some prime old New Jersey applejack. "I got a bit on edge with that stuff," said the judge. "And then I sobered up, as I believed. Three days afterward I brushed my hair, being desirous of attending Sunday school. Before I could get the brush away from my head I was soused afresh."

It was during the pleasant evening with the Jersey friend that the judge escaped from the house. Loud yowls coming from the orchard near by guided the searchers to him. They led him back to the house and suggested that he go to bed. The judge acquiesced, but insisted upon telling his experience. "The trees were bowing and waving their arms," said he, "and the wind sang through the branches, and the scent of flowers was in the air. Sometimes the trees changed places with each other. Now and then they almost swept the road in front of me with their boughs." "None of 'em hurt you, judge?" "No, sir," said the judge, solemnly. "Never in my life did I go out with a nicer bunch of trees."

He Met the New "Feller."

"What did you do on your way to school this morning, Harold?" asked Harold's mamma.

"Nothin' much. I met the new feller that's moved in next door to us."

"But the teacher has just written me a note informing me that you were a half-hour late for school."

"Hub! That ain't nothin'. You'd better see the new kid next door. He never got to school at all!"

The Angler's Bait.

A well known angler at Petersborough having obtained a wasp's nest containing a large number of grubs, placed the nest in the kitchen oven to kill the grubs so that he could use them for bait. The next morning he went to get the grubs, but on opening the oven door a swarm of wasps flew out. The oven was not hot enough to kill the grubs, but was sufficiently warm to hatch them.—London Daily Mail.

RETIRES WITH PENSION.

M. J. Siske Leaves Employ of State To-morrow.

CONTINUOUS SERVICE OF 44 YEARS.

Messenger and Trusted Handy Man of State Primary School and Epileptic Hospital.

To but few persons is granted the distinction of remaining for 44 years in the service of one employer, and of being dismissed at the end of that time with a "well done" and a pension for the rest of one's natural days. And when the employer happens to be the Commonwealth, the distinction is all the more remarkable in view of the too often reward of appointment for political services rendered. But a continued service of 44 years is the record of Michael J. Siske, trusted messenger and handy man at the Monson State Hospital for epileptics. He will end that service to-morrow night under orders from the retiring board of the state, and will receive a pension in accordance with the terms of an act passed last year, to take effect January 1, 1912, establishing a retirement system for the employees of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Siske was born in Boston in 1845. He came to Palmer in 1855, and in 1863 went to Pittsfield to learn the trade of joiner. Later in the same year he returned to Palmer and entered the employ of J. W. Weeks as clerk at the Nassawanno House. He attended Monson Academy during the spring term of 1867, at the same time working for Mr. Weeks in return for his board. In the summer of 1867 he went with Loomis & Page of Palmer to learn the carriage trade. In January, 1868, the late Gordon M. Fiske, then assistant state visiting agent, appointed him as messenger at the State Primary School, in which position he remained until the institution was abolished in 1895. The old buildings were torn down to make room for the new ones of the hospital for epileptics, and Mr. Siske remained with the new officials. During his connection with the State Primary School—which cared for neglected children, placing them in homes and watching over them until of age—he saw many changes. At one time the colony numbered 1100 souls, and in 1896, after the demolition of the old buildings and before the erection of the new ones Mr. Siske was the only occupant of the premises. He served—in the old days—under no less than seven different superintendents, and in his capacity of driver of the superintendent's carriage has had the privilege of conveying to and from the institution every governor of the Commonwealth since his appointment to the service of the state, and is justly proud of his record.

Mr. Siske's face is a familiar one to almost every resident of this village, unless it be a few of the newer comers, and for every one he has always had a kind word and a genial smile, which was returned in kind without exception. In the days of the State Primary School it was his duty to carry the mail and small packages between the institution and the village, execute all kinds of commissions and make himself generally useful. In this work he was often compelled to visit the village several times a day, and became known to all. Someone has said that, although 67 years of age he still has the heart of a boy, and there could be no truer expression. His popularity with all classes was shown at the time of the World's Fair at Chicago, when in a voting contest at a firemen's ball he was awarded the prize, a round-trip ticket to the fair, as being the most popular person in the community. Although living across the river in the town of Monson, Mr.

When Her Hat Blew Off.

Experience of One Woman in Trying to Stop an Electric Car.

There's one woman in this section who would like to know just what may be expected of the crew of an electric car when a hat or other article of wearing apparel is lost from the car while in transit. She knows that cars have frequently been stopped and even run back a considerable distance under such circumstances, but her experience Tuesday morning makes her wonder if there's any rule on the subject or if it's a matter of discretion with the conductor. If the latter, she thinks she was unfortunately placed Tuesday.

She was traveling toward Springfield on a car about the middle of the forenoon, and when in the private land east of the Calkins turnout her hat was switched from her head by a sudden gust of wind. She half rose and signalled the conductor, as did also a passenger sitting directly behind her. As the car did not slacken speed the passenger again signalled the conductor, and the woman rose to her feet and motioned the conductor to stop. He acknowledged both with a nod of his head—and that was all. After proceeding some distance he approached a white post and then gave a stop signal, allowing the woman to leave the car and walk back, the distance being nearly a quarter of a mile. Passengers who noted the performance were somewhat indignant, and one spoke to the conductor about it, receiving the sullen reply, "We can't stop for lost hats." The car arrived at Court Square in Springfield with five minutes to wait before making the return trip.

Will Begin Railroad Soon.

Work on Southern New England Road May Start Here Any Day.

It is understood that work on the construction of the Southern New England railroad from Palmer to Providence will begin in the vicinity of Palmer very soon. The contractor who is to do the cement work has hired a piece of land on the Hathaway (the Hawley Keith) farm east of the village, and has begun the erection of a barn capable of caring for 50 horses which will be used in the work.

The question as to the time of starting the work has been asked many times, and the delay is understood to be due to the non-arrival of machinery which has been ordered. A Palmer man has been appointed agent for the settlement of claims for land damage where property is taken for the road's use.

Fined For An Affray.

Two Bondsville Men Pay For Privilege of Fighting in Street.

Antonio Stoviska and Stanislaw Deroga of Bondsville started a fight in the streets of that village about 11.15 Saturday night and were caught in the act. Both were arrested, and in the district court Monday morning both were found guilty of an affray. Deroga was fined $25 and Stoviska $10; both paid.

At the same session of the court John Conlin of Monson was charged with vagrancy, having been found sleeping in a barn. He claimed that he knew the owner of the property and went to him to get work; finding no one at home he went into the barn and went to sleep. He thought he could find a job if allowed to go. His story was found to be partially true and the case was placed on file.

Foresters' Memorial Sunday.

Palmer, Monson, Thorndike Courts to Hold Joint Meeting Sunday.

The Foresters of Court Palmer, No. 180, Court Monson, No. 247, and Court Hampden of Thorndike will hold a joint memorial service Sunday afternoon at 2.15 in F. of A. hall in Commercial block, Palmer. All members are requested to meet in the hall at 12.15; at 12.30 they will march in a body to Oak Knoll cemetery and from there take an electric car to St. Thomas' cemetery to decorate the graves of the departed brothers; thence to the hall, where they will be joined by Court Monson and Court Hampden. Grand Chief Ranger George F. James of Newtonville will deliver the memorial address, and there will be speaking by other grand court officers. There will be solos by John J. Donahue of Palmer and Albert J. Gould of Monson. The meeting will be presided over by Chief Ranger David Micoft of Court Palmer.

Sustains Injuries While at Work.

Two laborers at work on the Hampden railroad were seriously injured the first of the week. Thomas Scott broke his right leg below the knee and Deonge Perist is suffering from a dislocated shoulder and a broken nose. The men were attended by Dr. J. P. Schneider and both were removed to the Springfield hospital.

The New Nationalism.

Memorial Day Address, Delivered to Palmer Grand Army Yesterday by Rev. Otto S. Raspe.

Rev. Otto S. Raspe of Palmer, who delivered the Memorial Day address at Palmer yesterday, took for his subject "The New Nationalism," and said in part:

Men of the Grand Army of the Republic, you lived in one of the most strenuous and momentous eras of the world's history. I see with you in vision the black and portentous clouds that enshroud the horizon of our national life. The storm and crisis is rapidly rising. Will the nation be torn asunder? It is an intense moment. Fired by indignation over the question of state rights South Carolina secedes from the Union. Like wormwood courses through the blood so the spirit of hatred, prejudice and misunderstanding ran through the very arteries and into the heart of the southern states. The course of the rebellion can no longer be stayed. The storm has arisen and broken forth in relentless fury. There arises before our eyes the vision of the great Jefferson Davis. The cause of Dixie is cried over hill and dale. Forts, arsenals, arms and property of the federal government are seized. Chaos reigns supreme. But thanks to the Almighty, out of that seething political chaos arose the mighty figure of Abraham Lincoln. Even now I in spirit see him—ungainly in outward demeanor, but full-souled in character, wise in mind, with a straightforwardness in thought and deed, magnanimous in temper, unequalled in discernment and understanding of the common people—there he stands, a prophet to his age, an emancipator to a race of people, a Father to divided sons. Providence had favored the righteous cause of the North. From the very first hour of his responsibility as the Executive head of the nation he labored with masterly sagacity to the end that no rational ground should be left for the rebellion to feed upon. But the hour has struck, the dynamite has been set off, the flames are smouldering. A temper of fury is aroused in the North. Fort Sumter has been fired upon. The President calls for 75,000, militia of the states, than for volunteers. The war cloud has burst forth and is engulfing the nation.

And this is the picture I see. Lincoln is standing upon a balcony reviewing the troops. A tear is in his eyes. He sees professional men, merchants, laborers, artisans, old and young—many to return no more from the front. He turns away overwhelmed with the thought of horror, devastation, blood to be spilled like red wine, sorrow and death! With a clairvoyant insight he sees unfold before his eyes kinetoscopically the battle of Bull Run, with the defeat of the Stars and Stripes, and his heart is heavy; but courage with the victories of New Orleans and Williamsburg, Forts Henry and Donelson, fills his soul; he even dared to dream of peace when the Monitor put the Merrimack to flight; Manassas, the Seven Days battles follow in quick succession and the Union army is forced to retreat. The vision grows blacker and envelops his soul in its gloom when General Lee, who unquestionably was the greatest commander on either side, not excepting Gen. Grant or Stonewall Jackson, was called to generalship of the Confederate legion. Light dawned as he saw clearly the psychological moment to proclaim the emancipation of the black slave; a new impulse was given to the war; a new era in American history.

Once again the vision is overclouded for the North as Lincoln sees the ill-judged assault on the Confederates with awful destruction of life at Fredericksburg; then the heartbreaking defeat at Chancellorsville under Gen.

Hooker. The Stonewall at last is broken and Jackson "passed over the river to rest under the shade of the trees on the other side." And now the light must have illuminated his face as in quick succession he beholds the victories of Gettysburg, Vicksburg, Cold Harbor and the Wilderness. Petersburg and Richmond have fallen and Lee has surrendered at Appo-matow. Peace rings from the very hills as the vision slowly fades. Lincoln lends himself to the tremendous task and the vision was not in vain. A reunited nation, one flag and one God of all is the nature fruit of the thought, the energy, the prayer, the sacrifice, the blood and the loss of limb and life that entered so unselfishly into the greatest struggle of brother against brother that the world has ever known.

It is a glorious privilege to be accounted as an American citizen. No other land under the starry dome of heaven has evinced greater love and sacrifice on the part of its sons and daughters than has this blessed land of liberty. Stretching from the blue waters of the Atlantic, over the mountainous area of the Eastern states, with their teeming cities, through the vast territorial expanse of the American desert, over the gallant range of the Rocky Mountains, to the peaceful waters which wash the shores beyond the Golden Gates; and from the Great Lakes on the North to the Gulf of Mexico on the South—lies this the fairest of nations made sacred to all posterity by the manly sacrifices on the part of a liberty loving ancestry. Little wonder that our bosoms swell with righteous pride as we mark the advance of our domain, and note the ever widening influence of our national life. By the grace of God the American people have wrought well in the land of promise which the Lord bequeathed unto them. With the westward march of the sun their influence has extended to the very island of the sea and has made them to know a measure of the freedom which we are privileged to enjoy under the administration of the American flag. The growth of our institutions has been phenomenal; our natural resources being practically inexhaustible, have made us the custodian of vast wealth; our cities have grown from small and obscure townships to extensive centers of trade, controlling the wealth and the vote of our government. What Rome, with its teeming millions, its international influence, its colossal wealth, was to the ancient world, America is to the world of the twentieth century.

In the evolution of nations America has become the chosen people of God to work out a high standard of citizenship that shall prepare humanity for the sovereignty of the kingdom of truth to be established upon the earth. Theodore Roosevelt coined the greatest word before the American nation to-day—that word is, The New Nationalism. However much this very far reaching word may have been befogged by Mr. Roosevelt's Columbus speech, yet it is unquestionably the slogan of this political age. The new nationalism means a new kind of organic unity. Our nationalism is at a Relics of the Civil War.

Interesting Display in Show Window of Whitcomb & Faulkner.

Large numbers have been attracted this week to one of the show windows of Whitcomb & Faulkner's store on Main street, in which was displayed a number of relics of the Civil War.

A number of articles were shown by S. H. Wright of Pleasant street, who served four years in the 75th New York infantry, his contribution being three muskets, a knapsack, and a coffee pail, cartridge belt, etc., carried by him during his term of service. G. H. Justin of School street, Palmer, con-

SEVERE STORM FRIDAY.

Unusual Darkness, High Wind, Quantities of Rain.

FEARS THAT IT MIGHT BE TORNADO.

Streets and Sewers Flooded, Barn Struck and Damage Done in Many Places.

A storm, the like of which is seldom seen in this section of the country and which frightened many timid people and numerous others who are not usually timorous, visited Palmer last Friday afternoon.

The sun had been playing hide and seek with rain clouds all the afternoon, and it had sprinkled a little now and then, but the sun had come out bright each time and there was no thought of a serious storm. But about 4 o'clock the "thunder heads" began to gather and there were low mutterings in the distance. This storm paid little attention to Palmer, sweeping around from the northwest to the southeast and visiting Monson, where it rained in small torrents for a time and a number of the electric lights were disabled for a time. About 5 the skies darkened, the clouds assumed a cyclonic appearance, and the rain began to fall. It grew darker and the rain increased in volume. Wind came with the rain, and for a time it seemed as though there might be danger of a tornado. And still the rain increased. The streets became flooded in a few moments, and blown by the high wind volumes of water were swept along the ground in "sheets" which had the appearance of small ponds or lakes being moved bodily. Numerous of the streets of the village were miniature ponds, the water filling them from curb to curb, while down those which had a slope the water ran in a millrace. With it all there was a good deal of lightning and thunder, but none very near. The only damage reported in this vicinity was the striking of J. J. Daley's barn on Mount Dumplin, but no serious damage was done. The sewers already proved too small for the water they were called upon to carry, and this added to the amount in the streets. Some of the highways of the town were washed to some extent.

The house owned and occupied by Albert Dodge and family in Belcher-town was struck by lightning. The bolt entered the chimney, thence going into the parlor, smashing a looking glass and literally tearing the plaster from the walls. It then went to the cellar through a closet, leaving the contents of the closet uninjured. One of the children was stunned, but soon recovered.

In Warren the principal damage was done by the water, which washed the streets and roads so as to do several hundred dollars damage.

Child's Skeleton Found at Ludlow.

Another skeleton was unearthed at Ludlow last Friday morning by Road Surveyor Boucher. The bones found Friday were those of a child. An oblong stone was placed under the bones, which was entirely different from those in the gravel which is being taken out, and the theory is that possibly this stone was used to kill the persons whose bones were found. Some citizens thought that the skeletons found were those of Indians who made Indian Leap famous in history, but the bones found could not have been buried over 30 years.

WARE.

Death of Mrs. Catherine Moriarty.

Mrs. Catherine Moriarty, 78, died Sunday afternoon at her home on East street after a long illness. She leaves five children, Thomas, Maurice and Mrs. Mary Moriarty of Ware, Bridget and Katherine of Springfield. The funeral was held Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock. A requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. J. H. Murphy, pastor of All Saints' church. Burial was in St. William's cemetery. The bearers were Daniel E. Moriarty, John H. Hennessy, Patrick H. Moran, Patrick Moriarty, Thomas O'Rourke and Daniel Crowley.

A horse owned by Francis Chabotte of Maple avenue became frightened on Main street Friday and ran away. The animal was hitched to a democrat wagon, whose only occupant was a young boy. It ran through Main street to East Main street, where it was stopped.

John Harrison was tried before Judge H. C. Davis Tuesday morning on a charge of having maintained a liquor nuisance at his home on the Gilbertville road. He was found guilty and fined $50, which he paid.

Abused Horse In Holyoke.

Two Three Rivers Men Come to Trouble Sunday in Paper City.

Joseph Guillet and Geffron Dinelle of Three Rivers were arrested late Saturday evening in Rock Valley, Holyoke, for drunkenness and abusing a horse. They hired the team in Holyoke and proceeded to the suburbs, where their actions aroused the neighborhood and eight or 10 of the residents of that vicinity surrounded them and detained them until the arrival of the police. They were brought into court Monday and their cases were continued until Tuesday when Dinelle paid a fine of $25 for cruelty to the horse, and he was assessed $6 additional for drunkenness.

The Way of The Wind

By Martha McCulloch-Williams

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press)

The wind was the occasion—the cause lay much deeper. A tricky south wind, fitful and flaky, now sephyr-soft, now blowing in mad swirls; you simply could not count on what it might or might not do, especially to hats perched perilously upon newly brushed soft puffs.

Mildred had put on her undulant crown, manifestly false, but very becoming, with more than maiden pride. Anne, her elder sister, a distressingly truthful person, had watched her between criticism and admiration, and had ended by saying:

"You'd better wait for Harriet. Sure as you walk, if the middle path is so sheltered, you'll get to Elba a tag-rag."

Mildred had shaken her head, smiling an uneasy smile. She had planned to go in the gray auto with Harriet, her best chum. That was before Harriet had risen to heights of patronizing condescension—rooted apparently in Mildred's need of the favors done her.

No girl of spirit could endure that—not even though she knew the real root of the matter were trousers and answered to the name of Ellis Benson. He was fairly rich, more than fairly good looking, of an adventurous temper that had sent him around the world, ostensibly on business, but more for the sake of seeing sights and wonders. He had been wandering three full years, which in their passing had transformed Harriet and Mildred, the pig-tailed pair he had loved to pet and tease, into full-fledged young women. He had brought them strings of beads—turquoise for fair Mildred, coral for dark Harriet—and had not dreamed of anything but clasping the straws about youthful throats, and taking kisses in reward.

When he had actually made the gifts, presenting them stiffly, albeit his eyes twinkled, he had laughed inwardly—perhaps at his own former folly.

He liked them if they had grown up—and very nearly equally. But since Harriet had so much, Milly so little, he was rather inclined to do more for her. His kindly preference had set Harriet wild. All along she had had her mind set on marrying Ellis Benson. She was tired of the rich and tranquil countryside. She wanted a husband who would take her out into the thick of things. Further, as an only child and heiress, she had grown up rather spoiled, to think that the best of everything was her due. Mildred's charm for her had lain in a certain loving generosity, which made her not merely willing but eager to give Harriet, in everything, the first place.

Almost wrenching off her hat.

Benson had come home in midsummer. In September he had gone away for a while. Now in late October his aunt, Mrs. Lane, mistress of Elba, the show place of the neighborhood, was giving a garden party, which she called her chrysanthemum show.

Ellis was coming back for it—so much everybody knew. Therefore Harriet had ordered three new frocks for it, partly because she could not make up her mind as to one, partly also by way of triumphing over Mildred, who could do no more than make over her grandmamma's pink brocade. Time had softened it and, thanks to hobbie skirts, the pattern was ample. When at last the frock was finished, touched here and there with cobweb yellow lace, and wonderfully fitted to Mildred's lissome slimmness, it had truly an air of Paris, all the more that she had put into it the veriest glints of blue, exactly matching her string of turquoises. There was just a hint of the same blue amid the fluffy feathers of her wide-brimmed white hat. Altogether, when at last she was ready to go, Anne was not far wrong in saying, with a regretful sigh:

"It's a shame to let you waste yourself—looking as you do—but you always were too hard-headed for anything."

The middle path, the short cut to Elba, ran squarely into the main drive as it curved in from the highway. The path led over a stile in hedge, cunningly hidden by tall shrubs. Mildred had got safely over this stile, and was settling herself to walk the rest of the path serenely, when the wind flew at her almost wrenching off her hat, and wrenching her long coat so closely that she could barely move. She could barely move. She could barely move.

She could barely move. She could barely move. She could barely move.

She could barely move. She could barely move. She could barely move.

forward, head on, seeing no more of the way than the next step.

Thus, when the path ended in the main road, she ran plump into Ellis Benson—who had also come afoot—to his own amazement. He was thinking hard—Mildred bumped against him before he was fairly aware of her presence. He caught her gently in his arms, saying with a laugh:

"Has the sky fallen that I am catching a lark?"

"Why! I—it's the wind—and this—rubbishy hat," Mildred panted, putting both hands up to straighten the brim of her headpiece.

Ellis surveyed it critically. "It is—not exactly a walking hat," he said. "Now—why didn't you wait for your fairy godmother's coach-and-sixty horse power? A car, making its own wind, can beat this small disturbance hands down."

"Fairy godmothers went out with Santa Claus," Mildred said, blushing faintly, but trying to ignore the under-meaning of his words.

He shook his head at her. "A skeptic," he said sorrowfully. "What am I going to do about it? I want her to believe—oh, a great many things."

"What sort of things?" Mildred asked, still clutching her hat. "But wait and tell me after I have found shelter," she added, making to walk on.

The wind blew harder than ever. In her swathing skirt, she could barely mince, and even mincing she tottered. Benson steadied her, made himself a shield, and ran on:

"One is—the reason I went away. Did you really believe it was business?"

"I didn't know," Mildred said simply—but her heart was beating fast.

Benson looked down at her with a kindly quizzical smile: "It was—the greatest of all business," he said. "An effort to—know my own heart."

"Indeed!" Mildred vouchsafed, drawing a little away, in fear he might overhear the riot of her blood.

He nodded. "I need a wife," he said, dispassionately. "I knew it—the minute I saw you—and Harriet. Both of you seemed exactly made for me—yet, society is so narrow, I had to choose—"

"You were sure of us, I suppose!" Mildred interrupted.

He shook his head. "I was sure of—nothing," he said. "Not all the time I was gone—I came back as uncertain."

Here the wind took a stronger hand—blew and blew until perforce he drew Mildred well within his arms. The blast drowned the purling of a motor moving so laggardly one knew it must very soon stop dead. Stop it did, just level with the pair; a voice from within said, with an underacid note:

"Congratulations—if they are in order."

"They are," Benson said, gravely. "At least I hope so," lifting Mildred's hand to his lips. In her ear he added: "Darling, the wind chose for me. The minute it flung you in my arms—I knew."

Probably He Had To.

"A real smart lawyer can do almost anything," said Ald. Max Grass, in relating a certain court action. "It reminds me of a story."

"Some years ago, a man was arrested, charged with stealing a watch and chain. He engaged as his lawyer one of the best men in the city on criminal law."

"The man was brought to trial. Testimony was given by both sides. All material testimony by the prosecution was broken down by the attorney for the defense. When the trial ended, all that the prosecution had established was the fact that the watch and chain were missing."

"You are discharged," said the court to the prisoner.

"The prisoner stood irresolute. 'Do you understand?' asked the court. 'You are discharged.'"

"Still the prisoner stood mute. 'You are discharged,' again said the court. 'Is there anything else that you want?'"

"Yes, Judge," answered the man. "I would like to know whether or not I have to return the watch and chain?"

The Children

At Naples the tramway workers had struck; there was a long row of empty cars in the Riviera Chiala, while on the Piazza di Trionfo a crowd of drivers and conductors had assembled. It was a noisy, boisterous crowd of Neapolitans, as lively and mobile as quicksilver.

Higher than their heads, behind the garden fence, the glistening jet of a fountain hung in the air like a sword. The tramway workers were surrounded by a larger crowd who wanted to go by tram car to the various parts of the town. All these, clerks, artisans, petty traders, seamstresses, denounced the strikers in a loud and angry tone.

The strikers looked gloomy, and pressed against each other, hardly responding to the angry shouts of the crowd. They climbed upon the railings and cast restless glances into the streets over the head of the people.

The strikers resembled a pack of wolves surrounded by dogs. It was clear to everybody that these people, wearing the same uniform, were bound together by a firm resolve not to give in; and this infuriated the crowd still more. There were, however, philosophers in their midst who, while smoking away at their pipes, tried to pacify the more violent opponents of the strike.

"Eh, Signor! What is to be done if there is not enough money to buy macaroni for the children?"

"Wrangling, jeers, reproaches and admonition were suddenly cut short; a new current swept the crowd as if reconciling it; the strikers looked gloomier still, and pressed closer together. Voices in the crowd called out:

"Soldiers!"

With a light, dancing step from the Santa Lucia Quay came little gray soldiers, stamping their feet regularly, and mechanically swinging their left arms. They seemed to be made of tin, and as frail as factory-made toys.

The crowd drew back from the cars, the soldiers, like gray beads, became scattered alongside the cars; the strikers remained on the platforms.

The man in the silk hat and some others who surrounded him swung their arms wildly and shouted:

"The last time * * * Ultima Volta! D'you hear?"

The officer twisted his mustache, his head drooping. A man waved his silk hat and ran up to him, saying something in a hoarse voice. The officer looked at him askance, standing erect, and gave the word of command in a loud tone.

The soldiers in twos and threes began to jump on the platforms of the cars. At the same time the drivers and conductors were pushed off.

This seemed to amuse the onlookers, who broke out into laughter and whistling, which, however, only lasted for a moment.

People drew back from the cars, their faces wearing a longer and older expression and their eyes wide open with astonishment. They all pressed forward toward the front of the car.

Within a yard or two of the wheels a gray-haired driver with the face of a soldier could be seen, his cap off, lying on the rails. He lay on his back, his long mustache shooting upward. An adroit youth, with the movements of a monkey, laid himself down by his side; a number of others followed their example.

The man in the silk hat cried out something, the officer looked at him and shrugged his shoulders. He must replace the tramway drivers by soldiers, but he has no orders to wrestle with the strikers.

Then the owner of the silk hat, surrounded by people willing to please, rushed toward the fusiliers. The latter set off, approached those lying on the rails and attempted to lift them.

A struggle ensued. All the dusty crowd of spectators made a lurch and, howling, rushed to the rails. The man in the Panama hat pulled it off his head, threw it up in the air, and was the first to lie down by the side of a striker; he patted him on the back, and shouted something approvingly right in his face.

After him some gay, noisy people who had just come upon the scene began to throw themselves down upon the rails. They lay down laughing, making faces at each other and shouting something at the officer who, waving his gloves above the head of the man in the silk hat, was telling him something, shaking his hand—some head.

Others threw themselves down upon the rails. Women deposited their baskets and bundles, boys lay down laughing, doubling themselves up like dogs trying to keep warm, rolling over and getting dirty in the dust.

Five soldiers looked at the heaps of bodies under the wheels from the platform of the front car, then laughed convulsively as they clutched the railings and threw their heads up in the air. They were now quite unlike the tin, factory-made toys.

Half an hour later trams ran noisily along the streets of Naples; the victors stood on the platforms, grinning; some of them passed along the cars, calling out politely:

"Tickets!"

The passengers who handed them red and yellow slips winked their eyes, smiling and grumbling in a good-natured way.

Siske has always looked upon Palmer as the village containing the larger interest for him, and he has always been ready to assist in its welfare, with voice and purse, to the fullest extent of ability. For many years he has been a member of the Congregational church, and an attendant whenever his duties would permit.

Two children—a son, Dr. Harry Siske of Boston, and a daughter, Mrs. E. D. Tufts of Stafford Springs, Ct., (his wife died several years ago) are living, and it is with the latter that he will make his home. He will be missed by many, but will take with him an abundance of wishes for future happiness and a long life in which to enjoy the justly-earned bounty which is to be his.

WOMAN SICK TWELVE YEARS

Wants Other Women to Know How She Was Finally Restored to Health.

Louisiana, Mo.:—"I think a woman naturally dislikes to make her troubles known to the public, but complete restoration to health means so much to me that I cannot keep from telling mine for the sake of other suffering women."

"I had been sick about twelve years, and had eleven doctors. I had dragging down pains, pains at monthly periods, bilious spells, and was getting worse all the time. I would hardly get over one spell when I would be sick again. No tongue can tell what I suffered from cramps, and at times I could hardly walk. The doctors said I might die at one of those times, but I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got better right away. Your valuable medicine is worth more than mountains of gold to suffering women."

—Mrs. BERTHA MUFF, 503 N. 4th Street, Louisiana, Mo.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

We challenge anyone to name even one other medicine that has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The New Nationalism.

very low ebb. Out of this deplorable era of campaign mud-slinging will evolve the new national consciousness. We must lay aside all personalities and face the live issues at hand. It is not so much a question of whether Mr. Taft is a Christian gentleman above the temptation to be influenced by the Lorimers, the Cannons, the Aldriches or the Guggenheims, nor yet whether Mr. Roosevelt is spurred on by a reckless and ruthless ambition; it is not so much whether the President is reactionary and is not carrying out the Colonel's policies, nor yet whether the recall of the judiciary will menace the Constitution. But it is a vital question before the American people to-day if the new nationalism is to spell organic unity with sex equality and economic justice.

This is the greatest political era since the Civil war. The armies of that great struggle did not know that they were fighting themselves into a new union stronger than ever had been known before. Roosevelt and Taft are by their bitter strife developing the new nationalism. The North and the South did not know that they were establishing the stronger union, and they did not intend it, but that is what they did. They were just like the rest of us, they did not know what they were fighting for. But some mighty power transforms our foolishness and our sins even. We in our selfishness cannot defeat in the end the good which is omnipotent.

And this is the organic unity of the past. In the veins of the American people courses the blood of the highest types of life of all the nationalities and races of the world. The English Puritan with his democratic ideas merged his life with the French Huguenot with his profound aspiration after God; the Dutch with his sterling quality of manhood, the German with his love of philosophy and truth, contributed to our national life a quota of strength, to which was added the sweetness of the Scotch and the vigor of the Irish. From out of the womb of this combination of diversified life sprang the American citizen. We are proud of our Irish statesmen—they used to dig our ditches, but they have graduated into politics—our German philosophers, our Italian musicians—all Americans under one flag. We are glad that the strong men and women came to our shores in the wake of the Pinta and the Mayflower. Washington, Jefferson, Patrick Henry, Clay, Lincoln, Grant, Sherman, Lee, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, LaFollette, represent the American product transplanted, bred and fostered from the heart of the old world.

But Europe to-day is sending us the scum of her populace. The cream of the foreign nations does not seek our shores. Millions of Slavs, Italians, Greeks, Poles, Bohemians, Turks, Russians, Jews enter the harbors of New York and Boston every year. Here is our vexing problem. What of the new kind of organic unity? This is our new nationalism—to amalgamate this heterogeneous mass of humanity. How shall we Americanize them? They are not the most desirable citizens—we sent 14,000 back to Europe last year—they they are living souls. It is high time to talk less of the Mayflower—the aristocracy and blue blood—for according to the lineage traced several thousand claim to have come over on that little ship—and think more of our brothers from across the seas who have taken to our shores. These children of the old world can teach us much—the Slav, his lesson of patience, the Italian, his message of open mindedness; the Jew, his thrift and faithfulness, the Negro, his lessons of courage—and you cannot match his exquisite music. But these immigrants lack culture, are morally weak and depraved, poor financially and have little understanding of the significance of democracy. We cannot hope for race unity, but the new nationalism demands an attempt at race reciprocity. We are responsible to teach this heterogeneous mass of humanity, numbering over three quarters of a million per annum, as a direct result of immigration, the sacred meaning of our American inheritance.

The new nationalism connotes a more deeply rooted democracy. A tremendous economic and sociological struggle is imminent. A wave of socialism is sweeping the country. The day must come when the sovereignty of the people will be respected. Whether "Teddy" will give the people a chance to live is simply begging the question. Roosevelt's interference in the great coal strike was hailed as a demonstration that the people are still supreme. The truth is that the supremacy of the people is almost gone. The privileged interests are becoming more and more dominant. Labor is not receiving an equitable share of the prosperity of the times. One third of one per cent of 90,000,000 citizens practically control the mines, land-grants, forests and natural resources. The trusts make the prices of the very commodities of life. Capitalism is controlling the government. The dissolving of the Standard Oil Company has not vitally benefited the people nor materially checked the power of

Memorial Day Exercises.

The Usual Program Followed. Address on "The New Nationalism."

The program carried out by the Grand Army in its observance of Memorial Day was much the same as that of recent years. The members of L. L. Merriek post gathered at the Grand Army hall at 8 in the morning; accompanied by invited guests and escorted by the Sons of Veterans, the Thorndike band furnishing music, they marched to Thorndike street, where electric cars were taken to Three Rivers. After a march around the common they proceeded to the Three Rivers cemetery, where, after prayer by Rev. C. B. McDuffie and singing by a quartet, composed of Erford Corbin, F. L. Jones, C. L. LeGro and James Summers, the graves of soldiers buried there were decorated. The graves in St. Anne's cemetery close by were also decorated. At Four Corners prayer was offered by Rev. C. C. Gorst of Thorndike, the quartet sang and the graves were decorated. The company marched through Thorndike and then took the cars for St. Thomas' cemetery, the next stop. From there the company returned to Oak Knoll cemetery in Palmer, where Rev. J. H. Palmer offered prayer and the Grand Army ceremony in memory of the unknown dead was held. After forming in line and starting for the hall, the company halted at 12 o'clock in Thorndike street and stood with uncovered heads while the church bells were tolled for five minutes. At Memorial Hall a dinner was served by the Woman's Relief Corps.

Daniel J. Mahoney.

Commander of L. L. Merriek post, G. A. R.

The public exercises took place at 2 o'clock. There was singing by the quartet and readings by Mrs. Ada Murdock Hill of Southbridge. The orator of the day was Rev. Otto S. Raspe, pastor of St. Paul's Universalist church of Palmer, who took for his subject "The New Nationalism," which is printed in full in another part of this paper.

Repairs Are Badly Needed.

The condition of the approaches to the Main street bridge over the Boston and Albany railroad tracks has caused much comment of late. That it is in a dangerous condition there is no gainsaying, and the only wonder is that there has been no claim for damages by pedestrians. The street railway installed a new bridge in the winter, raising the grade somewhat and disturbing the sidewalk approaches to the structure. The grade has never been made up nor the walks repaired as they should be. There is a decided drop from the bridge to the walk, and numerous persons have taken tumbles there, though fortunately none have been seriously hurt. This good fortune cannot be expected to last however, and trouble is likely to occur at any moment until the conditions are remedied.

May Have Extra Officer When Needed.

The selectmen at their meeting Wednesday evening gave Officer Crimmins permission to employ another officer on Saturday evenings, or any other time when he deemed it necessary, for patrolling the streets in the evening. With the advent of warm weather the evening crowds on Main street have increased to such an extent that more than one officer is a frequent necessity.

Death of Charles M. Calkins.

Charles M. Calkins, 64, died at his home on Wilbraham road Monday morning at 7 o'clock after several weeks' illness. Mr. Calkins was born in Monson, in the house where he died. Twelve years of his life were spent in Warren. He enlisted October 8, 1864, in Co. 8, 11th Maine regiment, and served one year, being discharged October 8, 1865. He is survived by a widow and nine children, Mrs. E. A. Hitchcock of Wilbraham, Mrs. Arthur Bowker of Monson, Mrs. W. R. Akers of Boston, Mrs. Albert A. Lyman of Syracuse, N. Y., John Calkins of Yonkers, N. Y., Herbert, Raymond and Esther Calkins of North Wilbraham. Mr. Calkins was a member and senior vice-commander of L. L. Merriek Grand Army post, and the members of the post attended the funeral in a body. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30. The members of L. L. Merriek post attended the funeral and acted as bearers. The Grand Army burial service was performed at the grave. Burial was in the family lot in East Wilbraham.

Death of Miss Carrie B. Burdick.

Miss Carrie B. Burdick, 42, died Tuesday morning at 11:10 of pneumonia after a short illness. Miss Burdick was born in Monson, where she attended the public schools and later went to Monson Academy. She lived in Monson until about eight years ago, when she came with her mother to Palmer. Miss Burdick was a member of Good Cheer lodge of Rebekahs and the Woman's Relief corps of Palmer, also of the Odd Ladies of Southbridge. She is survived by a mother, Mrs. Martha C. Rurdick; three sisters, Mrs. Isaac Ramsdell of Monson, Mrs. George L. Gates of Cushman, Mrs. Charles Wetherell of Holyoke, and four brothers, George B. Burdick of West Upton, Arthur J. Burdick of Philadelphia, Pa., James J. Burdick of Monson and William H. Burdick of Palmer. Funeral services were held at the home this afternoon at 1:30 and were private. Rev. Otto S. Raspe of the Universalist church officiating. Burial was in No. 1 cemetery in Monson.

Death of Mrs. Alice M. Smith.

Mrs. Alice M. Smith, 69, died at her home on Thorndike street Friday evening at 8:40. She had been in ill health for some time. Mrs. Smith was born in Deysbury Eng., and came to this country with her parents when 13 years of age. She settled in Holden, where she was married to the late John H. Smith, who was associated with her father in the manufacture of shoddy. They removed to Palmer in 1875, where Mr. Smith was engaged in the same line of business. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Smith carried on the business successfully for some years, finally selling to the Grosvenor Woolen company. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Herbert M. Moulton of Biddeford, Me., and Miss Ida M. Smith of Palmer. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at her late home, Rev. O. S. Raspe, pastor of St. Paul's church of which she was a member, officiating. The body was taken to Holden Monday for burial. The bearers were E. B. Taylor, J. H. Palmer, C. K. Gamwell and E. W. Carpenter.

Small Fire Sunday Morning.

The automobile fire truck, in charge of Assistant Engineer Taylor, accompanied by a few of the men, hustled down to Blanchardville Sunday morning to a blaze in a small house on land near C. T. Brainerd's place, owned by Mrs. Carrie Blanchard. The building was occupied by Fred Capen, who had placed a can of gasoline too close to a stove. The building and contents were a total loss, but Mr. Capen saved his clothing and a sum of money. The fire was prevented from spreading to the timber adjoining.

At Work on Permanent Highway.

The committee appointed to have charge of the permanent highways which the town is to build this year has secured the services of Walter Charles of Boston as engineer, and he has begun work. The grades of the streets to be improved are being established, and when this is done specifications will be made and bids asked for.

Lamp Exploded.

A lamp in the home of H. W. Forsman of Blanchardville exploded Tuesday evening, scattering the burning oil about. Some of the furniture in the place was partially ruined by the fire, but strenuous action on the part of the inmates extinguished the flames before serious damage was done.

E. Goodes is painting his house on Pine street.

Dr. G. A. Moore has sold his automobile to Dr. S. O. Miller of Three Rivers.

Wiseman Court, M. C. O. F., will hold a social whist in Memorial hall next Tuesday evening.

A band of gypsies passed through the town Wednesday afternoon, but annoyed no one and soon passed on to the east.

At the meeting of the school committee Tuesday evening it was voted to give the schools of the town a vacation for to-day.

been awarded to C. T. Brainerd of Palmer, the lowest bidder.

Thomas lodge of Masons has accepted an invitation to attend divine service at the Congregational church in Thorndike June 23, St. John's day.

A home missionary meeting was held Wednesday afternoon at the Congregational church. The subject was "The church and social questions."

A still alarm called a few of the firemen to a chimney fire in the Harrington house on Walnut street Wednesday morning at 8:15. It was extinguished without damage.

The Hampden County W. C. T. U. will hold a convention in Mittineague Tuesday, June 4th. An interesting program has been prepared, with a gold medal contest.

Albert H. Houghton, 63, died at the town farm Friday night. The funeral was held from Phillips' undertaking rooms Tuesday morning at 10, and burial was in Oak Knoll cemetery.

The Captain's Daughter

Disgusted is no word in which to describe Miss Betts' condition of mind the other day when she found she was to share her stateroom on a south-bound steamer with Miss Phillis Brown. She clenched her elderly fists and grit her elderly teeth and betook herself to the purser's office.

"There's a woman in my stateroom," she announced acridly, "an' you can jest put her somewheres else. I don't want to have a stranger in the room with me."

"I'm sorry, madam, but it can't be helped. The boat is so crowded," said the purser.

"I wouldn't of come at all ef I had a-know'n I'd have some other horrid passenger in the room with me," snickered the wizen little woman.

"Oh, she isn't a horrid passenger," soothed the purser good naturedly. "You'll like her when you know her."

"Think so?" sniffed Miss Betts sarcastically. "You don't know me."

"Perhaps not," responded the purser, who knew Miss Brown's father. "But there are few ladies who could help liking the captain's daughter."

"The captain's daughter!" exclaimed Miss Betts, somewhat mollified. "It might be an advantage to know the captain's daughter."

"It will be a great advantage," said the purser confidently.

"She'll sit at the captain's table, of course, an' she'll know all the ship's officers, I s'pose. An' maybe she'll take me round an' show me the whole ship an' I never was through a ship in my life," remarked Miss Betts, musingly. "Oh, well, I guess she can stay," concluded the little woman, now completely restored to good humor.

Then she bobbed away with her little mincing steps and returning to her stateroom made herself pleasant in her own peculiar way to Miss Phillis Brown, whom she found sitting on the edge of the lower berth, gazing in her handbag for a box of candy. "It'll be real nice to have company," remarked Miss Betts ingratiatingly. "I s'pose you won't mind taking the upper berth. I ain't so spry as I was."

"I won't mind at all," assented Miss Brown.

"Do you think your father'd approve of your eatin' that candy just before puttin' out to sea?"

"I don't think he'd mind," replied Miss Brown. "Won't you have some?"

"Oh, Lor, no! I'd be sick as two cats ef I was to eat it. Does your father ever git seasick?"

"I believe he does sometimes," responded the young lady, looking curiously at Miss Betts. "Why do you ask?"

"Oh, nothin'. I just wanted to know," said Miss Betts. "I s'pose you have the run of the whole ship," she continued.

"No more than any one else," repudiated Miss Brown, again looking curiously at her new acquaintance.

Miss Betts raised her already highly arched eyebrows, till they were almost among the roots of her sparse but she merely said: "Well, any mebbe you'll be able to take me round and show me the interestin' parts of the ship. The galleys an' the bridge an' the engine room," she concluded vaguely.

"Yes, indeed," responded Miss Brown, "I'll show you all I can." Later on she kept her word nobly and patiently walked the little old woman about the ship, telling her all she knew of ships in general and of this ship in particular.

But her explanations did not apparently satisfy Miss Betts, for that night, as they were retiring, she remarked: "I should a-thought your pa would a-taught you all there was to know about ships."

"He has told me a lot about them," replied Miss Brown.

"Well, there was lots of things you couldn't tell me about this one an' seems to me you might of. An' down to the saloon, when we was at dinner, we didn't sit at the captain's table at all."

"Were you going to?" asked Miss Brown.

"Was I goin' to? Of course I was goin' to. I thought that was one of the privileges of roomin' with the captain's daughter. That's what I understood. I should think your father would want to have you sit with him at table an' I should think he'd introduce you to all the ship's officers."

"I'm sure I don't know what you're talking about," returned Miss Brown, with a bewildered look. "My father doesn't know any of the officers."

"Well, he's a funny captain, then, not to know the officers of his own ship!"

"I think you must be dreaming, Miss Betts!" exclaimed the girl. "My father has nothing to do with this ship nor its officers nor with seating the passengers at table. My father happens to have served in the Spanish war and held the rank of captain. He never set foot on this ship that I know of."

"Then the purser lied!" snapped Miss Betts indignantly.

Yet the purser had not lied.

May and May Not.

Monson Academy was easily defeated by Williston Saturday afternoon at Easthampton, 7 to 1.

The Hampden baseball team met its first defeat of the season in a game with the Oakland team of Springfield at Hampden Saturday afternoon. The score was 7 to 6.

The Palmer high school nine is feeling pretty "cocky" because it defeated the Monson Academy second nine 13-11 Wednesday. Monson made five in the first inning and six more in the third. Palmer began with two in the fourth, then four in the sixth, one in the seventh and tied the score with two in the ninth, then adding two more for safety in the extra inning.

In the games yesterday, Thorndike won from Three Rivers in the morning game at Thorndike by the score of 6 to 4. The afternoon game between Bondsdsville and Palmer at the latter place, was called at the first of the sixth inning because of the rain, the score at that time being 5 to 3, in favor of Bondsdsville. The game reverting to the fifth inning left the score 3 to 3.

Death of Michael Sullivan.

Michael Sullivan, 74, an old and widely known resident of Thorndike, died Friday morning at his home on Main street after an illness of several days. The funeral was Sunday afternoon from St. Mary's church at 2:30 o'clock, prayer being offered by the pastor, Rev. P. J. Griffin. Burial was in Thorndike cemetery. The bearers were Thomas Sullivan of Rhode Island, Joseph Cadoratt of New Hampshire, Dennis Dunn of Palmer, John Dunn, Thomas Donahue, James Cread of this place. The deceased is survived by a widow, two daughters, Mrs. Annie Connor of Thompsonville, Ct., Mrs. Joseph Cadoratt of New Hampshire, and three sons, Thomas of Pawtucket, Daniel and Patrick at home.

Miss Katherine Sugrue and Miss Elizabeth Sullivan spent Sunday with friends in Springfield.

George La Duke entertained a couple of fishermen friends from Hartford at his home over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Trumble and children of Springfield were guests of relatives here Sunday.

THREE RIVERS. FIRE DISTRICT.

Will Request Be Made For Part of the Town's Present Apparatus?

The question whether the fire district which is to be formed will request that a portion of the town's present fire fighting apparatus be located in this village has been heard a number of times, and there is no little speculation as to the course to be pursued, and the officials to petition. The district will have to have a house for its own apparatus, and there has been a suggestion that a request be made for the location of the steamer here. With this suggestion comes the query how this could be accomplished. As the present location of the apparatus was decided by vote of the town, and the building erected especially for it, it is probable that a vote of the town would be necessary to locate it permanently in some other place.

But so far as can be learned, there is no intention on the part of those interested in the formation of a fire district in making any such request. It appears to be the intention of the inhabitants of the district to furnish their own fire protection without calling on the balance of the town for help. The plan is to lay a line of pipes to sections not now protected, and install hydrants. It is then expected that arrangements will be made with the Palmer Mill Company for water in case of fire. The company is well equipped to do this, having powerful fire pumps located within its plant. With such an arrangement the need for the steamer or auto truck will be very much less than at present.

Surprise Visit.

Must Have Been Work of Art.

Critically the friend of the artist regarded the weird conglomeration of color which stood on the easel before him. He stepped back, bent forward, looked at it sideways, and twisted his head in all directions.

"What do you think of it?" questioned the aspiring R. A.

"Good! Very good!" his friend answered. "It's a perfect portrait; only—ah—I should be inclined to criticize one little detail. The original is scarcely so red in the face as you have painted him."

The artist gasped.

"What on earth are you talking about?" he asked.

"Your picture! It's your uncle, of course!"

"My uncle?" cried the amazed wielder of the brush. "That—that my uncle? Why, it's the sunset. Don't you see the title, 'Sunset and Evening Star'?"—Answers.

"Say, you know how fastidious Briggs is?"

"Yes."

"Well, he gets wild whenever the Maitland girl, she's his fiancée, eats corn off the cob. She found out how he felt about it, and the other evening at dinner at the club she tried to cut the corn from the cob. Briggs noticed this and smiled approvingly, but just then her knife slipped, the cob popped nimbly onto Briggs' shirt-bosom, the plate skidded, the gravy bowl went over and all the cut oil kernels showered themselves dangerously near the gorgeous corsage of that very stout Mrs. Singleton Mink."

"And what did Briggs do?"

"Say, Briggs was game. He called the waiter, handed him the cob, and said, 'Francis, this corn popped from the plate just now. I didn't order popcorn. Bring the other sort, Francis, and make it cobless, please.'"

Few men know enough not to give advice.

Curious Annamese Customs.

Mme. Gabrielle M. Vassal, the wife of a French doctor, who was attached to the Pasteur Institute of the Nhatrang, a little village on the coast of Annam, relates some of her experiences. When she and her husband arrived at Nhatrang they were received by the native servants, who saluted and squatted on the floor for a long period, this being their method of greeting Europeans. Servants had the curious habit of washing all dishes under the table; never on its top. Men and women dressed alike, wearing trousers and tunics, and women on the way to market with their baskets always walked in single file.

Interesting Race.

The Cholo Indians of Peru are a simple, docile people, although semi-savage in the rural districts. They have the usual characteristics of mountaineers, poetical temperament, tinged with melancholy and tainted with superstition. They are extremely hardy and courageous. A Cholo will make long and fatiguing journeys, abstaining altogether from food for days at a time, sustained almost solely by the cocoa leaves, which are chewed in the same manner as the Kaffirs in South Africa eat the kola nut under similar circumstances.

Studying Thunderstorms.

It is announced that a thunderstorm observatory has been established in Spain, in which atmospheric discharges, both local and distant, are detected graphically and acoustically. A wireless telegraph instrument is used for this purpose, because each lightning discharge is accompanied by electro-magnetic waves similar to those used in wireless telegraphy.

Gilley's Generosity.

"Did the Gildeys have much trouble in arranging their separation?" "No. At least, not until they reached the child. They have but one child, you know." "How about the dogs?" "That was easy. They had two dogs." "I see. Well, what did they do?" "Why, Gilley suddenly developed a streak of generosity. He took the child and let his wife have both dogs."

Somewhat Contradictory.

Briggs—It is positively absurd to talk about a "money power" in this country. There is no such thing. Waggs—I'd just like to discuss that with you. Have you got a minute to spare? Briggs—Not a min. I've got a note due at the bank, and they're bothering me to death about it.—Life.

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake if You Follow This Advice

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are common symptoms of kidney trouble, and you should seek a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use. It has cured many stubborn cases in this vicinity.

Can Palmer residents demand further proof than the following testimonial?

Mrs. G. H. Taylor, 23 C. Church St., Thorndike, Mass., says: "I willingly confirm all I said in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills when I publicly endorsed them some years ago. I was in misery from kidney complaint and I was unable to turn in bed without grasping something for support. I was rarely free from pain and I knew that something must be done. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills I obtained a box and the first few doses had a beneficial effect. I continued taking this remedy, and before long I was free from pain and enjoying good health."

Men Favored to Teach Girls.

Arguments as to whether men or women should be employed to educate girls are being heard a great deal nowadays. Many women think men teachers exert a greater influence on girls and make them do more studying. Others contend women teachers have a more refining influence. "I am tired," said one man, "of the constant demand for women as governesses for girls. I am convinced governesses have a narrowing influence on girls, whereas well-trained men have a broadening mental influence. It is true the majority of studies may be taught more effectively by men and that their minds are more logical. It is true women may have greater tact, more sympathy than men, but in the training of children the man's mind, being broader, has a more lasting influence."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Reaching a Compromise

Putting Jeffrey Webber and style together in one thought would have struck all his friends as a most startling act of lunacy, something in the light of touching a match to a bundle of excelsior and daring it to burn.

All his life he had shied at neckties on the theory that if the beneficent powers above had dowered a man with chin whiskers it was rank extravagance for him to adorn himself with unseen finery. Likewise he could not understand the blind foolishness of masculine individuals who turned from celluloid collars which one could wash daily and thus save unnecessary laundry bills. As for clothes—they were merely required for covering.

This, then, was the problem. Antoinette Webber had to wrestle with when she came back from boarding school and began to get the family arranged for her wedding.

Being a woman, her mother was quite amenable to new ideas, but when Antoinette tackled Jeffrey he figuratively stood up on his hind legs and roared a war cry.

"Dress suit!" he choked. "Me! At my age! Cracky! Never!"

"Now, father," Antoinette began soothingly, quite as though she held a tablespoonful of bitter medicine in one hand and was prying open his teeth with the other, "I want you to look your best when Horace and his friends get here."

"Look my best!" her father roared again. "Dressed up like a monkey on a stick!"

"And you've got to wear a tie," Antoinette broke in, firmly.

They revived Antoinette's father with tender care, but he never was the same man after that. He gloomed around the premises, surveying with a hostile eye the housecleaning preparations for the coming wedding and he developed a jumpiness at everything unusual and suspicious.

Antoinette was in despair. She was marrying into rather a fashionable family and the thought of Horace's college friends and his family arriving to find that while her father had a heavy bank account he had no sense of sartorial values was a tragedy.

"Horace and his party won't get here till the day itself," Antoinette told her mother in one of their hopeless conferences. "They won't notice dad so much then, but in the evening, at the wedding—mother, I'll just die if he wears that baggy old gray sack suit and his celluloid collar and no tie!"

"Then I'm afraid you're due to die daughter," said Mrs. Webber, who had been married to Antoinette's father long enough to know.

"I won't!" snapped Antoinette, with the blind faith of youth in its powers. "I'll manage it somehow. I'm not going to have the only wedding I'll have in my whole life spoiled by father's ridiculous stubbornness!"

She and her father eyed each other warily toward the last, like gladiators before the fight. Her father ostentatiously bought a new celluloid collar and a fresh ten cent collar button and a new pair of calfskin boots.

The day of the wedding Antoinette's father, the only incongruous spot in a refurbished, decorated house, filled with frills and fluff, went upstairs to get ready for the evening's fray. Laying out his new collar and collar button and simply tossing his old gray clothes over a chair, he stepped into the bathroom for his ablutions. He was absent 20 minutes.

When he came back to his room he blinked. On the bed were spread some strange black things. The coat was low cut and had long tails. Patent leather pumps stood fiendishly beside a pair of silk socks. There were also some weird stand-up linen collars and a box of white ties and a large bosomed shirt. There was nothing else in the way of clothes in the room.

Nobody paid any attention to his ravings and poundings, for everybody was dressing the bride or was getting dressed. Choking, gasping, hectic with rage, Antoinette's father danced in his bathrobe, picking a finger now and then at the hated garments.

Finally the wedding went on. Everybody was present but the bride's father. After the ceremony and congratulations the bride herself headed a search party for him.

Holding her trailing satin skirt in one hand, Antoinette, accompanied by Horace, ran him down at last in the most secluded corner of the haymow. There he sat, hunched up, smoking a pipe fiercely. He had on the clothes, swathed, bunched around him, the dress shirt and the high collar and all—but the collar button gleamed defiantly between the strands of his whiskers, proclaiming his last stand—no necktie! He glared at his daughter and his newly achieved son-in-law.

"Father," begged the bride tremulously, "come down, please! It's time to go in to supper. There's scalloped oysters and—"

"I've put on these clothes," her father interrupted her sternly, "because I'm a law abiding citizen and you took the others away, but I'll be everlastingly goldfamed if I'm going to exhibit myself in 'em before sensible human beings! If you want the wedding check I've written out for you, Antoinette, you see that I git them oysters and other dewdads right out here."

So they compromised on that basis.

Help thyself, and God will help thee.

The Peeved Bill Clerk

"We've got a new boarder at the house," said the bill clerk, as he dexterously trundled his stool into position and perched himself. "His name is Timothy Hayseed, and he's from Squash Center. He'd have stayed there, but the cows were always mistaking him for something to eat and he got bitten up quite badly."

"How interesting," remarked the cashier. "A very odd name, isn't it?"

"Well, I won't say that his surname is enough name," the bill clerk kindly explained. "But it ought to be. He's the worst jay you ever saw. He's got freckles all over his nose and—here's the joke:

"At breakfast he asked the landlady for another plate of cakes. Honest! And when she asked him if he wouldn't like anything more—sardastic, you know—he says, 'I believe I'll have another piece of steak, please.' Just that way. And he'd jabbed two pieces when the dish went around. He's looking for a job. I think we ought to make room for him here."

"Did the old lady throw the coffee pot at his head?" asked the cashier.

"She ought to have," replied the bill clerk, with a grin. "It's a wonder she didn't."

"She didn't then?"

"Of course, she didn't," said the bill clerk.

"You don't mean to say that he got his plate of cakes and his steak?" demanded the cashier. "Surely not?"

"Of course, he did," answered the bill clerk. "Did you suppose she'd tell him he'd had all she could afford to give him? What kind of a joint do you think it is?"

"Well, well," said the cashier. "No doubt it would be rather remarkable if the good woman objected to supplying more food than this rustic person paid for."

"Oh, I guess he didn't get any more than he paid for, if you come to that," said the bill clerk.

"The strange thing was that the young man should ask for what he wanted then?" queried the cashier. "Is that it, Johnny?"

"If you knew the old lady, you'd think it was," said the bill clerk.

"And he got the cakes—and the steak," said the cashier. "He certainly must be a blockhead. If he'd kept still he'd have had the pleasure of leaving the table hungry, in all probability."

"It's to be hoped he will learn; if he doesn't, it's hard to predict what will become of him."

"To begin with, he'll go around asking for a job, I suppose, and he'll keep on asking until he gets it, instead of politely waiting for the job to come to him. It's quite evident that he hasn't any delicacy whatever. Think of a young man—with freckles on his nose, too!—asking busy people to give him work, just because he happens to want it. Shameful!"

"Well, if you think it's all right to put your feet in the trough, you can," muttered the bill clerk.

"I'm not sure that it isn't all right, if you happen to be a hog and your associates are hoggish," said the cashier.

"I'm not casting any reflections on your boarding house," he continued. "I merely want to call your attention to the fact that this is a cold, cruel world. It isn't enough to look hungry; you've got to holler for grub, and that in no uncertain tone. If you do that it's a hundred to one that you'll get it."

"Your friend, Mr. Timothy Hayseed, is making a pretty good beginning, if you ask me. When he gets his job, he'll ask about anything he wants to know and then he'll ask for a raise of salary."

"That's all the good it would do him if he worked here," remarked the bill clerk.

"You can't ever until you try," said the cashier. "After he's got most of the knowledge regarding the business," he continued, "he'll ask for a partnership, and he'll naturally get that."

"In course of time he'll ask the other members of the firm to retire, and they will gracefully skidoo. If they don't, he'll scoop in a majority of the stock and kick 'em out."

"Having accomplished this, he'll ask the principal firms in the same line of business to consolidate with him and allow him to direct their destinies, and they will do so."

"Then he will consider that his industry is entitled to a little special legislation of the fostering order, and he will ask for it. If he can put up the right kind of an argument to the commission, he'll get what he asks for."

"Put up' is good," commented the bill clerk. "So all you've got to do to be the head of a trust is to ask for another plate of buckwheat cakes when you are a young man. Is that it?"

"You're putting it the wrong way, Johnny," answered the cashier. "Not every young man who asks for a second helping will arrive at the eminence that I speak of, but if you take notice you will find that there is no trust magnate who is congenitally bashful about asking for anything that he thinks he wants."

"I was under the impression that they took what they wanted without asking," said the bill clerk.

God's mills grind slow but sure.

LISZT'S CONTRIBUTION TO ART

Writer in Scribner's Magazine Declares It to Be the Extremest Element in Music.

This wandering piano player of Hungarian-Austrian blood, a genuine cosmopolite, taught music a new charm, the charm of the unexpected, of the improvised. The freedom of Beethoven in his later works and of Chopin in all his music became the principal factor in the style of Liszt. Music must have the shape of an improvisation.

In the Hungarian rhapsodies, the majority of which begin in a mosque and always end in a tavern, are the extremes of his system. His orchestral and vocal works, the two symphonies, the masses and oratorios and symphonic poems, are full of dignity, poetic feeling, religious spirit, and a largeness of accent and manner. Yet the gypsy glance and gypsy voice lurk behind many a pious or pompous bar. Apart from his invention of a new form—or, rather, the condensation and revival of an old one—the symphonic poem, Liszt's greatest contribution to art is the wild, truant, rhapsodical extemporé element he infused into modern music; Nature in her most untrammelled mode he interpreted with fidelity. But the drummers in the line of moral gasoline who controlled criticism in Germany refused to see Liszt except as an extemporé virtuoso... a perverter of art.—Scribner's.

Swiss English.

Swiss English always seems designed to round off the scenery with the touch of humor. For years the best in the writer's collection has been an inscription by a path leading to a waterfall near Meiringen, which explained that a toll was necessary for "the fondation and untainting" of that path. Until last month, however, there was nothing quite equal to the Strasburg cathedral notice: "Express interdiction to circulate during divine service. Beadle have to preserve order." But Switzerland has at least tied with Germany now in the collection. In a certain Oberland valley, too unspoiled yet to be given away by name, there is a series of gates which bear a short request in Oberland German to the wayfarer to close them. And twice it is translated into English "Shut up!"—London Chronicle.

Moth Balls in the Orient.

"You will find strange names for ordinary things in the Far East," said an American who has recently been in those parts.

"When I struck Singapore I had a lot of heavy clothes with me which had been necessary on a journey across Siberia. I decided to put them away in a trunk, but thought I would get some moth balls from a drug store."

"Moth balls?" repeated the chemist with a stare.

"Why, yes; those things that you put in clothes to keep moths out," I explained.

"Oh," he said, intelligence showing in his eyes, "you mean aphthalated marbles."

Fred Lennox, spending the summer in Chicago, took a flat close to a railroad, which he surrendered for a week's occupancy. "I think I could have become used to the trains going by in the night," he said, "but every morning at eight o'clock two engines came under my window and rehearsed until noon."

He Never Will Was Too Understand Original

Mrs. Bruce put down the letter in a flutter of excitement. Her face was flushed with pleasure and her eyes sparkled with anticipation. She hurried to the telephone, but just as she laid her hand on the receiver she changed her mind.

"No, I'll have the fun of telling Dick face to face," she said to herself.

The thought of his surprise and delight quickened her feet on the stairs as she ran to her room to dress for the street. All the way downtown she pictured her husband's amazement and pleasure in the news she had for him. She determined to make him guess a few times before she told him.

It was with some difficulty that she modified the illumination of her beaming face as she entered her husband's office. He must not suspect at first that she was the bearer of such good tidings. As it happened, he was busy telephoning when she approached his desk and he merely nodded as she sank into a chair by his side. She had therefore plenty of time to compose her features. So it was with quite a successfully grave face that she greeted him when he finally ceased his telephonic conversation.

"Well, dear?" he began. At the same instant the telephone bell began also, and in another second he was deeply engrossed in a conversation that to Mrs. Bruce seemed to have lasted fully ten minutes.

"Dick, I came down to—" she said when at last he hung up the receiver. "Just a minute, Lucy. I've got to call up Bentley at once and tell him of this matter that Hardwick was phoning me about."

After Bentley had been put in possession of a long list of facts and details that to Mrs. Bruce were about as clear as so much Sanskrit her husband again turned to her with a welcoming smile.

"This morning, Dick, I received a letter from—" "Ting-a-ling, ting-a-ling," rang the telephone. Its insistent demand for his attention promptly brought Bruce's ear to the receiver.

"By George, is that right?" he exclaimed after he had listened a minute. "It's a pretty big deal, isn't it? Well, you'll have to go to Hardwick for the figures. Yes, we can send over our more data. Yes, certainly, I'll ask him. Don't mention it. I have plenty of time. No trouble whatever." He hung up the receiver.

"That was a chance to do the great Amalgamated company a little favor," he said smilingly to Mrs. Bruce. But before his hand had left the receiver he changed his mind and took it down again. Then followed a long and diplomatic appeal to Hardwick. Mrs. Bruce sat through it patiently, buoyed up by the thought of the perfectly delightful surprise she still had in store for her husband.

Once more the receiver was hung up on its hook and Bruce, swinging around in his chair, said, "Going shopping, Lucy?"

"No, Dick, I came down especially to tell you—" Then the loud ring of the telephone drowned her voice.

"Hullo. Yes. Oh, Mr. Bonthorne! Very glad to hear from you. Why, yes, I think so. No trouble at all. I have the whole project mapped out here in my desk. Yes, if you wish, I can read off the main points for you."

Bruce drew a thick package of papers from a pigeon hole and began to read slowly and carefully numerous paragraphs and long lists of figures. Mrs. Bruce gave his back a despairing glance, fidgeted for ten minutes and then, rising quietly, slipped out of the office.

Half an hour later she called up her husband on the telephone from a dry goods store. Somewhat to her surprise the line was not busy and she got the connection at once.

"Is this you, Dick?" "Yes, Lucy. Where in the world did you disappear to? I was dumfounded when I turned from the phone a minute ago to find you gone. Why didn't you wait?"

"Because I came downtown purposely to tell you something. I got a letter from Mrs. Morse today. She says that she and Mr. Morse are going to California in their private car week after next and they want us to go with them. Mr. Morse thinks that will give you a chance to visit the San Francisco agency. He's going to write you or call you up on the long distance, but Mrs. Morse said she couldn't wait to tell me of the plan."

"Fine!" said Bruce. "But, Lucy, why in the world didn't you tell me it when you were in the office? It takes my breath away. I don't see how you could keep it to yourself all the time you were over here."

"Don't you, really?" returned Mrs. Bruce, laughing.

When he found that she had broken the connection Bruce said to himself, "Well, if I live to be a hundred and seven I'll never understand women."

He Might. "Dinkie wouldn't take a dollar that didn't belong to him, no matter how hard up he was."

"Suppose he had a chance to take a million dollars?"

"Ahem! Well, Dinkie is a man of spirit."

One on God's side is a majority.

"Good evening," said the young man in fervent tones, as the young woman on whom he was calling entered the room. "I just thought that I'd drop in and ask you to marry me."

"I will not!" declared the young woman after she had caught her breath. "Why, Arthur Lewis! The idea! What do you mean by—"

"I thought so," said the young man, resignedly, sitting down and staring at the polish on his shoes. "There isn't a girl on earth who is mentally advanced enough to appreciate common sense or admire novelty. They all want the same thing in the same way at the same time! I suppose if I led you into a dim corner and held your hand and gazed into your eyes with an expression of deep emotion and adoring worship, and had said, 'Madeline, my heart's darling! Listen! I love you!' you would have fallen on my neck—"

"I don't understand you!" interrupted the young woman, breathing rapidly. "I don't understand you at all! I don't see why you should assume that I'm in the least anxious to marry you."

"I don't," explained the young man. "I wouldn't be so rude and conceited. I merely assumed that you would marry me if I asked you—and I've asked you, and you say you won't."

"I must admit," went on the young man, "that I am both surprised and pained. I feel that you have been leading me on all this time just to amuse yourself, and I must say that I didn't think you were that kind. I—"

"I don't think you are very nice," declared the young woman, "to come here and call me names and act as though I were to blame about something! I'm not in the habit of believing that every man who calls on me wants to marry me, and—"

"Now, Madeline!" interrupted the young man decisively, "that sounds very pretty and ladylike and no doubt you think it is so, but it isn't. In the bottom of your heart you know that when a man calls three times on a girl she begins sizing him up as a possible husband, and if she thinks he won't do, she gets rid of him. She has a headache when he calls, or she has another engagement when he asks her out, or she forgets appointments with him. You've not done a solitary one of these tricks! You've let me come and acted glad to see me—and you've ducked engagements with others to go places with me, and you've cooked indigestible things in the chafing dish at weird hours and urged them upon me, and otherwise given me to understand that you didn't exactly hate me. Naturally, from all this I deducted—"

"I don't understand you at all!" cried the young woman. "I think you are acting perfectly horrid, and you ought to apologize!"

"Oh, of course," said the young man. "I know if I had wanted to be dishonest with myself and you I could have wrung tears out of my eyes and murmured things about not being worthy and not daring to reach so far above me and called you an angel—but really, you know, it's six of one and half a dozen of the other, and we'd make a good married couple. However, you must admit, Madeline, that you get an edge on your temper occasionally—just as you have now, for instance. Still, I can handle that. You could do far worse than marry me. Do you love any one else?"

"No!" said the young woman. "But that doesn't mean that I care two straws about such a conceited individual as yourself!"

"You should," he persisted. "You can't deny that you've been fond of me up to this moment. What's wrong all of a sudden?"

"You are!" she told him. "Totally!"

"Strange," murmured the young man. "Say, I bet what you're mad about is the way I did it— isn't it?"

"I never heard of such a proposal," she informed him. "You might have been offering to sell me a book or asking for a contribution to something! Any girl would say no!"

"Well," said the young man with a sigh, getting up, "it's too bad, and I'm awfully disappointed. I won't bother you any longer—"

"There's no need to hurry," said the young woman.

"What's the use of staying?" he asked, bitterly. "I've got a broken heart, and you don't love me, and—"

"I—I never said that," murmured the young woman. She looked away.

"It's just as I said," the young man told her two hours later when affairs were permanently settled. "Girls insist on all the artistic finish on these little affairs. I was too abrupt!"

Many Uses for New Invention. The microphone, in a modified form, is being used successfully by a French inventor to find springs of water, and they have been located as far as fifty feet underground. It is expected that the instrument will be of much value to miners, prospectors and others in similar occupations, as well as in locating victims of mine accidents. A tube is thrust into the ground a few feet and the improved microphone attached to the upper end, when noise made by flowing or falling water is plainly heard.

BRIMFIELD.

Death of Mrs. Augusta Moore.

Mrs. Augusta Moore, 57, of Brimfield died in the Springfield hospital Wednesday after a short illness. She had been visiting friends in Springfield, when she was taken ill, and was removed to the hospital but five days before her death. Mrs. Moore was born in Glencoe, N. Y., the daughter of John L. and Elizabeth Fonda, and had lived most of her life in Hudson, N. Y. She had resided in Springfield for a short time and for the last six years had lived in Brimfield. She was a member of the Brimfield Congregational church and of Brimfield Grange. She leaves three sisters, Mrs. Evelyn Neufus of Springfield, Mrs. Martin Coleman of Melville, N. Y., and Mrs. Alice Herick of Brooklyn, N. Y., and two brothers, C. W. Fonda of Schenectady, N. Y., and Robert A. Fonda of New York city. The body was taken yesterday morning to Pittsfield and the funeral was held in that place.

Death of Mrs. Sarah W. Dyer.

The body of Mrs. Sarah Wales Dyer, the widow of Clinton W. Dyer of Worcester, was brought to Brimfield Sunday afternoon for burial in the Wales family lot. A brief service was held, Rev. William Jennings officiating. Mrs. Dyer spent many of her girlhood days in Brimfield, where she was married to Clinton M. Dyer of Worcester. All of her married life was spent in the latter place, where Mr. Dyer died six years ago. She leaves a stepson, Charles J. Dyer, who is at present abroad, and two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth T. French of Newtonville and Mrs. Charlotte P. Chamberlin of Boston.

Mrs. Martha Streeter is confined to the house with rheumatism.

Miss Rebecca Lincoln has had a concrete walk put in from the house to the street, the work being done by C. F. Newton of Springfield.

Albert Brown has gone to the commencement exercises of the New York Military Academy at Cornwall-on-Hudson. After the exercises Raymond D. Haskins will return with Mr. Brown to spend his vacation.

The Brimfield Grange held a children's night Tuesday evening. The entertainment consisted of readings, instrumental and vocal music, "A dream of an American traveler," and Robert Sherman with his noted wax figure.

Smile Counts.

Every one likes to see a smiling face and to smile becomingly one must cultivate a cheerful and sympathetic condition of mind. The face wreathed in smiles is like a perpetual sunshine in a house. It is irresistible and conquers all hearts. A smiling mouth loses half its charms if the eyes do not correspond; for the eyes are the windows of the soul, and the smile that lies only about the lips soon dies away, leaving an indifferent spirit to survey and chill the world. Cultivate the art of smiling not with your lips, but with your eyes. Every one can have laughing eyes. They are not a matter of inheritance, nor can they be acquired with the aid of the masseuse and the professional beauty specialist. Love is a great transformer. The sternest features may be softened, the hardest natures humanized by love.

Utilizing Intellect and Reason.

We have intellect—we possess reason. Let us, therefore, make these two servants work to discover for us the true way whereby we may scale the heights and plumb the depths of understanding, so that we may reach that summit of attainment which is ours by divine right, and where dark, loathsome pessimism has no place.

Real Charity.

"Johann, please go to the pawnbroker's and pawn my gold watch. The poor man, I understand, is not getting much business, and I think we should help him along!"—Fliegende Blätter.

A WOMAN'S BACK

The Aches and Pains Will Disappear if the Advice of This Palmer Citizen is Followed

A woman's back has many aches and pains.

Most times 'tis the kidney's fault. Backache is really kidney ache; That's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it. Many Palmer women know this.

I read what one has to say about it.

Mrs. William H. King, 406 Main St., Palmer, Mass., says: "I had kidney complaint for years and was steadily growing worse. I was rarely free from a dull, bearing-down pain in my back and the kidney secretions bothered me. My head also ached and I had dizzy spells. Finally my husband obtained a box of Doan's Kidney Pills for me at Lynde & Gould's drug store and I began their use. They restored me to good health, and at that time I gave a public statement, telling of my experience. It is a pleasure for me to confirm all I have previously said in praise of this remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—DOAN'S—and take no other.

Little Trick of Humanity. It is a brave and agreeable trait in human nature that makes people lie about the distance they have walked.—Folson Young in Saturday Review.

Proof of It.

"And do you really think that so much danger can lie in a kiss as the papers say, doctor?" "Certainly. One of my friends had a terrible experience. As the result of a single kiss he married!"—Journal Amusant.

She Helped Him. A shy young man once said to a young lady: "I wish, dear, that we were on such terms of intimacy that you would not mind calling me by my first name." "Oh," she replied, "your second name is good enough for me."

For the Rich.

If thou art rich then show the greatness of thy fortune; or, what is better, the greatness of thy soul in the meekness of thy conversation.—Sterne.

Good Drink for Invalid. Toast and water, which is an excellent drink for a feverish invalid, may be made much more palatable by the addition of a well-baked apple and little sugar and a slice of lemon peel. These should be put in at the same time as the boiling water; when cold, strain.

Affliction.

Affliction, like the ironsmith, shapes as it smites.—Hovee.

WOMEN SHOULD BE PROTECTED

Against So Many Surgical Operations. How Mrs. Bethune and Mrs. Moore Escaped.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Murrayville, Ill.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a very bad case of female trouble and it made me a well woman. My health was all broken down, the doctors said I must have an operation, and I was ready to go to the hospital, but I was so that I began taking your Compound. I got along so well that I gave up the doctors and was saved from the operation."—Mrs. CHARLES MOORE, R. R. No. 3, Murrayville, Ill.

Kindly Intentions

The first time Holpeter saw the dog he walked on rapidly and tried to think of something else. Memories of past benevolences in the canine lines and their resultant troubles prompted him to adopt this course. All his life Holpeter had been seeing homeless dogs, and even he had reached the point where he realized that it was not always well to have too acute a vision.

Further, this particular dog was not at all the sort of dog a sane person would care to see. It might have been almost anything in the line of dog except a Mexican hairless, because it was so grimy and matted that its original style of architecture and decoration was quite obliterated. But Holpeter had caught a glance from its eye that struck him. He turned up his fur collar and dug his hands farther into his pockets and strode on, frowning.

"I came near bringing a dog home," Holpeter told his wife at dinner that night.

"My goodness!" cried she. "I should think you'd have more sense!"

"Oh, I was just joking!" Holpeter made haste to say. "We can't have a dog in a flat."

The next morning as he he walked down the street Holpeter saw the dog again, shivering in the mouth of an alley, tail between legs.

"Good boy!" Holpeter said recklessly and snapped his fingers.

The dog put forward one shivering paw and then huddled back. It was too cold evidently to risk the effort which might end in a rebuff.

That noon in the midst of his hot lunch Holpeter choked. "Bet it hasn't had a square meal for weeks!" he growled.

"Huh?" said the man who was talking to him.

"Nothing at all!" Holpeter snapped.

The next morning in his pocket reposed a neat little packet of meat and bones and Holpeter was terribly concerned when the dog was not at the usual alley. He found the beast a block away, however, and gave him the food. He stood watching it eat and was run into by six men inside of a minute.

"Say," Holpeter broke out to his wife that evening, "he'd be a fine little fellow if he had a bath and was fed up!"

Mrs. Holpeter, with wifely intuition, jumped the conversational gap and guessed right the first time. "Henry," she said, "I wish you'd get that dog out of your mind! Do you remember the collie you brought home which ate up your aunt's new sealskin and lost you a legacy?"

"Well, there are no more legacies to lose," said her husband cheerfully. "And if you could see his pathetic eyes!"

Holpeter each morning began to get anxious when he was a block away from the alley frequented by the dog. If he failed to see it he hung around to wait for it. His efforts to further his acquaintance with the little beast went for naught. The dog had stood so much abuse that its suspicions were deep.

Finally on a day which was so cold that ice cream would have tasted like a hot drink Holpeter threw caution to the winds.

"It's a shame," he said, "to think of that nice little dog freezing to death and starving and nobody willing to put out a helping hand! I'm going to take him home and fix him up!"

Fired by this virtuous resolve, Holpeter left work an hour earlier than usual that afternoon to search for the friendless pup. When he saw it and whistled it edged away.

"Poor chap!" Holpeter said. "It doesn't know I'm his friend!"

The dog ran across the street and Holpeter followed, narrowly escaping the wheels of an automobile and followed by the lavish remarks of its chauffeur. Once on the sidewalk the dog started to run and Holpeter broke in to a gallop. The woman whose handbag he carried away on a coat-sleeve button in his haste protested so vociferously that Holpeter, quite unconscious of his crime, was forced to stop because of the crowd that harassed him.

Everybody told the policeman that Holpeter was trying his best to get away because they saw him dodging and running! It was an exceedingly cold evening and the policeman was not in a pleasant frame of mind.

Holpeter got home at 11 o'clock that night and told his impassioned story to his wife.

"Well," she said when he had ended his harrowing tale, "what became of the dog?"

"Dog!" roared Holpeter. "If he has any sense he's running yet!"

A Stilted Living.

Thousands of men in England earn their living during a considerable portion of the year by their ability to walk and work on tall stilts. Most of them are employed in the hop fields, where they have displaced the high stepladders formerly in use. During the pole stringing season the stilt workers, 12 feet from the ground, perform the work with ease and without loss of time or motion. A trained stilt-man will do the work of four men working with stepladders, it is said.

Taking Notice.

"At what age, doctor," asks the caller, "do women begin to notice the men?" "Well," replies the great savant, "on that point there is a difference of opinion among the authorities. Some of them assert that the female child notices the opposite sex when one day old, while the rest claim she does not until she is at least 48 hours old."—Chicago Post.

China's National Tree.

The national tree of China is the tung, a wood oil tree. The oil is procured from the seeds of its fruit, which is like a hickory nut, but as large as a small orange. The tung affords a fine shade, and its wood is prized by makers of musical instruments. It is thought the tree would flourish in our southern states.

WILBRAHAM.

Death of Theodore L. Jones.

Theodore L. Jones, 64, died at his home in East Wilbraham Saturday afternoon of heart failure. He had been sick two weeks, but refused to call a doctor until a week ago. The physician advised Mr. Jones to go to a hospital, but he refused, preferring to stay at home alone. One of his neighbors called upon him several times a day for a week. He found him in a serious condition Saturday and summoned Dr. Damon. Mr. Jones died about half an hour later. He leaves a widow, whose whereabouts are unknown; also three brothers, George J. and Charles D. of Springfield and Munn C. of Worcester. Mr. Jones was born in Wilbraham, and spent most of his life there. The body was taken to Phillips' undertaking rooms in Palmer. The funeral was held Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock and burial was in the East Wilbraham cemetery.

PALMER NEWS.

Grammar School Graduation.

To Be Held This Year in Opera House,
Next Friday Evening.

The graduating exercises of the ninth grades of the grammar schools of the town will be held next Friday evening in the opera house in Palmer; the program will begin at 8.15, in order to accommodate those who come on the cars from the villages. Each graduate will be given two tickets for his parents, and seats for them will be reserved. The balance of the auditorium will be open to the public, and everybody is cordially invited to attend.
The program will consist of a number of selections by the school chorus of about 60 voices, and about five recitations by members of each of the four schools. Care has been taken in the selection of the subjects to give a wide range, including both the classical and the humorous.

The graduation this year will be a marked change from that of recent times. Some years ago the schools had individual examinations, but customs crept in which the school committee deemed it wise to eliminate; so the policy of a joint graduation, with a speaker to address the graduates, was adopted and followed for several years. This will now be abandoned for the original order of things.
One reason for the change is that there is now no school in the town—with the exception of that in Thorndike—which has an assembly hall; hence some other place for graduation must be provided.

Fireworks Regulations.

To Be Under the Supervision of Fire
Chief Summers This Year.

The selectmen have adopted the usual regulations concerning the keeping, sale and discharge of fireworks, and have placed the oversight of them for the entire town in the hands of Chief Summers of the fire department.

Under these rules fireworks may be sold only on the third and fourth days of July, between the hours of 4 a. m. and 11 p. m., and may be discharged on July 4 between the hours of 4 a. m. and 11 p. m. only; it is also ordered that no explosives are to be placed on tracks of the street railway company.
All persons who desire to keep and sell fireworks, are required, by the regulations of the District police, to make application on a blank prepared for that purpose; if the request is granted —and the requirements as to the nature of the place in which they are to be kept are strict—a permit is granted, specifying the place where they may be kept and sold. Permits cannot be granted for rooms in which especially inflammable articles are kept or sold, the list including dry goods, tobacco and cigars, and numerous others.

Street Lights Go Bad.

Ground Burns Out One Machine at Station. Repairs Made.

The electric street lights began to give trouble last Friday night, and have not been right since. Manager Parsons of the electric company says that the trouble has been due to a ground on the line to Warren, which was so great that one machine was burned out and rendered completely useless. A new one which was awaiting installation was put into service, and the company has been doing the best it can to keep the service at as high a degree of efficiency as possible under the conditions.

The Warren lights have been connected with a machine which also run the street lights in Palmer, and which has been greatly overloaded. Since the trouble Friday men have been at work changing the lights in the villages to the five-lamp Tungsten clusters; the work is nearly completed, and it is expected that the street lights will be all that are required of them by to-night. The change eliminates them from the Warren circuit, and they can be run independent of that line.

The Bay State Drug Store has installed an electric ice cream freezer, and is now making the ice cream used at its soda fountain.

Street Railway Modifies Bundle Rule.

The recent rule promulgated by the street railway company against the carrying of bundles in cars raised such a storm of protest—or perhaps the interpretation which was put on it by various conductors was responsible—that the company has modified it to a considerable extent. The matter is now left much to the discretion of the conductor. If the car is not crowded he will permit the carrying of a much larger package than he will if there is "standing room only" and little of that. In matter of dogs the company will now issue permits for their transportation at certain times, the time and the condition of the car load having the same effect as on bundles.

Firemen's Memorial Sunday.

The Palmer fire department will observe its memorial Sunday next Sabbath. The members and all connected with the department are asked to meet at the engine house at 1.30 in the afternoon. A special electric car will follow the regular 2.15 car to the St. Thomas cemetery at Palmer Center, where the graves of seven former members will be decorated, after which the company will return to the engine house on Park street. There will be singing by a quartet, and it is expected there will be a short address.

Materials For Grand Trunk Work.

Skeptics who have questioned whether the Southern New England railroad from Palmer to Providence would ever be built will be interested in knowing that two carloads of machinery and two carloads of horses for use on the work arrived yesterday.
The horses were taken to the barn recently built on the "Keith" farm east of the village. The machinery is for the use of the contractor for the concrete work.

Brook Trout and Fingerlings.

Twelve large cans of brook trout were received yesterday at the Forest Lake hatchery and transferred to their new quarters. They came from the Sandwich hatchery in charge of Chief Deputy Orin C. Bourne, and made the trip in good shape. A consignment of 28,000 frye from the Adams hatchery was received to-day, to be raised to the fingerling size.

the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational church will be given in the

Swift, contralto soloist; Miss Marion Swift, violinist; Miss Dorothy Birch-ard, organist. The program will be a varied one, and will begin at 8 o'clock.

Examination For Postmaster.

A civil service examination for the position of postmaster in Brimfield will be held to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock in the rooms of the Palmer Business and Social club. The examination will be conducted by David J.
Brown of the Palmer office.

The attention of the district court this morning was occupied with three vagrants who were arrested for riding on freight trains on the B. and A. One was discharged and two were given 30 days each.

The Christian Endeavor society of the Baptist church will hold a lawn party on the evening of the 19th on the parsonage lawn. Ice cream, cake and punch will be on sale. If stormy, it will be held the next pleasant evening.

The Central Vermont railroad announces a change of time for the 24th, when a new train—the Seashore Limited—will be put on. It will run daily between Montreal and New London, and will leave Palmer going south at 5.35 a. m., and going north at 10.15
p. m.

A row which started on South Main street Sunday promised for a time to develop into magnificent proportions, but the arrival of an officer rather diminished the ardor of the disputants, and after one had been sent home that section of the town resumed its usual calm once more.

A reader sends the Journal the following and asks a decision as to whether he is right or not. We pass it along to our other readers for their opinion: "I had a dispute the other day; my opponent does not believe in color blindness, but I do. For instance:
When is brown not brown? When Mr. Brown comes over to this country and is green."

Housekeepers whose stock of table linen needs replenishing, or who are looking for bargains in sheets, pillow cases, blankets, etc., will be interested enal pre-inventory sale of these goods, as well as all the varied lines of merchandise which this store carries.

The Ladies' Society of the Baptist church will hold a sale and supper in the church parlors next Tuesday.
There will be a sale of food and aprons at 3 in the afternoon, and tea will be served; any person bringing a pair of old rubbers will be entitled to a cup of tea. In the evening at 7.30 there will be an entertainment, at which the admission will be a pair of rubbers or a small fee in cash.

A service in memory of the sailor dead was held in Memorial hall Sunday afternoon at 4. The exercises

Relief corps, in charge of the patriotic instructor, Mrs. Agnes M. Dimock. A quartet composed of F. L. Jones, Erford Corbin, C. Ralph Lett and
James Summers sang several selections.
Miss Lillian Kempton recited "The Unknown Dead," and Master Myers

Hobson delivered the address, and singing of America.

Dinner Adventures

Young Mrs. Wilton hurried guiltily through the dusk. This was the third time within a week that she had attended a reception and remained so long that her conscience, if not her husband, reproached her.

"I'll stay at home tomorrow and get up a regular dinner, frills and all," she promised herself, penitently.

The dining room clock chimed half-past 5 as she opened her door. There was no time to change her dress, so, slipping a big apron over her finery, she flew into the kitchen.

There she put on the kettle, turned the heat on full blast under the oven and in ten minutes more was flipping biscuits into buttered pans.

She flew in and out of the kitchen and the dining room with the beautiful quickness and sureness that sometimes comes as a result of a happy, restful, worry free day. She felt somehow that dinner would be good, even though it was hurriedly prepared.

It was. The steak was broiled to perfection, the biscuits were so flaky that even Mrs. Wilton was astounded. The coffee had percolated itself into some sort of nectar.

"Say, young lady," Wilton remarked as he buttered his fifth biscuit, "this is a dinner that must have been inspired. Why—" helping himself to more steak and mushrooms, "it's a regular poem!"

"Oh, this isn't what I call a regular dinner," declared Mrs. Wilton, dimpling. "I got in rather late from Mrs. Bentley's this afternoon and so I didn't fuss. But tomorrow we are going to have a dinner that will take your breath away. I have the outline of it already in my mind, and you may bring that Mr. Ridgely home with you if you want to."

"Well, if you can beat this dinner you're a wonder. Of course, I'll bring Ridgely. I've been advising him to get married when he's kicked about boarding house meals, and a meal like this one will certainly clinch my arguments."

Directly after Wilton's departure the next morning Mrs. Wilton sat down and put the outline of the dinner on paper. Everything worked out so smoothly and looked so well when written down that she felt as if the dinner was already half prepared.

Her mind was easy when she picked up one of the new magazines. The stories were interesting. When finally she turned from them she discovered that it was too late to get several of the dinner essentials in time for them to be prepared properly.

With a good deal of reluctance she rearranged the dinner. As she was on her way to the telephone to order the new dinner materials the door opened and Mary Powers ran in, dazling in her bridal finery and fresh from a European honeymoon.

The sunny afternoon melted away and when Mary Powers had vanished young Mrs. Wilton stood in the middle of the floor and an awful foreboding flooded her soul. She had forgotten for the second time to order the makings of that dinner!

One wild look at the clock told her that the last delivery boy had gone on his last round. There wasn't even time for her to dress and run out after the necessary things.

A sick fear came upon her and she whispered hoarsely: "There's not a thing in the house!"

Her feet were dead weights, her head was incapable of thought and her hands moved incessantly in maddening purposelessness.

Away up on the emergency shelf, where in a spirit of joking security her husband had put them, was the proverbial can of salmon and the pound of prunes. In the icebox were four sad little chops. And she baked biscuits, sad little biscuits, and a cake, a pitiful-looking cake. It was then past dinner time.

She arranged this harrowing feast, turned the lights low and waited.

When an hour that seemed eternity had slipped away and her head was throbbing like a dynamo the door opened gently and a conscience-stricken Wilton appeared—alone.

"Where's Mr. Ridgely?" asked Mrs. Wilton in a far-away voice.

"Why, you see, Bess, I—well, I'm frightfully sorry that I forgot about your magnificent spread tonight, but I had an out-of-town caller—Cheney, you know, my best customer—and I forgot about time. We missed my regular train, and Cheney couldn't stay over, so I didn't try to get home. We had supper in a restaurant. I'm awfully sorry, girl, but—"

Mrs. Wilton began to clear the table with cheerful rapidity.

"Never mind," she said, "I worked pretty hard over this dinner, but it can't exactly be called an inspired repast."

Man and the Rat.

Man and the rat go everywhere and eat everything. They are the two creatures that dwell in houses and travel in ships. Each drives its other rivals to the wall, but neither, except locally and for brief periods, has ever come near to exterminating the other. The use of cement is greatly facilitating the fight going on against the rats.

Diamond cut diamond.

From Lucile's Diary

That Malcolm Cox, my erstwhile suitor, was married and to an eastern girl whom I had never even seen struck me as so droll that the moment I received the announcement of the wedding I determined to be the first one to entertain them when he brought his bride home to Chicago.

I decided to have them to dinner with just Uncle Bob and Betty to meet them, as I thought a small, intimate party would be the most friendly.

My invitation was answered by a rather stiff little note from the bride. I took it to mother, thinking she would be amused by its primness. She read it and then cast one of her reproachful glances at me.

"Why, Lucile," she exclaimed, "is it possible that you invited company to dinner Saturday night? Didn't you remember that we are all going out to your Uncle John's farm for the week end?"

"That's so; I had quite forgotten it," I said. "I'll have to stay at home, though."

"But I've promised Tilly a few days' vacation at that time and so even if you do stay at home I don't see how you can give a dinner party. I do wish you would consult me before you issue invitations."

"Oh, dear!" I sighed. "It seems to me that whenever I try to have a little pleasure something goes wrong."

"Well, dear, don't feel so badly," said mother, seeing the tears in my eyes. "Surely, you can postpone the dinner."

"No, I can't; it would be too awkward, for I don't know Malcolm's wife at all. But if Cousin Fannie will only stay at home from Uncle John's she and I can get up a nice little dinner and maybe Betty would bring her maid to wait on the table."

"Fannie is so fond of the farm that I hate to ask her to give up the outing," said mother, in her undecided way.

"Oh, I'll ask her, mother," I returned. "She would enjoy going to the farm just as much some other time, I'm sure."

Saturday morning when grandmother and father and mother were leaving the house father was greatly surprised to find that Cousin Fannie and I weren't going to the farm with the others.

"Lucile had an engagement for tonight and Fannie is going to stay and act as chaperon," explained mother.

"I don't like it at all," grumbled father. "Lucile, is this one of your—"

"Don't scold me, daddy, dear," I interrupted him. "I simply have to keep my engagement. If it weren't for that I'd just love to go to Uncle John's with you. Next time you must surely take me. Anyway, I am saving you a little money by not going. The return trip fare is $5, isn't it? If you'll just give me that amount, I won't have to ask you for anything extra on this week's allowance, as I was afraid I'd have to do."

He handed me a $5 bill. "I can't quite understand your system of finance," he said as he kissed me goodbye, but he laughed and I felt glad that his vexation had passed away. I think I understand father even better than mother does.

A few minutes after the family left, Betty telephoned me that she and Uncle Bob had just got my note asking them to dinner, but they couldn't come for they had promised to go out to the farm also. She said she wished that I had invited them earlier so they could have arranged to come, as she wasn't very keen on going to the farm.

"It's too bad you can't come, but I'm sure you'll enjoy the visit to Uncle John's," I said comfortingly. "By the way, dear, will you please tell Molly to come over this afternoon in time to help set the table?"

"Yes," she snapped, as she hung up the receiver. Betty's manners are ungracious, to say the least.

The dinner was very good. I made the mayonnaise and whipped the cream for the dessert. Malcolm seemed very much impressed when I told him that I had prepared the dinner myself with Cousin Fannie's help.

"You are adding cooking to your other accomplishments," he said. "That's what my wife is going to do, aren't you, dear?"

"Yes," she answered quietly.

She was very quiet, indeed, and the more Malcolm and I talked and laughed over some of the good old times we used to have the stiller she grew.

I really don't see how Malcolm ever happened to marry such a glum little creature with no vivacity.

She scarcely smiled even when I related how, when attending a house party once, Malcolm and I ran away by ourselves late one evening for a moonlight row and in our haste to get into the boat, I fell into the water and he carried me, dripping, back to the house, where every one thought him quite a hero for rescuing me, for they didn't know that the water was only a foot deep where I fell. We laughed heartily at the recollection, but she merely turned to Cousin Fannie and asked in her stilted way if she was found of boating and such things.

Poor Malcolm! I fear his marriage was a mistake.

BONDSDVILLE.

Dancing at Forest Lake this Saturday evening. Music by Collins' Novelty Singing Orchestra of Marlboro. Grand Free Concert Sunday.

Bond-Richards.

Miss Laura L. Bond, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus L. Bond, and Reese J. Richards of Palmer, oldest son of Mrs. Elizabeth Richards of Fairhaven, Vt., were married at the home of the bride Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Rev. L. L. Beeman of West Brookfield, a former pastor of the bride, officiating. The single ring service was used. The maid of honor was Miss Alice Bond, sister of the bride, and Edwin E. Brooks of Palmer was best man.

Miss Anna May Keefe of Jacksonville, Florida, and Rufus L. Bond Jr., brother of the bride, were flower attendants. The ceremony was performed in the large living room under an arch of mountain laurel and swamp pinks. The bride's gown was of white satin cut en traine, with a Spanish directoire coat, and she carried a bouquet of 19 white roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor was gowned in blue satin and she carried a bouquet of pink carnations and marguerites. Before the ceremony Miss Alice Clark of Thorndike and Arthur Hanson of Worcester played "O Promise Me" and as the bridal party were entering the parlor the wedding march from Lohengrin was played. The music during the ceremony was "Hearts and Flowers" and for the recessional Mendelssohn's wedding march. Following the reception a wedding supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Richards left about 8 o'clock in an automobile amidst a shower of rice and confetti for parts unknown. Although a very quiet wedding there were many handsome presents from friends. The bride's going-away dress was a tailor made blue serge. Only the immediate families of the bride and groom were present, the bridegroom's family being represented by Mrs. Elizabeth Richards and Miss Richards of Fairhaven, Vt., other out-of-town guests being Frank Collins of Holyoke and Rev. and Mrs. L. L. Beeman of West Brookfield. After a wedding trip of a week Mr. and Mrs. Richards will make their home with the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Bond, until fall, when they will reside in Palmer. An interesting incident is the fact that four years ago Monday the bride's sister, Miss Florence Bond, was married to Andrew Cordner, the same clergyman officiating.

Death of Mrs. Thomas Shea.

Mrs. Mary Shea, 41, of Bondsville, wife of Thomas Shea, died Friday afternoon in Mercy Hospital, Springfield, after an illness of a few days. She was taken to the hospital early in the week and her condition was not regarded serious. During the last two days of her life she grew gradually worse and failed to rally. Her body was brought to Bondsville Saturday and taken in charge by Michael Sullivan, the undertaker. Mrs. Shea was born in Springfield and moved to Bondsville 38 years ago; 15 years ago she was married to Thomas Shea and had lived in this vicinity since. She leaves beside her husband, two sons, Francis and Irwin, and three brothers, Thomas Callahan of Bondsville, Patrick Callahan of Westfield and Michael Callahan, who lives in the vicinity of Boston. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from St. Bartholomew's church, Rev. Thomas Kennedy officiating. The bearers were Michael Donohue, John Lynch, Richard Baker, Maurice Flaherty, John Garvey and John Kennedy. The burial was in St. Thomas' cemetery, Thorndike.

Mrs. Fred Alden of Belchertown was a guest Monday of Mrs. Charles Collis

No Sewer System This Year.

Firemen to Be Paid. Hampden Avenue Bridge Matter Unsettled.

A special town meeting was held in Memorial Town Hall last Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and a good number of voters attended. A total of $3250 in appropriations was made.

The most important article—which was relative to the construction of a system of sewers in town—brought out much discussion but was finally passed over without an action being taken. Dr. G. E. Fuller, E. N. Howlett and A. D. Norcross spoke at considerable length upon the subject.

It was voted to raise and appropriate the sum of $200 to repair and resurface the concrete walks around and in front of the town hall.

It was also voted to appropriate the sum of $500 to be used by the tree warden in spraying the elm trees.

It was also voted to pay the regular firemen the salary of $15 a year, and 30 cents per hour for active service; $750 being appropriated for this purpose.

An article that brought up much discussion was No. 7. "To see if the town will build a bridge on Hampden Avenue, determine material for construction and appropriate money for the same." Estimates on wooden and stone-arch bridges were given by the selectmen. The estimate on a wooden bridge—which could be constructed of old timber now in possession of the town—was about $600, and the cost of a stone-arch bridge would be not less than $2500. A. D. Norcross spoke favorably of an iron girder bridge, and $1800 was appropriated for the construction of this kind of a structure, but, upon the motion of Dr. G. E. Fuller the meeting was adjourned for two weeks until Friday afternoon, June 14, at 2 o'clock, at which time the selectmen will have prepared estimates and plans of iron girder, cement and stone-arch bridges. The plans will call for structures 32 feet wide, and it is very probable that a stone-arch bridge will be the choice of the voters.

Death From Apoplexy.

Henry W. Gragg, a Long-time Resident. No Known Relatives.

Henry W. Gragg, about 60 years old, died at the home of Edward Bailey on the Ellis Green where he boarded, last Friday morning about 11:30. Mr. Gragg was born in South Leverett, but had spent the greater part of his life in Monson. He was in his usual health when he retired Thursday night, but suffered a stroke of apoplexy sometime during the night and died Friday morning. Nothing was known of his relatives and the body was taken to Bradway's undertaking rooms. The funeral was held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. F. W. McConnell officiating; the burial was in the No. 1 cemetery.

Fire Wednesday Morning.

Furniture and Wearing Apparel in North Main Street House Destroyed.

The fire department was called out at 8:30 Wednesday morning by an alarm from box 25, in front of Flynt & Sons' store. The fire was in a house on North Main street owned by L. C. Flynt and occupied by Benjamin Schalor on the second floor, whose property, consisting of furniture and personal belongings, which were not insured, were partially a total loss. It was with much difficulty that the fire department got the flames under control, as they were shooting out of the windows when the fire was discovered. The damage to the building is estimated at $500, and is covered by insurance.

High Honors for Monson Boy.

The Monson friends of William Leahy will be greatly pleased to learn of the high honors that have been conferred upon him. Mr. Leahy was a member of the graduating class of the Georgetown University law school. He received his degree in law and received the highest honors in his class. The receiving of high honors is nothing new to Mr. Leahy, for he was valedictorian in his class when he graduated from the Monson Academy in 1903, and was also valedictorian in the class of 1907 at Holy Cross College. Following his graduation from Holy Cross he held the position of assistant principal of the Williamstown high school before entering the Georgetown University. Mr. Leahy has received a very flattering offer to locate in Kentucky.

Fooled Only Himself.

There was an American once who stayed so long in England that he imagined he had not only got out of the "American manner," but had shed the Trans-Atlantic accent. He deceived many and was happy until the day of his return. "First-class to Liverpool, how much?" said he to the booking clerk at Kuston. "Five dollars and a half, colonel," promptly replied the clerk, and the illusion was shattered forever. It's a matter of intonation when we are all speaking the same words.

Signing With a Cross.

Persons who cannot write their names are required to use as a substitute the sign of the cross (X). Anciently kings and nobles used the same sign, but not ignorantly. It was used by those who could not write as well as by those who could not symbol that the person making it pledged himself by his Christian faith to the truth of the matter to which he affixed the cross. Hence, although people now write or subscribe their names, they are still said to sign.

Value of a True Friend.

A sure friend is best known in an adverse state. We know not whom to trust till after trial. There are some that will keep us company while it is clear and fair who will be gone when the clouds gather. That is the only friendship which is stronger than death; and those the friends whose fortunes are embarked in the same bottom—who are resolved to sink or swim together.

Human Sacrifices Still.

In some parts of Syria the peasants believe that doctors and druggists have a right to kill one man and one woman every year to make medicines out of their bodies. A druggist whose establishment was boycotted because he was thought to have tried to murder a boy, brought suit against the boy's parents for their interference with his trade, but he received no damages, as it was recognized that the adults were believers in the old superstition.

Obligation of Love.

Love is a debt, an obligation that never can be fully met, and so must rest upon us always. We cannot annul obligation at will, cannot refuse payment and hold ourselves free. Aid and kindness, sympathy and love, we owe on every hand, to our brother man everywhere while he lives. —J. R. Miller

A Steep One.

An Appropriate Verse

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Why are you so particular which postal card you purchase?" asked Olive of her friend Gwendolyn as they stood before a postal rack in an up-to-date drug store. It couldn't have taken England longer to purchase the Suez canal than it takes you to decide upon a little piece of pasteboard.

"Promise you'll not tell. Jim sent me a card all decorated with forget-me-nots, and a little verse saying:

"Blossoms Blue as the sky
To my friend will say Kindest thoughts and good will
This card brings with it today."

"Now I'm trying to find an appropriate one to send in return."

"Don't waste your time. Jim certainly didn't. He must have bought those cards by the gross, as five girls, including myself, received similar ones. So you're not the favored one," said Olive carelessly.

"If that's true, then any old card will do. I'll scribble the address on this one without even looking on the other side," returned Gwendolyn, her cheeks blushing from the humiliating thought, how she had searched, east, west, north and south for a card.

All Gwendolyn's waking and sleeping hours had been occupied with Jim's image. Never again could she hope to meet anyone so congenial, and now she knew positively that she was only one amongst many in his thoughts.

"Your name should have been Gwendolyn Regretful instead of Gwendolyn Barret," Olive told her. "Whatever you do you regret it, so it doesn't matter much what you do," as Gwendolyn kept repeating how sorry she was that she mailed the card in such haste.

The following day Gwendolyn was greatly perplexed to receive a telegram.

"Arrive at 10 a. m. Have the courage now to tell you everything."

Gwendolyn could not solve the mystery. Jim was always so confidential with her. Was he going to announce his engagement to some other girl? How could she stand the strain?

When Jim met Gwendolyn he tried to embrace her in the most lover-like fashion.

"How dare you," said Gwendolyn, indignantly pushing the young man aside. "Since when are you accustomed to taking such liberties? No man but the man I marry will I allow to kiss me."

"Then I'm the man," announced Jim. "Aren't we engaged? Didn't you pity me because I wasn't courageous enough to propose and sent me this postal?"

Gwendolyn, taking the card, read:

"Here's a lover's knot,
Can you tie it?
I know the way,
So let's try it."

Then she attempted to explain how and why she had sent that one.

"My dear," said Jim, "I only sent you the same as the others who were kind to me while I was here, for you never showed any special interest, and usually acted like a human icicle when I was around."

"That's because I cared so much. I was too proud to show my feelings," said Gwendolyn.

"Those cards didn't signify anything, but this one," he added in a tender tone, "is worth more than all the power, money and glory in the world to me."

"Oh, Jim, to think I had to propose to you, but I'm glad I am a victim of circumstances, only if you really, truly love me, don't ever tell how we became engaged."

COURTESY MADE A FINE ART

Japanese Excel All Peoples in Flowery Expressions of Politeness.

Courtesy is a characteristic of the Japanese, especially amongst officials, and Mr. A. M. Thompson, in describing his travels through the Land of the Chrysanthemum, says that even the word "please" is in Japan elaborated into a lingual art. Here is an example:—

"The guard in the train to Tokio caused us much amusement. When he came round to examine tickets he began by standing at the end of the car, took off his cap to the honorable assembly, bowed to the ground, rubbed his knees with his hands, drew in his breath audibly, and delivered himself of an announcement in Japanese which I translate as follows:—

"Your most honorable excellencies and most augustly-designing-to-be-pleased ones, I hope you will pardon this creature of mud for having been born into this world to ask you, most gracious and superior ones, to show your augustly blessed tickets, after which I beg you will honorably deign to grind and crush me, who am but as a snail of the soil beneath your kindly sandals!"

"The passengers bowed profoundly in return, rubbed their knees with their hands, sucked in their breath with the peculiar whistling sound which is the special expression of a Japanese greeting, and then produced their honorable tickets. After this there was more bowing on both sides, and the guard, still bowing, vanished."

The way that wins is hard.

No Other Clothing Dealer in Springfield Would Be Justified in Selling High-grade Clothing at These Prices

Under ordinary circumstances a clothing dealer would be called crazy to sell his entire stock right at the very height of the season at mid-summer clearance prices, sacrificing all his profits and prospects of profits. And well he might.

But circumstances alter cases. We must vacate this store July 1 and we have just 19 trading days left in which to close out the balance of our stock. To do it prices have been slashed regardless of cost or value.

BLIND MAN'S SIGHT RESTORED

Piece of Cornea From Dead Animal, Transplanted, is Hailed as Triumph of Surgery.

The French Academy of Sciences announces the success of an operation on a blind man, performed seven months ago and watched carefully ever since.

A workman had an eye burned by quicklime, so that the cornea had become opaque. It has long been the dream of scientists to transplant the cornea from animals to man, but so far this has been tried without success.

This transparent cornea is one of the most delicate parts of the human organism. Very soon after death, or after the removal of the eye from a living person, for that matter, it becomes opaque and begins to break up.

But M. Magiot had found a way to preserve its transparency. In the case in question it had been kept a week before a piece of it was fitted into the depression made by removing a quarter-inch square section of the cornea of the blind man's eye.

Now, after seven months' observation by the surgeon, the eye is pronounced well and he can see with it—dimly it is true but still he sees.

The Virtuous Jew.

Probably the virtues we possess as a people judged by any ethical standard are as antipathetic as our vices. A shrewd observer once remarked that there would be no anti-Jewish feeling in the East End of London if Jews only got drunk like other decent people! Professor Goldwin Smith called us "an unassailable race."—Jewish Chronicle.

PECULIAR PRAYER TO COURT

Error of Stenographer Responsible for a Few More Gray Hairs in Head of Lawyer.

"They say that a lawyer has been saved by his stenographer," said an attorney, at a recent lecture. "That is true, undoubtedly, because a lawyer's stenographer, who is observing, gets many points of law out of her work."

"But there is another side to it that must not be overlooked, and that is the mistake that a lawyer's stenographer makes. The law terms are so technical that it is not within reason to expect the stenographer to get everything exactly right."

"One of the most amusing errors that I have ever heard of in connection with stenographic errors, if I may call it that, occurred in a certain law office the other day. The case was a divorce action, in which the plaintiff alleged cruel and inhuman treatment."

"Plaintiff being a woman with all the common law disabilities, prayed the court for temporary alimony and suit money. The prayer was dictated to the stenographer and she wrote it out and mailed it to the court."

"Shortly afterward, the lawyer chanced to read a copy and found to his horror that the stenographer had made the prayer one for alimony and soup money."

That Explains.

"I have a dog and a hen which are fast friends. Isn't that queer?" "I don't think so—merely natural affinity." "In what way?" "I believe your hen and your dog are both setters."

WIFE'S HEALTH RESTORED

Husband Declared Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Would Restore Her Health, And It Did.

Ashland, Ky. — "Four years ago I seemed to have everything the matter with me. I had female and kidney trouble and was so bad off I could hardly rest day or night. I doctored with all the best doctors in town and took many kinds of medicine but nothing did any good until I tried your wonderful remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My husband said it would restore my health and it has."

There are probably hundreds of thousands of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read What Another Woman says:
Camden, N. J. — "I had female trouble and a serious displacement and was tired and discouraged and unable to do my work. My doctors told me I never could be cured without an operation, but thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I am cured of that affliction and have recommended it to more than one of my friends with the best results."

—Mrs. ELLA JOHNSTON, 291 Liberty St.

All these testimonials are guaranteed genuine and truthful. The original of each came to us entirely unsolicited. They are sincere expressions of gratitude for actual benefits received from the medicine.

NEW DEPARTURE.
Selling Medicines at Half Price Under Guarantee of Cure.
After two months of remarkable sales, J. P. Lynde, the enterprising druggist, says that his plan of selling at half price the regular 50 cent size of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia, and guaranteeing to refund the money if it does not cure, has been the greatest success he has ever known.

Anyone suffering with dyspepsia, constipation, liver troubles, headaches, dizziness, coated tongue, or the general tired feeling, caused by inactive liver and bowels or disordered digestion, should take advantage of J. P. Lynde's new departure and buy a bottle of Dr. Howard's specific at half price, with his personal guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure.

Meyers-Wing.

Palmer Young Man Takes Bride Wednesday in New York State.

The marriage of Newton C. Wing, son of Mrs. J. C. Wing of Central street, but who is engaged in business in New York, and Miss Elizabeth Meyers took place Wednesday at the home of the bride near Frankfort, N. Y. From a paper published there the following account of the wedding is taken:

Many relatives and friends gathered last night at the beautiful home of Professor Carl E. Meyers near Frankfort, to witness the wedding of his daughter, Miss Elizabeth A. Meyers, to Newton C. Wing of East Orange, N. J. The joy of the occasion was voiced in the congratulations and good wishes extended to the young people by all present.

The reception room, where the ceremony was performed, was decorated in simple yet attractive manner, masses of palms and ferns being used to form a pleasing background of green. In one corner of the spacious room a bower of green had been constructed. Pink roses were used here and elsewhere in the room in pleasing contrast with the palms.

As the orchestra played the wedding march from Lohengrin, the bridal party came down the broad stairs, through the hall and into the room where the ceremony took place. In the lead were the ushers, Horace S. Griffing of Guilford, Ct., and Reuben J. Peacock of Brooklyn. They were followed by the bridesmaid, Miss Ida M. Tefft of Ilium, and the matron of honor, Mrs. H. H. Meyer of New York. Miss Marian Meyer of New York was flower girl.

The bride advanced with her father, Prof. Carl E. Meyers, and was met by the groom and his best man, Arthur A. Moulton of Boston, and the clergyman, Rev. Mr. Beeson of Mohawk. The ring service was used in the marriage ceremony.

A wedding gown of crepe meteor, trimmed with princess lace was worn by the bride. Her veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of roses. The matron of honor was prettily attired in a gown of pale blue satin charmeuse, trimmed with shadow lace. She carried sweet peas. The bridesmaid wore a beautiful gown of pale pink crepe meteor trimmed with cream lace and satin rose buds. She carried pink sweet peas.

The bride's gift to the groom was a silver buckled belt, engraved with a monogram and the wedding date, while the groom gave his bride a lavalliere of aqua marine set with pearls. To the matron of honor and her maid the bride gave silver shoe buckles, appropriately inscribed, while the groom presented his best man and ushers with scarfpins. Indicative of the high regard in which the young people are held by their friends was the beautiful array of presents which typified their friends' good wishes.

After the wedding ceremony, refreshments were served. The bride's table was beautifully decorated in pink and green and there covers were laid for 12. Mrs. Harris served.

The groom's early life was spent in Massachusetts and he was graduated from Amherst in 1906. There he was a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity. Since leaving college he has been connected with the Library Bureau. The bride is a graduate of Cornell in the class of 1905 and for some time past has been teaching in the High School at East Orange, N. J. She is a young woman whose winning personality and charm have made for her many friends. After a honeymoon spent at the Thousand Islands, Montreal and Quebec, Mr. and Mrs. Wing will be at home at 141 North 12th street, Newark, N. J.

Odd Fellows' Memorial Next Sunday.

Historical Society Outing.

Interesting Program Arranged For Friday at Mason District Schoolhouse.

Plans have been completed for the field day of the Palmer Historical society, which it was some time ago voted to hold. The time will be next Friday, and the place the Mason district schoolhouse. The society extends a cordial invitation to all past and present dwellers of the district, to all teachers who have taught there, and others who are interested to be present as soon as 11 o'clock. All are requested to bring a basket lunch, with cup for coffee, which will be served by the society. Barges will leave the public library at 10 o'clock sharp; the fare for the round trip will be 50 cents, and all who desire accommodations should notify O. P. Allen not later than noon of next Wednesday. Lunch will be served at noon, and the literary exercises will be at 1. There will be a greeting by the president, a historical paper, "History of the Mason district schoolhouse, list of teachers and district data," by O. P. Allen; paper by Superintendent of Schools Clifford H. Hobson, "What the little red schoolhouse has done for New England;" paper by John C. Sullivan, chairman of the school committee, "The debt we owe to our early settlers;" volunteer speeches; closing with "America."

Firemen's Memorial Sunday.

Graves Decorated. Address by Pastor of Baptist Church.

The firemen observed their memorial day last Sunday. Gathering at the engine house at 1.30 they marched to Main street and took a car for St. Thomas' cemetery, where graves of former members were decorated; returning to Oak Knoll cemetery in Palmer, graves there were decorated and a quartet composed of Erford Corbin, Francis L. Jones, Fred O. Royce and James Summers, sang. Rev. J. H. Palmer of the Baptist church gave a short address on "Heroism," referring to the heroes in war and civic life, among the latter particularly the firemen, who risked much in their work.

Birthday Celebration.

Mrs. Asaph Gates of Palmer Center entertained a party of friends at her home yesterday afternoon in honor of the 72d birthday of her mother, Mrs. Orilla Martin. The members of the Old Center Improvement Club were the special guests. Among those present from out of town were Mrs. Edgar Nash of the Ludlow Woman's Club and Mrs. Edgar Rhodes of Springfield. Refreshments were served by Misses Fannie and Ida Gates, granddaughters of Mrs. Martin. About 20 guests were present and following the lunch the party visited the new hatchery nearby. Mrs. Martin was the recipient of a number of gifts.

Finished Spraying Trees.

Tree Warden Charles H. Keith has completed the work of spraying the trees of the village for the first time. In the villages the trees show little if any signs of the elm tree beetle, and it is Mr. Keith's opinion that after this year they will need spraying but once each season.

Will Attend Kearsarge Veterans' Reunion.

Henry S. Hobson of Pearl street is making preparations to attend the reunion of the famous old Kearsarge veterans at Dover, N. H., on Wednesday of next week, that being the 48th anniversary of the sinking of the Alabama off Cherbourg, France. Mr. Hobson was a gunner on the Kearsarge. The survivors met in Dover about ten years ago when they were the guests of the city, as they will be again next week, and expect a royal good time, as they had before.

Both Hands Burned.

Daniel Ahearn, employed by the Central Massachusetts Electric company as a lineman, had both hands badly burned while at work near the "Pool" on the Warren road last Friday afternoon. The men were at work shifting cross-arms, and in some way Ahearn managed to get hold of a live wire with both hands. The palms were painfully but not seriously burned, and he has since been taking a vacation, which is likely to continue for some time yet.

Not All Unanimous.

The Wednesday afternoon closing proposition, begun this week for June, July and August, does not seem to strike all the merchants alike. Some of them were closed, while others who closed Thursday afternoons last year remained open. What the result will be remains to be seen, but unless there is a more general closing than is so far indicated it is probable that the scheme will drop through before long.

Nurses' Graduation Next Week.

The twelfth annual graduation and nurses' night at the Monson State Hospital will be held next Wednesday evening, and the public is cordially invited to attend. The exercises will be at 8 o'clock, and barges will meet the 7.15, 7.45 and 8.15 cars at Main street, to convey visitors to the hospital; returning they will meet the 9.15 and 10.15 cars.

The members of the fire department have issued invitations to a ladies' night, to be held in the engine house on Park street next Monday evening from 8 to 11. The party will be for members of the department and their families.

PALMER NEWS.

Palmer, F. of A., will be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, at which time officers for the coming term will be elected. During the months of July and August the court will hold but two meetings, one on July 16 and one on August 26th.

It may be noticed that in the bills announcing the opening of Forest Lake the lake is billed as being located in Ware. This does not mean that Mr. Rohan is trying to remove the lake to that town, but that it is a mistake of the booking agency which sent out the bills for the theatre show.

Palmer club women and others have been invited to attend a lecture-recital, "With Liszt in Weimar," at the library building in Belchertown next Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The recital will be by Mr. John Orth, one of the only two living pupils of Liszt, who will give personal reminiscences of the master. The tickets will be 35 cents.

Quabog council, 876, Royal Arcanum, has paid to Mrs. Frank A. Ruggles the sum of $3000, the amount of a certificate held in the order by her husband, Frank A. Ruggles, formerly of Three Rivers, who died in Weymouth on Tuesday of last week. Mr. Ruggles was a charter member of Quabog council when it was instituted in 1885.

Quabog council, Royal Arcanum, is sending out invitations to a ladies' night and whist party next Tuesday evening in Masonic Hall, members and their immediate families being eligible. There will be progressive whist, with Bridge, "500" or Pitch for any who prefer these games; an entertainment program of considerable variety has been arranged, and light refreshments will be served.

A regular meeting of the Palmer Business and Social Club was held Tuesday evening. Among the matters under discussion was the condition of the waiting room of the Springfield and Eastern street railway. A committee of three, consisting of George Ezekiel, Samuel Stewart and Frederick A. Upham, was appointed to bring the matter to the attention of the street railway officials and in case of a failure to secure satisfaction to carry the matter to the railroad commissioners.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Zabacek and Mr. and Mrs. Stanislas Arabuck of Wilbraham were before the district court Wednesday morning, charged with disturbing the peace. The testimony indicated that the disturbance began in a quarrel about the children. There was a hair pulling match between the women, in which Mrs. Zabacek got decidedly the worst of it. The men were fined $10 each and paid. Mrs. Zabacek was fined $5, which she also paid. Mrs. Arabuck was fined $20 and being unable to pay, was committed. Her friends expect to be able to pay her fine in Springfield.

THREE RIVERS.

Mr. and Mrs. George Matchett are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Boissy spent the first of the week with relatives in Holyoke.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Amato have moved their family from Derby, Ct., to Pleasant street in this village.

Mrs. F. Higgins and Mrs. H. D. Geer are spending a few days with relatives in Worcester and Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. James Camerlin and son Victor and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Camerlin of Indian Orchard spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Camerlin on Ruggles street.

GETTING AHEAD OF SCANDAL

Peace and Dignity of Congregation Secured by Recommendation Made to Pastor.

Parson Henderson, an evangelist of color, was caught one bright morning holding the hands of one of the ewe lambs of his congregation who was a very popular young lady and it created quite a stir among the colored population, relates a writer in Norman E. Mack's National Monthly. So the parson was brought up for trial and was questioned by the officers of the church as to what he meant by his action, and this is what he had to say in answer to the question propounded to him: "My brudders, you have seen these great pictures I suppose, so you know dat the great Shepherd am always pictured with a lamb of his flock in his arms."

"Yes sah, parson, dat am so," admitted Deacon Jones.

"Den, Brudder Jones, what am wrong in the shepherd of his flock holding a lamb in his arms?"

This was too much for Brudder Jones, so he proposed the officers of the church have a call meeting that afternoon. After the point was discussed fully the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, Dat for the future peace and dignity of the congregation dat the next time Parson Henderson feels called upon to take a lamb of his flock in his arms, dat he pick out a ram lamb."

JOURNAL OFFICE

Under Discipline

Hammond noticed that his wife looked tired one Saturday afternoon when he returned home early from the office. When he spoke of it she admitted that she was pretty well worn out, and when he discovered that she had dropped a tear on the lapel of his coat he insisted that she should take an afternoon off.

"You're worn out taking care of that youngster," he said. "Now, you just trot along to the matinee or anywhere you feel like going, and I'll attend to the offspring. He needs a little masculine discipline, anyway."

Mrs. Hammond demurred on the ground that she didn't want Hammond to devote all his Saturday afternoon to taking care of the baby, but Hammond was determined and eventually had his way.

"You're the dearest thing that ever lived," murmured his wife, as she kissed him goodbye. "But I'm afraid you'll be sorry. Baby is so—so effervescent."

"Pooh!" scoffed Hammond. Then he smiled in a superior way.

When he returned to the living room Hammond found his son, who was seated on a small stool and looking quite impossibly virtuous, gravely contemplating the landscape from the front window. The situation appeared easy, so Hammond sat down on the chair nearest the infant and pulled out his oldest and smelliest pipe.

"What do you say to having a smoke, old man?" he inquired, jocularly.

"Ough!" replied the baby, approvingly. Then he squirmed off his stool and went and stood by his father's side.

"Rather a good stunt, having the feminine element take itself off occasionally, hey?" Hammond inquired pleasantly, as he pushed the tobacco down into his pipe with his little finger. He laid the pipe on the arm of the chair, rose and crossed over to the mantel to get a match.

"Humph!" said the baby in a muffled tone.

Hammond turned in time to see him cramping as much of the pipe's stem down his throat as he could conveniently insert there. However, as his father leaped toward him, he gave a chuckle, removed the pipe from his mouth, dexterously shook the contents out of his own clean little cranium, then threw the pipe upon the hearth. The sound made by the amber mouthpiece as it broke against the tiles caused baby to become fairly delicious with joy. Squealing like an ecstatic pig, he ran from the living room back into the dining room.

Hammond set his lips firmly. "Now," he said to himself, "is the time to teach him the rudiments of being a law-abiding citizen."

He followed the baby into the dining room, where he was sitting under the table. Hammond stooped down and spoke sternly to the chuckling miscreant.

"Come out, son," he said.

Son merely hitched himself farther over toward the other side of the table, shaking his head delightedly. He then ran around the room three times, dexterously avoiding the father's outstretched hand every time he passed, then suddenly stopped and threw his arms around his father's knees, shouting joyously.

Hammond disengaged himself and taking his son by the hand led him back into the living room.

"Pick up that pipe, young man," said Hammond, sternly. The baby blinked at him and the corners of his lips curled upward. "I mean it," insisted Hammond. The baby responded with his familiar chuckle and capered cheerfully.

"Very well," said Hammond in a tone of finality. He led his son out into the hall. "Now, will you go back and pick up the pipe?" he inquired, "or will you go into the lavatory and stay for the rest of the afternoon?"

For answer the baby dived into the lavatory and plunged plump pillows that had been left on the floor to get the sun. Finding this quite soul satisfying, he presently righted himself and beamed upon his progenitor.

"You'll stay here?" asked Hammond. "Very well. You can come out when you're ready to mind daddy."

The baby merely projected himself once more into the mass of feathers. Thereupon Hammond shut the door and went back to the living room. Three-quarters of an hour later he returned and led his son forth to the scene of battle.

"Now," he said, assuming a frown that should have sent terror to the infantile heart, "pick up that pipe."

The small boy looked up into his father's face and the smile faded from his own plump countenance. He dropped his father's hand and got down slowly upon his knees. Once more he glanced up at his father. Seeing no sign of relenting, he put out his hand slowly, picked up the pipe, struggled to his feet and, with remarkably good aim, planted the pipe upon his father's solar plexus. Then, shouting in mirth, he fled.

Oakman Patton, formerly pastor of the Second Congregational church of Palmer, Mass., from which he resigned to take orders in our church, is the first resident minister in charge of All Saints' church, Whitman. This church was known in Massachusetts as the 'machine-shop' church. Services were held in an abandoned machine-shop while the funds were being raised for the present handsome edifice. Mr. Patton resigned his pastorate in Palmer about seven years ago and for a time was located on a farm in Attleboro, occasionally supplying pulpits for churches without pastors."

Birthday Surprise Party.

Jolly Time on Miss Holmes' Lawn Wednesday Evening.

A company of jolly people had a most delightful time Wednesday evening on the lawn and piazzas of Miss Esther Holmes' spacious house and grounds. The occasion was the anniversary of Miss Holmes' birth, and the party was a surprise. The lawn was prettily decorated with strings of Japanese lanterns which produced an unusually fine effect as they swayed in the evening breeze. There was dancing on the lawn and bridge on the piazza for those who wished. Lighted candles were placed on each table, and partners were found by means of colored roses, a new and novel scheme. Supper was served on the piazza, and a feature was a big birthday cake covered with lighted candles. One of the ladies of the party furnished music on the piano in a delightful manner, and one of the men amused the company with songs and dances, creating almost unlimited merriment.

Prizes Awarded.

At the chapel exercises in the Academy Monday morning, Principal Dewing announced the following prizes: $20 in gold from the fund known as the "Class of 1882 fund" to be given to the student of the senior class who, in the judgment of the principal, presents the best English theme in the regular English work, was awarded to Melchisedech Barone. The annual prize of $15 given by Dr. J. J. Hassett of the class of 1884 to be awarded to the student making the best progress in algebra was awarded to Ralph Beebe. The prize of $10 known as the class of 1884 prize to be given to the student attaining the highest average in advanced physics or the classical and Latin-scientific courses, if said student is deemed worthy in other respects by the principal, was awarded to Alexander P. Bates; the competition for this prize was so close between Bates and Vasselin Kirov that a second prize was given to Kirov by some friends of the school.

She was married May 26, 1882, in Thomaston, Me., and came to Monson to live in 1892 and had since resided here. She was a member of Quabog lodge of Rebekahs. She is survived by a husband and six children, one son, John of Amherst, and five daughters, Mrs. C. R. Aldrich, Sadie, Isabel, Nina and Mary, all of Monson. Best, Whenever Possible, That Man Should Be Away from the House in Daytime.

The man of the house should not be in the house all day long, if it can be helped. If he be an artist with a studio at home, a minister with a study at the top of the house, a physician with office hours, or any other man who is accustomed to carry on his work at home, the household accommodates itself to him, and in a sense ignores his presence. It is true that he is constantly subject to interruptions when he works at home, his wife softly opening the door to say, "The milkman has called for his bill, and cannot make change," or "Somebody has asked for you at the door. Will you not go down and see him?" or, "Do pardon me for breaking in upon your work, but Aunt Jennie has just telephoned that she is coming to luncheon. Won't you step over to the butcher's and get a porterhouse steak?"

It is not quite ideal for the man of the house to do his work at home. For his personal convenience and comfort it is preferable that he should do it elsewhere. The temptation to run in upon him, to read a letter, tell a bit of news or ask advice, is too great for the average woman to overcome.

Also, he gains something in the estimation of the family by going away in the morning and returning at night, while for himself there is the manifest advantage of a charming and restful change of scene when he steps within his front door to be stormed upon with kisses by the children and welcomed by his true comrade and partner on the road.—Woman's Home Companion

Sterilized Coal.

Coal in the mines is one of the things freest from germs. Old-time doctors used to notice coal miners' wounds healed fast, though begrimed and besmeared with coal dust. For a long time it has been thought that breathing in coal dust caused lung diseases in miners. Some experts find fresh coal is as good as sterilized, and say miners have lung trouble because they do not take the trouble to put off their damp and sweaty clothing before going from the mine to their homes, thus taking cold in the open air walk. Experts say our miners ought to put on warm and dry clothes at the mouth of the mine. But it seems the miners have minds of their own, and although the coal companies in some places fixed up hot and cold water baths and dressing rooms at the mouth of the mines the men would not use them, but went home to wash and dress, as had been their custom for generations.

Triumph of Intellect.

The triumph of pure intellect would mean, as Emile Caro points out, that there would be not only no more religion but no more philosophy, nor any kind of poetry; nothing, in fact, but physics, chemistry, and physiology.

A Will and a Way

When Frank Sheldon left the law school he settled in his old home town. Fairfield was a small place, not far from a large city. Sheldon figured it out that he could live better on a certain income in Fairfield than on a doubtful prosperity in a large city. There was something else. Edith Sawyer lived in Fairfield.

But the Hon. John Sawyer, railroad magnate, could not appreciate an attachment between his daughter and a poor, young lawyer. So the poor, young lawyer studied and struggled along.

He had been struck by a peculiar phase of a great case that was being tried at a nearby city. The law journal which printed his article on the subject commented on his views rather enthusiastically.

Urged by his confidence that he had done a worthy thing, he set off for the Sawyer home, determined to interview Mr. Sawyer. He was very civilly received.

"Quite an interesting article of yours," said the millionaire. "I thank you for the copy."

Frank bowed, then plunged. "Mr. Sawyer, you must have seen that I love your daughter, but I've said nothing until I felt assured of your consent."

"Oh, of course," interrupted Mr. Sawyer. "How much did you get for that article?"

"A few extra copies," said Frank, blushing.

"About what I thought," said Mr. Sawyer. "Now, Sheldon, I like you, but liking doesn't count when a life contract is involved. You've given all your time and trouble for nothing. The only things that count are results."

He paused, then added, "I don't think I need say any more."

"I thank you for your candor," said Frank, rising. "Good-night." He rushed out of the house, and down the street almost ran into a stout, elderly gentleman who was toiling up the hill.

"Phew!" said the man. "Why don't you keep carriages at the station? Please tell me where I can find John Sawyer's house?"

"Because I don't keep a livery stable," growled Frank. "The Sawyers' house is the large one on the hill."

The stout man pulled the Sawyer doorbell and said, "Tell Mr. Sawyer that John Hunter wants to see him."

Mr. Sawyer almost ran downstairs. "Why, this is an honor. What brought you here?"

"You've got a young lawyer in this village named Frank Sheldon. Know him?"

"Yes, he was here a few minutes ago. You probably met him." Mr. Hunter chuckled. "Well, well! That's one on me. Asked him why he didn't keep a carriage at the station, and he snapped back that he didn't keep a livery stable. He's the man I want."

"What's it all about?" asked Mr. Sawyer.

"It's about that article the young man wrote. He has struck the right lead on that case of ours. Is he all right, honest, reliable?"

"I think he is," said Mr. Sawyer, slowly.

"Then send a note to him at once, asking him to come."

After the note was sent, Mr. Hunter explained that the discovery of the young man, if known at the beginning, might have saved a hundred thousand dollars in litigation; that now he had it in his power to upset their plans.

Edith Sawyer had heard the conversation. She was standing on the step watching the moonlight when Sheldon arrived. She put her fingers to his lips. She told him of the conversation, and, as he was leaving her, whispered, "If you don't bid high for yourself, you needn't bid for me."

There was a deal of hemming and hawing in the ensuing conversation. Frank saw that they were veering around to an offer. Finally, the proposition came.

Frank smiled. "I suppose you are jesting, Mr. Hunter?"

"Why, certainly not; it is a large offer."

"Of course," said Sheldon, calmly. "In order to shorten this interview, I will name my own terms—a fee of $20,000 and an equal share in the contingent fund."

"It is preposterous," cried both together.

"Gentlemen, I bid you good-evening," said Sheldon, rising and walking to the door.

"Hold on there," said Mr. Hunter. "I shall certainly hold on the terms given," Frank said. "Others will pay more."

Mr. Hunter looked at Mr. Sawyer, who nodded his head. "Well," he said, "give us a few minutes to think it over."

Frank found Edith in the drawing-room. He told her of the conversation. "Did I bid high enough?" he asked. A glance at her eyes was enough. At the end of ten minutes a knock came at the door. Mr. Sawyer and Mr. Hunter appeared in the doorway. Mr. Hunter turned to Frank and said: "Mr. Sheldon, we accept your terms."

Six months after he paid another visit to Mr. Sawyer. He found that gentleman in the library.

"Mr. Sawyer, I—," Frank began.

"Sheldon, my boy," said Mr. Sawyer, "Edith is in the drawing-room. Go to her."

Imitation is the sincerest flattery.

The shaffing was resting upon the top of the machine and rolled off when it struck Germain.

Historical Society Visits Schoolhouse

Enjoys Outing To-day in Mason District. Structure Is 145 Years Old. Bore Important Part In Early History of the Town.

Members of the Palmer Historical Society, with invited guests and friends to the number of about 50, enjoyed an outing to-day on the lawn of the Mason district schoolhouse in the eastern part of the town. The greater portion of the party made the trip from the public library building in Palmer by means of barges, but others traveled by private conveyance and still others joined the company on the grounds. The company visited and viewed the surroundings until noon, when a basket lunch was served, the society furnishing coffee for all.

At 1 o'clock the literary exercises began. There was a greeting by the president of the society, D. L. Bodfish, and a historical paper by O. P. Allen, giving the history of the Mason district schoolhouse from its erection to the present time, a period of 145 years. Superintendent of Schools Clifton H. Hobson spoke on "What the little red schoolhouse has done for New England," and J. C. Sullivan, chairman of the school committee, read a paper on "The debt we owe our early settlers." Short speeches were also made by other members of the company.

The Mason District Schoolhouse.

The historical article by O. P. Allen was as follows:

We have gathered to-day to refresh our memories with the story of a little red schoolhouse by the wayside, bronzed by the summer suns and wintry blasts of one hundred and forty-five years; also to render our tribute of respect to the long line of faithful teachers who labored here to mould the thought and shape the character of the young entrusted to their care.

Yielding to the demands of progress, the humble temple of knowledge has been closed, and its walls no longer echo to the voice of teacher or pupil. Its long career of usefulness is ended, but the developed purpose which had its birth in the thought of the early settlers still lives in the worthy lives and deeds of surviving descendants.

If I were asked what factors have contributed most largely to the success and perpetuity of early New England ideals, I would answer without hesitation, the home, the church and the free public school. The principles emanating from these several sources of moral strength made our people lovers of that that is best, led them to honor the home, revere the church and cherish the free public schools, fitted them to love liberty in its highest sense, schooled them for the possibilities of Lexington and Bunker Hill when the crucial hour came, furnished them with leaders against oppression whose ideals spread far and wide until they became the heritage of a nation, a present world power.

The early settlers of Palmer were an intelligent and religious people and they realized full well that if their well-grounded plans were to be maintained and handed down to posterity, they must, at least, furnish their children with a fair degree of acquired knowledge, for ignorance is ever the foster parent of decadence, failure and ruin.

So as soon as the home had been established, the meeting house provided for, they found means to give their children public instruction, first in some capacious room of a central neighbor's home, then when this makeshift became impracticable, the town voted in 1767 to raise the sum of sixty pounds for the purpose of building a schoolhouse in each of the four quarters of the town, one of which was our present Mason schoolhouse, that bears externally the same style and general appearance as it did one hundred and forty-five years ago.

The house was built at a cost of fifteen pounds, or about seventy-five dollars; a small sum surely, but then the expense of material and labor was but a trifle of what it would be to-day. It was small, only 22 by 25 feet, having a vestibule or entrance extending across one end with a hungry fireplace surmounted by a stone chimney located opposite the entrance. Long seats were ranged against the walls with an unpretentious form in front of them for the use of the older pupils, while the balance of available space was occupied by seats without forms for the younger pupils. Economy and utility were sought rather than elegance in schoolhouse furnishings in early days.

The room was lighted by windows having panes 6 by 8 inches, a sample of which still remains in the vestibule to certify to the fact of the far-away years when it was placed here.

This was the conventional style of the schoolhouse of the Colonial days in all parts of New England, as I have often observed, and this picture gives a fair idea of the original appearance of our house here before it sustained the many repairs necessary to render it fit for school purposes.

It is evident that this house received a brave coat of red paint at some remote date in its history, and a coat of white a long time afterward. The white paint has nearly disappeared but traces of the original vermilion hue are plainly visible, proving that once on a time it was the real "Little red schoolhouse" of other days.

The records acquaint us with the fact that in 1830 the house was old and badly out of repair; when it was thoroughly overhauled, the antiquated seats were removed and new ones put in.

In 1860 the school committee again reported that the house sadly needed attention, and the district responded by raising the sum of $200 for the purpose. Dea. Wilson Brainerd was given the contract for making the needed changes. He removed the old stone chimney which had done service for nearly a century, and put in one of brick which still remains. Again new seats were put in and the house made comfortable.

In accordance with the State law, the town took over all the school property of the school districts in 1867 and allowed the Mason District the sum of $428 for its school property.

In 1881 the house was repaired at an expense of $54, with further repairs in 1887, while a few years ago modern desks were put in, which still remain.

This district was known as No. 4 for many years, and was not officially recognized as the Mason District until 1855, taking the name from William Mason, who had resided nearest the school for many years, where our kind landlord for the day, Mr. Arthur Moore, now resides.

The foregoing gives in brief a history of the house built eight years before the battle of Lexington, and is the only schoolhouse in town that has survived from Colonial days. It is still in a fair state of repair, and with a slight occasional outlay could be made to last for a long time. It is hoped the town will do this and preserve the building as an interesting relic of the past.

TEACHERS PRIOR TO 1851.

While the story of the house which furnished shelter for nearly five generations for the children who gathered under its roof is interesting because of the rich associations connected with it, yet we would leave out the vital part of the history if no mention of the teachers were made who had served here so long and well.

It is to be regretted that the original records of the district have not been preserved, in order to reveal much that has passed into oblivion, so in their absence we must be content with scraps of information furnished by the

NURSES GRADUATED.

Monson State Hospital Sends Out Class of Eight.

TWELFTH ANNUAL EVENT WEDNESDAY

Interesting Program Carried Out. Instructive Address on Tuberculosis. Reception.

The twelfth annual graduation and nurses' night at the Monson State Hospital Wednesday evening was attended by a large number of Palmer and Monson residents. Barges were sent from the institution to meet incoming cars in the early evening, and brought guests to the village again after the exercises. The program included, besides music by an orchestra, essays on "Hydrotherapy" by Miss Moulton, "Care of the sick room" by Miss Conesdine, and demonstrations by Misses Brady, McDonald, Dowd, Paine, Eaton and Mrs. Howard, a solo by Miss Porter, an address by Dr. George L. Woods of Springfield and the presentation of diplomas by Dr. Flood, superintendent of the hospital. Following the program there was a reception; refreshments were served and there was dancing until 12. The graduating class numbered eight: Miss Elly Louise Brady, Miss Mary Elizabeth Conesdine, Miss A. Gertrude Dowd, Miss Mildred Elaine Eaton, Mrs. Jannie Beer Howard, Miss Frances Magdalene Macdonald, Miss Marion Moulton, Miss Florence Lena Paine.

Dr. Howard's address in part:

For years I have noticed that whenever a class of nurses graduates the speaker, usually a physician, always gives them a great deal of advice as to what they should and should not do. I will break that record and try to give you instead a practical talk about a serious disease that you will be likely to meet as nurses.

Tuberculosis is the most important disease with which the human race has had to contend. Its history dates back to a remote antiquity. Hippocrates is called the father of medicine; he lived 400 years before Christ, yet he wrote a description of the disease which even to-day is considered a fair clinical picture of it. From the remote period up through the centuries the disease like the poor has always been with mankind, and, in a special sense and degree, has always been with the poor.

About the middle of the seventeenth century tuberculosis was first recognized, and described. Early in the nineteenth century inoculation experiments were first made but nothing of importance followed. In the year 1843, however, Kleenke achieved practical results. He inoculated rabbits with tuberculosis material, and twenty-six weeks later, when the rabbits were killed and autopsied were found, tubercles were found in the lungs and livers. In 1881 the medical world was electrified by the announcement by Dr. Robert Koch of Germany that he had isolated and demonstrated, by the microscope, the tubercle bacillus, the germ which causes pulmonary tuberculosis, consumption of the lungs.

The tubercle bacillus is a slender, straight rod-shaped micro-organism measuring about 1 10,000th of an inch in length. There are four varieties, the human, which infects us; the bovine, which infects cattle; the avian, which infects birds; and the bacillus which is found in fish and other cold-blooded creatures. For the assurance of those who are especially fond of fish and game birds, I will say that the bacilli which come from those sources cannot survive the temperature of the human body, so it is impossible for them to infect us.

We now have the other two varieties to consider, — the human and the

150th Anniversary Of Monson Church

Will Be Celebrated Next Sunday and Monday. Interesting Program For Both Days. Former Pastors and Members Coming.

The Congregational church in Monson will celebrate on Sunday and Monday the 150th anniversary of its organization, and has arranged attractive programs for both days; they will be found in full below.

It was June 23, 1762, — the same day of the month on which the celebration will take place, — that the church was organized with 24 members. Land owners, by order of the General Court, were taxed a penny an acre to secure the funds with which the first "Meeting-house" was built. The council which organized and dedicated the church installed Rev. Abishai Sabin as pastor, a graduate of Yale college. The first church was built on nearly the same site as the present structure, and was used for about 40 years. As the congregation had by that time outgrown the structure, a new and larger building was erected at a cost of $3000, all but $300 of which was voted by the town. After 68 years of service — until 1872 — that structure was replaced by the present house of worship, the cost of which, with the furnishings, is about $40,000.

Of the foregoing list the oldest surviving teacher, as far as known, is John W. Robinson of Ware, now living at the advanced age of 86, and probably the next oldest is Mrs. Nelson Munger, nee Jane Shaw, now of Des Moines, Iowa.

The Mason District school was permanently closed after the summer term in 1905. At that time the enrollment was fourteen, with grades one to seven. The pupils have since been transported to Palmer Grammar School.

It will be noted that fifty-two teachers were employed from 1851 to 1906, covering a period of fifty-five years. If we add the incomplete list of sixteen teachers employed prior to 1851, we have a list of sixty-eight teachers for about seventy-four years, and it is remarkable that ten of these teachers were natives of the Mason district; and from reliable sources we find nine other teachers, who were natives of the district, who taught elsewhere, making nineteen teachers who were natives here and began their course of study in the "Little Red Schoolhouse" we are commemorating to-day. The following is the list: Wilson Brainerd, and sisters, Sarah, Phebe, Mary, Mindwell, Betsey, and son John W. Mrs. Caroline N. Brainerd, though not a native of Palmer, taught school in Colerain before her marriage and was a graduate of Albany Academy, a remarkable teaching family surely. Hiram Converse finished his education in Monson and Westfield Academies, and taught in Westfield and Palmer; Minnie L. Converse, daughter of John S. Converse, removed with her parents to Saginaw, Mich., and graduated from Ann Arbor and was a teacher of Greek and Latin for thirteen years in Saginaw High school; her sister Maria, though not a native of this district, also taught in Monson and in Saginaw. Mary, daughter of Jonathan Cooley, was a teacher at Vassar. Her sister, Harriet Cooley, graduated from Mount Holyoke and later was a teacher there. Mary J., daughter of John Fenton, was a teacher and married John W. Robinson. Josie M. Keith, now Mrs. H. A. Northrop, also taught here very acceptably. Samuel Loyd Fleming taught here and graduated from Harvard Law School in 1845 and practiced law in Palmer till 1850, being the only lawyer born in this district. William D. Mason taught in Palmer and elsewhere; he is now eighty-nine years old and is supposed to be the oldest surviving pupil who attended school here. Maria E. Mason taught here at the age of fifteen a very successful school. She graduated from Mount Holyoke and married Rev. M. K. Cross. Mary E. Mason finished her education at the Springfield Select School and taught here and elsewhere. Julia A. Mason finished her course of study at the Palmer high school and taught in Palmer, another notable family of our native teachers. Flora C. Studley graduated from Palmer high school and from Bridgewater Normal, and has taught successfully in Springfield and elsewhere.

The records show that all these native teachers proved their right to teach by virtue of their marked success in the art. It may also be said in passing that Mason District, in all its school history, was fortunate in its teachers, for it has been a rare case when the school committee found adverse criticism necessary, which fact speaks well for teachers, pupils and parents, for the pupil reflects his home training in the school room.

Sixty years ago the salary of teachers in this district was very meager, being from three to five dollars per week for years, then slowly advancing to six, seven and to eight dollars in the last term; and yet judging from results they all gave their best because of their love for their avocation, deeming the marked advance of those under their care as a part of their reward.

The history of Mason District is not lacking in general interest. Nearly all its territory was located upon in 1728, and most of the homesteads remained in the line of the original families for many years.

It had its historic tavern built by Samuel Frost about 1760, the original settlers there in 1728. After a few years the house was conducted by Sylvanus Walker, who had served in the French and Indian War from Palmer and who later was made a Colonel by Washington in the Revolutionary service. Timothy Brainerd, who had served in the war from Connecticut, became a tenant of the place about 1781 and its owner in 1788, where he manufactured scythes and other useful articles with success. The farm remained in the family until a few years ago.

Col. Ebenezer Webber, another worthy soldier who had served five years in the war from Worthington, came to Palmer in 1792 and married the young widow of Francis Breckenridge, and lived in this district till his death in 1807. He lived on the farm now owned by Mrs. Bridget Kinnevan, where she has resided for more than fifty years.

Another historic place, now owned by Charles Forsman, was the original ministry farm of the town and was occupied by Revs. John Harvey and Robert Burns during their pastorates from 1734 to 1757, and by Rev. Moses Baldwin for a short time. The present farm house was built by Joshua Shaw in 1762, who had exchanged farms with Mr. Baldwin. This farm was purchased in 1886 by Mr. Forsman, who has taken pride in keeping the house in prime repair as well as the farm.

William Mason established a tannery in this district in 1790, which was continued in the family until 1840, where the late John O'Neil lived. Aside from the two industries mentioned, agriculture has claimed the attention of the people here.

Among the leading settlers in this district before 1800 we find the names of Brainerd, Breckenridge, Converse, Chapin, Cooley, Frost, Fenton, Fleming, Hamilton, King, Lamb, McNitt, Mason, Shaw, Walker and Webber. All these names are frequently found in our town records, and they all in their turn served well their day and generation in town, state, church and military affairs, a goodly number of whom found service in the Indian and Revolutionary wars. Their worthy Rochester, N. Y.—"I have a daughter 13 years old who has always been very healthy until recently when she complained of dizziness and cramps every month, so bad that I would have to keep her home from school and put her to bed to get relief.

"After giving her only two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound she is now enjoying the best of health. I cannot praise your Compound too highly. I want every good mother to read what your medicine has done for my child."—Mrs. RICHARD N. DUNHAM, 311 Exchange St., Rochester, N.Y.
Stoutsville, Ohio.—"I suffered from headaches, backache and was very irregular. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and before I had taken the whole of two bottles I found relief. I am only sixteen years old, but I have better health than for two or three years. I cannot express my thanks for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had taken other medicines but did not find relief."—Miss CORA B. FOSNAUGH, Stoutsville, Ohio, R.F.D., No. 1.
Hundreds of such letters from mothers expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for their daughters have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

bovine tubercle bacillus. At first Dr. Koch thought they were identical, but further study showed this to be incorrect. This matter was considered so important that a number of years ago the German, English and United States governments each appointed a commission of scientific experts to make an exhaustive study of these two types of bacilli and report to their respective governments. They found it very difficult to infect cattle with human tubercle bacilli; that bovine tubercle bacilli readily infected other cattle and animals; that little children can be, and are, infected by bovine bacilli in milk from tuberculosis cows; that these bacilli readily pass through the intestinal wall and invade glands and joints, causing many of the deformities we see among the children of the poor; and again, that bovine bacilli can cause tuberculous of the lungs in man, though this happens much less frequently than infection by the human type. Ten to twenty per cent of all cattle are tuberculous, a fact which amply justifies frequent state inspection and the destruction of any that are found to be tuberculous.

Tubercle bacilli are very tenacious of life. While cold retards the process of propagation and development, freezing does not certainly kill them. The only thing which can be depended upon to kill them is exposure to the direct rays of the sun and this requires from five to thirty-five hours or longer. The source of the bacilli is in the sputum expectorated from diseased lungs. If the sputum is carelessly thrown into a dark or damp place, the bacilli will remain alive for many months. Sputum which had been thrown upon a carpet and lain thirty-nine days was injected into a guinea pig and produced tuberculosis of the lungs. This is why we insist upon every consumptive, who is under control, having his own spit-cup and burning the contents.

Modes of infection are—1, congenital; 2, by respiration; 3, by the food we eat. The word congenital refers to the possibility of a child being born with the bacilli present in his body. When I was a boy it was the popular belief that every consumptive inherited the disease directly from his parents. That theory is not accepted to-day, at least not in the same degree. While it is admitted that the disease may be congenital, it is now believed that it happens rather infrequently. What the child does inherit in most cases from tuberculous parents is a debilitated constitution which makes him more susceptible to infection, especially during infancy, when he is in intimate association with his mother. In most cases of infection, it is believed that germs are inhaled in the air. This danger is recognized when we see the sputum carelessly thrown upon the sidewalk, street, floor of street cars, etc. When dried and ground to dust by the action of feet or wheels of vehicles, the wind carries into the air we breathe. When you reflect how often in summer the wind blows dust through the open doors of markets and grocery stores and sifts it over berries, meats, etc., exposed for sale, we understand how we may be infected by the food we eat.

Of all nationalities the Poles seem to have the greatest power of resistance to infection. The three races most susceptible to infection are the Indians, the Negroes and the Irish. The mortality among colored children under the age of fifteen is seven times that of white children, regardless of race. One-ninth to one-seventh of all deaths in civilized countries are reported due in some manner to tuberculosis. It is a conservative statement to say that 150,000 people die annually of the disease in this country.

After a brief description of the nature of tubercle, of nature's tremendous fight against the intrusion of the bacilli, the building up and subsequent breaking down of tubercle, manner in which the disease progresses, how hemorrhage occurs, etc., the speaker next referred to the revolution in the principles of treatment, which followed the discovery of the tubercle bacillus, and the general scope of the present open air or climatic mode of life for the consumptive.

What are the factors of an ideal climate for consumptives? They are four in number and well worth remembering: First, altitude; second, dryness of the air; third, coldness of the air; fourth, sunshine. Where can these climatic features be found in the greatest degree? The best place is the eastern slope of the Rockies in Colorado and New Mexico, because there is ample altitude, the air is cool and dry and the sun shines very nearly all the time. One of the most important phases of the general subject is the matter of exiling consumptives from home, business, income and friends to far distant localities. Only suitable cases should be sent, and it is imperative that they should be well housed and under competent medical supervision while there.

Unfortunately so many cases of tuberculosis occur among the poor, who cannot afford to go away, that the next practical question we have to consider is: What can be done in adapting the principles of climatic treatment to localities nearer home, and what provision has been made by the State to meet this emergency? The speaker then briefly described the sanatorium which the State of Massachusetts has established.

Historical Society Visits Schoolhouse.

ideals have not been lost by their descendants, for numbers of them still serve the public in our town or elsewhere with honor to themselves and credit to their ancestors.

In recalling these memories of the past we are saddened by the fact that not a single descendant of the first settlers remain in the Mason District; while some have gone far afield, others still remain in town, but the old homesteads are left to strangers. The fathers have gone and the later sons and daughters are no longer here. Many of the teachers who served here have gone to their last repose; many others have homes of their own to care for, and a goodly number are still wedded to their loved avocation with well-merited success. Three of the old colonial homes have fallen victims to the flames, and the Fenton homestead has suffered the same fate; but amid all the mutations of the passing years, surviving and binding the eighteenth to the twentieth century, we can say with Whittier:

Still sits the schoolhouse by the road,
A ragged beggar sunning;
Around it still the sunbeams grow,
And blackberry vines are running.
Within, the master's desk is seen,
Deep scarred by raps official,
The warping floor, the battered seats,
The jack-knife's carved initial:
The charcoal frescoes on its wall;
Its door's worn sill, betraying
The feet that, creeping slow to school,
Went storming out to playing.

A LARGE CONTRACT.

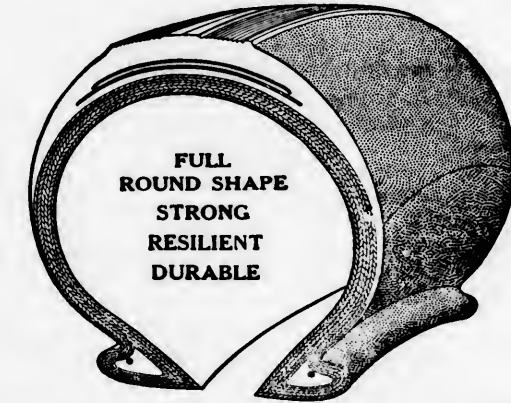

What J. P. Lynde Wants Every Person In Palmer To Do.

When J. P. Lynde, the enterprising druggist, first offered a 50 cent package of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half price, and guaranteed to return the money if it did not cure, he thought it probable from his experience with other medicines for these diseases that he would have a good many packages returned. But although he has sold hundreds of bottles, not one has been brought back.

To those suffering with dizziness, headache, poor digestion, constipation and straining, Dr. Howard's specific offers quick relief. It is an invaluable boon to all who feel uncomfortable after eating, and is to-day the popular dinner pill in all the large cities.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured
with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quick medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O. BECOME OUR REPRESENTATIVE.

A company having the highest reputation for reliability and liberality for over twenty years, can put on a number of men in unoccupied territory, training them in salesmanship, paying them a liberal commission on acceptance of orders. If written to at once can place inexperienced men and those having had experience in nursery stock or other lines. Unusual inducements to square, reliable men. ALLEN NICHOLSON CO., Rochester, N. Y.

New Drawing-In Machine Installed.

A new drawing-in machine has been installed in the Palmer Mill recently. This machine will do the work which is at present done by the girl hands and will do it in less time. Under the present method the warps have to be drawn three times, first through the harness, then through the reeds; with this machine the warp will be drawn through all three at once. It can be regulated to draw any kind of draft or pattern, runs from two to six harnesses and will draw 240 threads a minute. These machines are the property of the "American Warp Drawing Machine Co." of Dorchester and are leased to the different mills for trial. Some mills have installed as many as six and they are fast doing away with the employment of drawing-in hands.

A Mammoth Clearance Women's, Misses' and Children's Garments At 1-3 and 1-2 Original Prices

It's an event of great magnitude—of measured importance—and presents a price-saving opportunity rarely equaled in Garment Merchandising. The edict has gone forth to clear at any cost. Hundreds of coats, suits and dresses being ruthlessly sacrificed to attain the end. Never have we entered a season where price cutting has been so drastic. In many instances garments have been in our store but a few weeks. But we never do things by halves, so every one must go. Its timeliness too, lends emphasis to its importance, for

We've Placed This Event a Full Month Ahead of Usual Time . .

This gives the purchaser practically a full season's wear. In most of the outer garments light weight materials have been used, and you have the selection of 250 Cloth Suits, 400 Cloth and Silk Coats—300 Wool Skirts—250 Wash Dresses and 200 Silk Dresses. Surely an assortment of most unequaled proportions. So come.

Two Hundred and Fifty Suits

In Serges, Whipcords, Novelty Mixtures, Silks and White Serges

They are of the most desirable styles and are light-weight—enough so that they may be worn all through the summer without discomfort.

Barnum and Bailey Circus.

Grand Spectacle of "Cleopatra" Begins Regular Performance.

The Barnum and Bailey Greatest Show on Earth and newly added spectacle of "Cleopatra" will exhibit in Springfield next Monday. The spectacle in itself is an attraction that should fill all the big tent at each performance and draw thousands of visitors from the surrounding districts. It is beyond question the greatest production of its kind ever seen in America.

The world's most skillful scenic artists, costumers, property builders, chorus directors and stage managers were engaged to mount the production. A stage bigger than a hundred ordinary theatres was built and made portable so that it can be conveyed from town to town and erected each day in the main tent. The circus proprietors have thus made it possible for those who live in contributory towns, even farmers and their families, to see the magnificent wordless play that is an immense attraction in the largest cities. It is enacted with a cast of 1,250 actors, a grand opera chorus, an orchestra of 100 soloists, a ballet of 350 dancing girls, 650 horses, five herds of elephants, caravans of camels, and a trainload of special devices, costumes, and scenery and electrical mechanism for producing such effects as lightning, thunder, sand storms on the desert, volcanoes in action, sunrise, floods, and mirages.

The regular circus program is the finest Barnum and Bailey management has ever offered. Thrilling acts are presented by Katie Sandwina, the strongest and most beautiful woman before the public; Mae Wirth, the greatest of all riders; a company of Japanese wrestlers, athletes, swordsmen and jiu jitsu experts, Winston's riding seals, and Victor Codona, queen of high wire performers. There are 400 performers. In the menagerie will be found the only baby giraffe on exhibition in the world. There will be a parade at 10 o'clock in the forenoon.

PRACTICAL GIFT FOR BEGGAR

Stranger May Have Meant Well, but His Kindness Was Not in the Least Appreciated.

After suffering excruciating tortures for six months from doubling up a perfectly sound leg to fit on a wooden stump the crutch-bearing beggar finally succeeded in eliciting sympathy from a passerby. With kindly eyes the stranger eyed the cripple from top to toe.

"You seem to be in a pretty bad way," he said.

"Yes, sir," whined the cripple. "Couldn't be much worse."

"Too bad," said the sympathizer. "I must see if something can't be done for you."

Hope beat strongly in the beggar's breast and he murmured "God bless you," with unusual fervor.

Two days later the sympathizer appeared again and ostentatiously presented the cripple with the materialization of his benevolent intentions. He gave him a new crutch.

HAPPY WOMEN

Plenty of Them in Palmer, and Good Reason for It.

Wouldn't any woman be happy, After years of backache suffering, Days of misery, nights of unrest. The distress of urinary troubles, When she finds freedom. Many readers will profit by the following.

Mrs. D. H. Barnes, Main St., Monson, Mass., says: "I gladly verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills given in 1906. I had considerable trouble from backache, especially when I went up or down stairs. I was very restless and in the morning felt tired and unrefreshed. Reading about Doan's Kidney Pills I decided to give them a trial and the first few doses convinced me that they were a remedy of merit. The contents of two or three boxes removed the pain and lameness and restored me to good health. This remedy has been used by another member of my family and in that case the results were satisfactory."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—DOAN'S—and take no other.

HAMPDEN.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace C. Clement are now occupying the house in Hampden which he recently purchased of the heirs of Mrs. Emily Stoddard.

C. W. Richards of Springfield has been making extensive repairs on the house which he recently purchased. A piazza will be built on the front of the house.

The closing exercises of the high school were held yesterday afternoon in the town hall. A reception was held from 4 to 6 and refreshments were served.

"Made to walk on" is what the manufacturers say of Campbell's Varnish Stains for staining and varnishing Floors, Woodwork and Furniture. Well, if they will stand being walked upon, they must be made from a varnish that is all right. Why not try a can? For sale by C. N. Ellithorpe & Son.

The way to judge tobacco is to smoke it. A fancy package makes it cost more but doesn't make it taste any better. You can't buy a sweeter, richer, more delicious smoke than

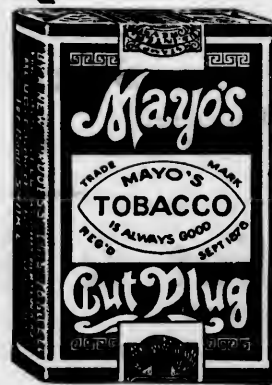

Mayo's Cut Plug

It costs only 5 cents, but don't let that prejudice you. It is the saving in the package which makes possible the price. For 37 years hard-to-please smokers have preferred this tobacco.

If you try the sample we will gladly send you free, you will see why. Just mail the coupon.

"A Splendid Chew"

Mayo's Cut Plug also comes in 10c. cloth pouches.
